Mayor Mann-dated by voters Four aldermen are swept from office

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Mayor Theodore Mann topped political newcomer Bruce Marquis in 27 of the city's 32 precincts in yesterday's city election to easily win a fourth term in office.

Slightly more than an hour after the polls closed at 8 p.m. Mann and his wife Florence strode triumphantly into a crowded basement ballroom at Sidney Hill Country Club to announce his victory, which was backed by 67 percent of the voters.

Mann, a 20-year veteran of Newton political wars, not only captured 27 precincts but led in each of the city's eight wards. Marquis took 33 percent of the 20,530 votes cast (6,676) compared to 22 percent in the September preliminary.

The mayoral triumph represented the widest margin of victory since incumbent Monte Basbas, aiming for his second two-year stint, defeated George Mitchell in 1967 by taking 73 percent of the 22,981 votes cast. In 1977, Mann's last mayoral race, he defeated former state Rep. Peter Harrington by 3,000 votes as 25,000 people went to the polls.

Mann, as in his past runs for office, retained his solid base of support on the city's south side capturing 78 percent of the more than 10,000 votes cast. On the north side, where Marquis won his five precincts, including three in Ward 3, Mann remained on top with 58 percent of the vote.

Standing with his immediate family at his side, Mann told his supporters that "this is a time we have to rejoice and meet the challenge ahead."

"They (the voters) have demonstrated by their vote that they are supportive of the kinds of programs that this administration has put together and the way things have been handled," said the 59-year-old Mann between handshakes. "The dramatic part of it is that every single ward in the city showed tremendous support."

Marquis called Mann at 10 p.m. to offer his congratulations and said later he was "not surprised by the numbers."

"I think that this election shows that my opponent is a very

Four aldermen are swept from office

NEWTON - Four aldermen, 20-year veteran Alderman Ernie Dietz, six-year veteran Alderman Donald Budge, freshman Alderman Robert Katz and two-term Alderman James Miller, were swept from office Tuesday.

Harold Levinsky, 23, a part-time journalist, edged Dietz by a slim 139 votes for the ward 6 alderman's seat. Levinsky received 1050 votes or 54 percent of votes cast to Dietz's 911 votes or 46 percent of the votes cast.

Lane Sofman, a dentist who has never held elected office, defeated Budge by 404 votes to take one of the two city-wide ward 4 alderman at large seats. Richard McGrath, eight-year veteran alderman and former state representative, topped the ward 4 at large ticket with an impressive 33 percent of the votes cast or 8,258 votes.

Budge received 5,698 votes (23 percent) to 6,102 votes (25 percent) for Sofman. Mark Golden, a sales representative, finished a distant fourth with 4,338 (17 percent).

Marcy Richmond, an attorney who won the preliminary election by 322 votes, maintained her stronghold and defeated Katz by 215 votes. Richmond received 1496 votes (54 percent) while Katz received 1281 votes or 46 percent of the votes cast.

In an unusual race with three incumbents squaring off for the two city wide ward 5 alderman at large seats, Ward 3 Alderman Paul Daley defeated incumbent James Miller by 806 votes. Incumbent Paul Coletti won his third term receiving 7,550 votes or 37 percent of the votes. Daley came in second with 34 percent of the votes or 6,911. Miller received 6,105 votes (29 percent).

An ecstatic Levinsky celebrated the victory at his home with a number of friends and supporters. "I was confident the last few days because of all the people helping me," he said. "I would like to publicly thank all those that helped me."

Dietz accepted the loss like a true statesman. "This kid put on a very aggressive campaign," he explained. "I think he deserves it. He ran an excellent campaign and it paid off."

"The people in my ward have honored me for 20 years," he explained. "It's asking a lot to hold down a seat for 20 years. I am very grateful to the people of the ward. After all there is such a thing as youth and age."

WARD 4 AT LARGE

Sofman, one of the six CONCERN endorsed candidates, celebrated at a friend's house. When asked if he felt the CONCERN endorsement was a major factor, Sofman replied: "I don't know, but it sure helped."

"I think it went exactly as I expected," he said. "I am just excited about the victory. I am looking forward to working on the board and hope to do a good job for the people of Newton."

A disappointed Budge received the results at City Hall. When asked if he felt the CONCERN endorsement for Sofman led to his defeat Budge said: "I don't know." Budge said that he did not know if he would continue to be active in local politics.

Mark Golden, 31, a sales representative, finished a distant fourth in the ward 4 at large race with 4,338 votes in his first run for elected office. "Concern definitely helped Sofman," Golden said. "I hope he (Sofman) is concerned with more than just CONCERN's interests."

WARD 8 ALDERMAN

Marcy Richmond declared her victory at 9 p.m. before a noisy crowd of more than 60 supporters at her Christina Street home. "I want to thank all my family, neighbors and good friends who made this possible for all of ward 8," she said. "Thank you all!"

Richmond improved on her figures in the preliminary in every precinct. As supporters toasted with champagne in paper cups, Richmond said: "My goal is to serve my constituents in ward 8 and the city to the best of my ability."

Jerry Wise, Richmond's campaign manager, claimed CONCERN's endorsement of Richmond had no effect. "We knew if Marcy continued her door to door meeting people we would maintain the votes received in the preliminary," Wise said, adding, "There is nothing like victory."

Katz conceded the election shortly after 9 p.m. with a congratulatory phone call to Richmond. "She worked like the devil," said Katz. "She ran a good campaign." Katz said that he worked harder in this election than when he upset favorite Alvin Mandell two years ago by a slim 87 votes.

"I worked very hard these last two years," explained a disheartened Katz. "I enjoyed helping and meeting people. I do intend to stay in the political arena. It's a tough business. It's a money business. But my new friendships are great and strong enough to persuade me to continue in this field. I wish Marcy the best."

WARD 5 ALDERMAN AT LARGE

Daley, a real estate broker and present ward 3 alderman, moved into ward 5 earlier this year to set the stage for the contest between the three incumbents.

"I think it's a tremendous victory," said a thrilled Daley who had never run in a city wide aldermanic election. "I worked harder than anybody else in this campaign. Hard work pays off."

"It's rewarding when people let you know you are doing a good job," he added. Daley blitzed the south side with a leaflet drop and ran a number of ads to improve his city wide visibility for the contest.

Daley's victory in part could be due to recent criticism of Miller for his excessive absenteeism at committee meetings. Miller, a project manager for Data General, sits on three aldermanic committees, but has neglected to attend 41 of 68 committee meetings over the past two years. Miller was unavailable for comment.

A confident Coletti, who also topped the ticket in the 1979 city election, received word of his victory at City Hall where he sat at a table with his wife and father. "I am happy and pleased," he said. "This is just another vote of confidence."

Gentile, Jones win school seats

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Leonard Gentile swept the north side of the city by a stunning 2-1 margin and held his own on the south side to win the Ward 1 School Committee seat over Jonathan Brant.

Katherine Jones, the only incumbent challenged in the Tuesday elections, easily won over challenger Kenneth Hartford in the Ward 2 race with a total of 8461 votes compared with 5256 for Hartford. The other six School Committee races were uncontested.

Citywide, the final tally for Gentile was 8737 while Brant received 6603 votes.

Gentile, a native of Newton, was elated by the victory and said he is "just looking forward to getting to work as a School Committee member."

"I believe that my wife Susan and I worked hard and that everyone associated with the campaign worked hard," Gentile said while celebrating from 20 Emerald St. "I've never had as many people do as many things for me as I have during this campaign."

Overall, Gentile received approximately 57 percent of the votes cast in the contest for the seat vacated in mid-term by Howard Spergel. Since the seat was vacated, Gentile's term will begin 10 days after the election rather than in January.

In a repeat of the three-way preliminary, Gentile's greatest support was from the north side of the city where in Wards 1-4 he received a total of 5395 votes compared with 2413 for Brant.

Voters who supported David Wilbourn, the loser by 391 votes to Brant in the preliminary, appeared somewhat split in their support of Brant and Gentile, the candidate endorsed by Wilbourn.

Wilbourn, who had received steady support throughout the wards, won by a fair margin in three precincts on the north side in the preliminary. Voters this time around supported Brant, the CONCERN-endorsed candidate,

And now, the world's smallest tuba player

Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS—When Patricia Feig, 25, picks up her 3 1/2 foot tuba, people can't resist asking her why she didn't choose the piccolo instead.

Feig is a petite 4' 10" tall, and some people think she looks a little silly hidden behind the enormous brass instrument.

But Feig, a member of the Boston Tuba Four, takes her music playing very seriously.

"I love it," exclaims Feig, a 1974 graduate of Newton North High School. "I love the sound of the instrument."

Feig isn't the only one who loves sound of the tuba. In fact, it was John Harper, Newton Superintendent of Music, who suggested to Feig that she form an all-tuba band.

Feig, who had just finished a four-year tour of the United States, was thrilled with the idea. She contacted another tuba player, Gregory Fritze, 27, who she knew while both were in college studying music.

Soon the pair had contacted two other tubists, Stuart Gunn, 37, and David Lindsey, 35, both professional players in Boston. In May, Feig created the Boston Tuba Four.

It's ironic that people joke that Feig should be playing a piccolo, because at one time she was a flute player. The tuba playing started as a joke.

As a high school student who played flute in the band, a spunky Feig jumped at the chance when the band leader challenged anyone to play the tuba. That was the end of her flute playing and the beginning of an extensive tuba career, which includes playing with symphony orchestras across the country.

Beginning Nov. 17, Newton residents will have a chance to hear Feig and Boston Tuba Four at a concert at the Hyde Elementary School, the first of 17 performances sponsored by the Newton Creative Arts Committee.

With Fritze and Gunn on bass tubas, Feig on the contrabass tuba and Lindsey playing tenor, the group plans to perform a variety of jazz, contemporary and classical music.

Feig, a Boston University graduate, has no thoughts about changing instruments. She enjoys pursuing her tuba career with the Boston Tuba Four and the Atlantic Brass Quartet. Feig is also getting a big out of advertising herself as the "world's smallest tuba player."

Local veterans remember the eleventh hour, 1918

By Donna Lombardi

AUBURNDALE—Harry Kaplan couldn't celebrate the joyful eleventh hour, when the world suddenly stopped to rejoice in the signing of the armistice.

Confined to a bed in a Paris hospital, Kaplan, now 87 years old, watched as soldiers marched past him.

"They were marching through the hospital, marching joyfully and singing," remembers Kaplan, an Auburndale resident who earned several medals of honor for service during World War I.

"Everything stopped," continues Kaplan, gesturing with his hands. "Everybody celebrated in all kinds of ways."

That was the first Armistice Day as Kaplan remembers it.

Today, that day is still celebrated to mark the signing of the armistice, ending WWI. It was 1918, the eleventh hour, of the eleventh day of the eleventh month which became Armistice Day.

Over the years, its meaning has been broadened as an event to honor all war veterans, not just those who served during WWI, and it is renamed Veterans Day.

In the past, Veterans Day, like other legal holidays, was celebrated on a Monday. But this year, the holiday will be acknowledged on its original day, Nov. 11, the date the armistice was signed.

An effort by all the veterans organizations forced officials to change the holiday to its original date.

Even the men and women who didn't serve during the first world war think it's important to remember the original meaning.

For the WWI veterans who experienced the first Veterans Day, the holiday is just as important.

"There's not very many veterans of World War I left," says Israel Trieger, 86, the oldest member of Post 211 Jewish War Veterans.

"But people shouldn't forget."

Trieger, a past commander of the post, was in the air corps, studying motors at Princeton University and was preparing to go overseas when news of the armistice arrived.

"I think we were all very happy," he remembers. "Everybody was joyful. All work ceased. It was a glorious time," says Trieger.

"We don't forget it," says Harry Siegal, 88, who was an infantryman with the 82nd division of the 301st regiment.

Siegal was on a train on his way up to the front when the armistice was signed. "We turned around and went back," says Siegal.

Siegal remembers the trench warfare, when, he said, if you were lucky, you went to the reserve line.

"We'd stay (in the trench) about 10 days, then go to a relief center, where you'd get a cup of coffee and a shower."

"There was another kind of warfare," Siegal continues. "The French had cannons and they'd shoot a barrage. We'd go forward as they were shooting over our heads."

But Siegal can laugh now at some of his experiences. "We had a scare," says Siegal, as he talked about the ride across the English Channel. "We thought we spotted a submarine, but it was a whale!"

Kaplan received a divisional citation and medal for running across an open field of a French forest as German soldiers shot at him. "I was 22-years-old and I could run!"

Kaplan succeeded in delivering a message to a captain, but was wounded by a German soldier while crossing a river, and later received a silver star, the Purple Heart and a medal from the French.

All three men agree that veterans should be remembered on Nov. 11, but stress the reality of WWI. "It was a crude, rough war," says Kaplan, adding that he thinks, "People in the world today don't have thoughts about any war. And it's a good thing, because nobody wins."

Trash amendment approved by board

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Landlords who were not getting charged the full trash collection fee because of a poorly worded city ordinance are going to have to dig into their pockets for more money.

The Board of Aldermen Monday night unanimously approved an amendment that will correct an inequity in the ordinance which resulted in some apartment buildings or group of condominiums to be charged substantially less than other buildings of the same size.

Buildings with a single address for all apartments, similar in size to buildings with separate addresses for each apartment, were previously not being charged by the unit. Under the amendment passed by aldermen, each unit will be charged the $2 weekly collection fee.

The ordinance requires all apartments, condominiums, and commercial facilities and institutions in the city to pay the fee. Many aldermen have maintained that the law is discriminatory because renters are charged a fee and single family homeowners are not.

As a result, the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee is planning to review the trash collection fee structure and whether the fee should be eliminated.

Department of Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas has contended that the law is not discriminatory because the apartment house collection requires different municipal truck. The apartment collection requires a rear end loader rather than a side loader.

The passage of the amendment comes after Alderman Richard McGrath chartered it at the board's last meeting. Many aldermen were confused at the last meeting because of the lack of a written report on the amendment.

Aldermen also approved $3,000 for legal fees to battle a proposed rate increase by Boston Edison. The legal battle is being waged by a single consumer advocate group and includes a number of cities and towns.

Drinan does not respond to charges

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Former Congressman Father Robert Drinan Monday was unable to immediately answer questions on the letter he sent to selected voters in the city endorsing candidates handpicked by an aggressive liberal political lobby.

Contacted in Washington, Drinan said that he did not have time to immediately answer questions on the letter which has incited charges of "McCarthyism" and "fascism."

Text of Drinan's letter endorsing CONCERN candidates

Dear Friend:
During my last years in the U.S. Congress, I realized how well organized and how ominous the New Right, the Moral Majority, and the special interest lobbies have become. And I can think of no time in recent history when it is so important for the voice of reason to be heard in local as well as in federal government.

As each day passes we realize that more and more attempts are made by the organized Right to impose its self-defined sense of righteousness into many areas of our lives, including local government and our public schools. In these difficult times, elected officials at all levels of government must be able to deal effectively with these present challenges if we are to preserve the fundamental quality of education.

Censorship of books and teaching materials used in public schools and mandating school prayer are among the major objectives of the New Right. For example, recent studies conducted by national publishing and library associations reveal that, under ed the letter by Drinan a "last minute attempt at character assassination." Furthermore, he called Drinan "a puppet" of CONCERN.

Many candidates and public officials charged that the letter implies that candidates not endorsed by CONCERN are associated with the Moral Majority.

Alderman Carol Ann Shea, who is unopposed in today's election, said the letter by omission "slanders" candidates. "I was really outraged," she said, noting that censorship and the threat of the Moral Majority is not an issue in the campaign. Alderman Ethel Sheehan, also unopposed in the election, said the letter "impugns the character" of candidates not endorsed by CONCERN.

"I find it very distasteful," agreed Alderman Rodney Barker. "I don't think it is right to imply, which it does clearly, that anybody not endorsed by CONCERN has certain attitudes and values. For Newton, it is a very divisive piece of political propaganda."

Barker said that he was "surprised" Drinan wrote the letter.

Late letter was an unfair move

A letter by former Congressman Father Robert Drinan sent out late last week urging votes for certain candidates created an eleventh hour campaign controversy. Newton voters yesterday decided contested races for mayor, 2 school committee members and a number of aldermen.

CONCERN, a liberally-oriented citizen group, requested the letter from Father Drinan and paid for its mailing. The Drinan letter warned us of the threat of the New Right and the Moral Majority and urged residents to vote for CONCERN endorsed candidates.

How ironic that Father Drinan appeared to be using some of the very tactics that the Moral Majority practices with adept skill.

The Drinan letter starts with a warning to Newton residents on the danger of the New Right and Moral Majority. He tells Newton voters of censorship and the banning of teaching materials and then goes on to urge them to vote for CONCERN endorsed candidates - implying that candidates not endorsed by the organization were either too weak to battle the holy war pressed by the New Right or were in cahoots with the Moral Majority.

That may not have been the intent when Father Drinan wrote the letter, but it is all too easy to interpret the letter this way. Some even branded this tactic of innuendo "fascism" and "McCarthyism."

We do not object to Father Drinan's right or CONCERN's right to endorse candidates. We do it regularly. But when we endorse, as we did last week, we try to be as positive as possible.

When did Drinan ever hear one of these candidates speak? Did he ever interview any of the candidates or is he simply taking the word of CONCERN that these are the candidates we should choose.

CONCERN did not interview incumbents because they felt aldermen and school committee members must stand on their past record. Certainly, they must. But a politician's stand changes.

Why not give some of the incumbents a chance to express their views? It is also curious that the Drinan letter was sent basically to the city's southside, while another letter, stressing more conservative tones and signed by others, was sent to the northside. That leaves CONCERN open to charges of playing divisive politics.

The group has also refused to tell how the organization reached a decision on whom to endorse or exactly how many members are in the group. This sort of secrecy detracts from any grassroots citizen action group.

CONCERN has practiced the art of labeling candidates with impressive results in past elections. In the 1979 election, the political lobby, organized in 1977, labeled candidates as posing a "serious threat to our schools...inexperienced and ill qualified."

No group has a quarter on righteousness. Father Drinan's own letter put it well: "As each day passes we realize that more and more attempts are made by the Organized Right to impose its self-defined sense of righteousness into many areas of our lives, including local government and our public schools."

Too bad he doesn't believe the same thing applies to himself and the organized left.

My turn

Some thoughts in passing

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

Some thoughts in passing...
City Clerk Ed English is a helluva nice guy. Despite his differences with Bruce Marquis, Mark White can never justify his endorsement of Mayor Theodore Mann.

Mark White is a good alderman. James Miller is not.

Bruce Marquis is right - Newton residents did not deserve the new taxes implemented this fiscal year - including fees for everything from recreational activities to licenses, a sewer tax, and increased parking meter fees.

Newton will collect more in taxes this year - the first year of Proposition 2½ - than last year.

The Bruins look good. The Patriots do not. City Hall is missing something without Audrey Hickman at the front desk. Hickman was laid off because of Proposition 2½.

Bruce Marquis deserves credit for defeating a veteran alderman in his first try for public office. Mayor Theodore Mann has the experience, but has a lot to learn about people.

The City Hall cafeteria - on the bottom floor of the building - is a good deal. The MBTA is not. It's too bad the A's didn't make it to the World Series.

Walter Hill is a good director. You learn more by walking the streets than by hanging around City Hall.

Newton residents are more concerned about state and federal politics than the local scene.

City Election Commissioner Alan Licarie knows more about getting elected here than any politician in the city. He could make a very good living as a political consultant.

Most aldermanic and school committee candidates don't deal with issues even when pressed. We need better leaders at the local level.

The School Committee budget should be reviewed carefully by aldermen even if the School Department thinks fiscal autonomy is still in tact.

Finnegan Associates, the firm conducting revaluation, should have known when the contract was signed that a city wide master assessment list to aid homeowners in appeals would have to be released before the hearing process. A simple paragraph in the contract would have saved a lot of confusion.

The Newton Board of Aldermen is often a good example of a bureaucracy that wastes time and gets little done. But that is democracy. Twenty four aldermen is not too many.

The city ordinance granting renters a two year grace period before they can be evicted because of condominium conversion is a damn good law. Too bad it's too late.

The Attorney General's Office must have better things to do than harass charitable organizations (The Newton Kiwanis) dedicated to aiding underprivileged children.

The estimated tax bills sent out last week are unfair to taxpayers.

One of the most alarming problems facing the city is the increasing number of burglaries.

Police Chief William Quinn is a bigger politician than either Mayor Mann or Bruce Marquis. Mayor Mann controls more than a few votes on the Board of Aldermen.

Circus days and basement praise

CIRCUS DAYS

The folks over at the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association have done it again. Only recently they feted a group of senior citizens and now they've shuttled 55 underprivileged New ton area kids to Boston to see the afternoon show of the Barnum and Bailey Circus.

As Dave Berkeley, assistant co-treasurer of the group said, "They loved it. They really loved it. They talked about the clowns all the way back and they probably talked about it at school."

The kids not only got to see the clowns and lions and tigers and bears (oh my!) but they were also treated to a hardy lunch that day.

The folks with the NCCPA deserve a lot of credit for such activities, Graphically speaking, and as Berkeley noted, they get a lot of satisfaction from helping out.

"The big joy is that it's something you do for the kids that they really enjoy," the said. "You only hope more people see things like this and you hope more can be done for the children."

"It's people to people that's important," he told Graphically speaking. "We want people to realize there's a need to help a lot of people out there."

Well said.

WELCOME HOME, BARNEY

Congressman Barney Frank has moved up in the world.

As of this past Monday he packed up his Fourth Congressional District office (that's us, folks) and moved from Waltham to West Newton, at 437 Cherry St. The office is right near the Washington and Cherry Sts. intersection.

The new phone number is 332-3920.

Jim Dorsey, former UPI State House reporter who now works as Barney's press secretary, says the move from Totten Pond Rd. in Waltham should make it easier from a public transportation point of view, for Fourth District constituents to see the congressman.

NOTES FROM THE BASEMENT

Graphically speaking wouldn't want you to see our basement but Henry M. Sugarman of Longfellow Rd. in Newton spent most of the last 53 years in the basement (not ours) and he should be darn proud of it.

On Tuesday, Nov. 10 Sugarman will celebrate his retirement from Filene's Department Store after 53 years of devoted service.

Sugarman has worked in Filene's world-famous basement store in the Men's Dept. and the number of customers who enjoyed his attention and service is, undoubtedly, countless.

Back in 1978 he celebrated his 50th anniversary with the firm and at that time he was presented with a special plaque, at Filene's Service Recognition dinner, which read: "Henry is tops with his customers, who call him from all over the country when they are in the market for a new suit."

Over the years he earned a reputation as an outstanding salesman and a real pro.

So on Nov. 10 some 150 of Henry's friends, associates and family members will gather to celebrate at his retirement party at the Sidney Hill CC.

Harry Lewis, a colleague and friend of Henry's, is chairing the event.

Out of the most famous basement in the world and into the spotlight.

Congratulations.

BOOK SOLDIERS

Okay, all you bibliophiles.

The Friends of the Newton Free Library need some volunteers so please step forward.

The Friends are already planning for the annual book sale in April (and we haven't even planned our Christmas shopping yet) and, seriously, they need some volunteers.

As one Friend said, "Get in on the ground floor - the basement, even. Give us an arm and a leg up! Help!"

If you can give an arm or leg, or some time, call 244-6397 or the library, at 552-7145.

KEEP ON TRUCKING

A belated congratulations to Adelaide Smith of Chestnut St., West Newton, for her victory in the women's master division of the 3rd annual Lite Beer road race held in Boston.

Her time, for the six-mile course, was 50:15. Whew!

The race, a benefit for the Boston Evening Medical Center, saw Olympic gold medalist Frank Shorter lead the field of 600 runners to the tape in a time of 28:52.

Ms. Smith earned a trophy for her effort. A good time, we're sure, and a very very good time.

Resident voices his concern on pound seizure law

To the editor:
I am writing to address one of the most controversial issues in our state. The issue is Pound Seizure and it affects every man, woman, child, cat and dog residing in Massachusetts.
Pound Seizure is a law (Chapter 49A) whereby municipal animal shelters are required to relinquish unclaimed animals to licensed research institutions upon request. The only restriction is that the animal must be held for the required time limit, which varies from ten to fourteen days.

These lost and abandoned companion animals then become research subjects and are used in a vast array of experiments. Some of these experiments cause no direct physical pain while others can only be called torture. While it is not claimed at the animal shelter, there is no excuse for the abuse they are forced to endure once they are surrendered to a research institution. This system as it exists is a perversion of the concept under which animal shelters were founded.

Pounds or shelters are designed for three purposes: 1) To reunite lost animals with their owners; 2) To place lost and abandoned animals in new homes; 3) To humanely euthanize unclaimed animals. Pounds were not conceived to serve as clearing houses or supply depots for research.
Most states have outlawed Pound Seizure and very few towns in Massachusetts actually comply with this cruel and barbaric piece of legislation. Even though

Newton does not at present sell or relinquish pound animals to research, there is no guarantee that it won't do so in the future. There is a bill in the House Committee on Counties known as H. 1245. This bill would put an end to the use of unclaimed pets in research once and for all. H. 1245 would not only take away the researchers' right to requisition pound animals, but it would also amend our antiquated dog laws to prevent dog officers, pounds and municipalities from voluntarily selling former pets to research institutions. This is not an attempt to prevent the use of animals in research, as the advocates of Pound Seizure would have you believe. If dogs and cats are needed let the researchers use animals bred for that purpose, but don't allow them to use former pets who are accustomed to the freedom and love of a home environment.

There is a statewide grassroots campaign being launched to stop Pound Seizure and get H. 1245 passed. This movement is comprised of volunteers contributing their time, money and energy throughout the state. Anyone wishing to help in any way should call or write to The New England Anti-Vivisection Society, 9 Park St., Boston, Mass. 02108, Tel. 523-6020.

If your dog or cat became lost it could lose its life in a research laboratory. Please help.
Sean A. Murphy

James Miller explains his reasons for absences

To the editor:
I congratulate Jonathan Greenspan and you for the articles on absenteeism of members of the Board of Aldermen from full board meetings and from committee meetings.
I attest to the seriousness to which Alderwoman Ethel Sheehan handles her responsibilities on the board. I also attest to her disappointment that other members of the board do not share nearly the same degree of responsibility.
My one regret is not that I had the worst record of attendance at committee meetings but that I appeared pompous and self-indulgent. What I felt was indignation about how the board conducted its business.

My absenteeism was not neglect. It was willful in that I was in silent protest against a clear majority who were undertaking what I considered improper actions and in some instances, unnecessary browbeating of some city officials.
I had fully expected that under the due process of the rules of the board I would be compelled to explain my continued absences from committee meetings. That did not happen.
Alderman Ernest Dietz, chairman of the Committee on Administration and Planning, may deserve an explanation. I had on numerous occasions relayed my reasons for absences. A member of his committee thought by reasons were sufficient.

I am aware that there exists serious differences of points of view between the Newton Graphic and me, but your reporting is a point of agreement. I commend you for your efforts to report the activities of the Board of Aldermen and for other news of community wide interest.
James W. Miller
Alderman at Large, Ward 5

Reader concerned over letter

To the editor:
(The following is an open letter to former congressman Fr. Robert Drinan.)
Dear Father Drinan,

From 1973 when I moved to Newton until last December when you left public office, I was proud to have you as my congressman. I enthusiastically supported your re-elections with both money (when I could) and work. Today I am still proud of your record in Washington and your continued outspoken positions on human rights and sanity in foreign policy.
It is in the context of my great admiration for you that I am truly aghast at your letter, on behalf of Concern, which endorses candidates in Newton's November election. I cannot believe that you wrote such a letter. I have tried to convince myself that it is someone else's hand and just your absent-minded signature. The letter's innuendo and thinly-veiled accusations against those candidates not endorsed by Concern is reminiscent of the very tactics you so often speak against. Your letter sounds more like Joseph McCarthy than Robert Drinan. Just which Newton candidates do you think are connected with the Moral Majority? Just which candidates running for which offices are trying to censor books like Stuart Little and the American Heritage Dictionary?
I too have watched Concern for five years. In the election four years ago I worked through Concern to support progressive candidates for School Committee. Two years ago with waning enthusiasm I again acquiesced in Concern's growing power and worked with them to back School Committee candidates. I confess that I was thoroughly embarrassed at the final stroke of that campaign which was another last minute endorsement letter full of divisive slurs and low level innuendo. I had hoped that such tactics were a one time occurrence. In the current campaign what I have become alarmed at (to use your own phrase) is Concern's "imposing its self-defined sense of righteousness into many areas of our lives including local government and our public schools." There have been no large mailings or public announcements delineating the issues from Concern's point of view. There is no record as to why Concern has chosen certain candidates over others. The organization seems content with a Louise Day Hicks, style of tactic, though on the other end of the political spectrum, using buzz words and an attitude of 'you know where we stand.'

I have nothing against any of the Concern candidates. In fact I have worked hard for several of them. But I also have nothing against any of those candidates running in opposition to the Concern slate. The ones I know personally are fine and decent people who have my respect though not necessarily my support. Your atrocious letter and the tactics of numerous Concern members have done great damage to the reputations of those people who have taken the time and effort to give us, the people of Newton, a choice on election day. A mass-mailed letter arriving Oct. 30, gives victims little chance at self defense before the electorate goes to the polls.

In this year when involved citizens have shed tears about the apparent apathy of the citizenry and individuals' lack of interest in running for office, who needs to look must past your letter and similar tactics before he or she realizes why many good people are reluctant to put in the time and effort for office in Newton if they cannot be fairly confident of the support or at least the neutrality of Concern? What citizen in his right mind wishes to be the victim of slick letters and rumor campaigns?

There are some people of good intention within Concern; others I would charitably call misguided. To both groups I would say that it is time to call it quits. The voters of Newton are bright enough to decide for themselves who is best qualified for office. We do not need letters which tell us nothing about the candidates or the issues but merely present the imprimatur of the self-appointed guardians of Newton's political scene on a list of selected favorites.

To you personally, Father Drinan, I would urge you to keep up your work on the national scene but I would strongly advise you, however, to look much more closely at the local scene in the future before you jump in with such abandon. You have ill-served the cause of a fairly contested election in the city of Newton.

Sincerely yours,
Anne M. Lerner

Dear Ed: Maybe you goofed

To the editor:
(The following was submitted as an open letter to Governor Edward King.)

Thank You, Governor King:
Thank you, Governor King, for your steadfastness in protecting the Commonwealth from the ravages threatened by the Bottle Bill. Thank you for assuring that our streets will continue to be littered with broken glass. Thank you for giving us a new exercise in logic: to prove the proposition that it is more work to carry empty bottles back to the market than it is to carry full ones home.

Thank you also for assuring that there will be an adequate supply of empty beverage cans for us to kick around on the trolley platform while we wait for the MBTA which, thanks also to you, arrives with the rarity of an endangered species.

And finally, thank you for giving us something to look forward to during the winter, namely the election next year, at which time we will have an opportunity to vote you out of office.

Upper Falls resident notes her concern on microwaves, cable

To the editor:
Long term exposure to relatively low levels of microwave radiation can cause cataracts, personality changes and birth defects.
One microwatt per square centimeter is the maximum level that many scientists feel is safe. It is also the maximum level of exposure allowed by several European countries.
According to EPA Technical Report EPA-520/2-77-008 the microwave exposure in the Needham Heights area is 1.2 microwatts per square centimeter. This is slightly more than the amount measured above and was the highest measured amount in the Boston area.

Because Newton Upper Falls is surrounded by the TV transmitters in much the same way as Needham Heights is, figures for Needham Heights give a good approximation of the microwave exposure in Upper Falls.
The full extent of the dangers of long term exposure to low levels of microwave radiation is not known. For this reason it is essential for the health of the people of the Newton Upper Falls-Needham Heights area that the tower for Newton's cable TV be built as far as possible from the Needham Heights-Newton Upper Falls area!

Correction
In last week's Newton Graphic, Rep. David Cohen was cited as endorsing both Board of Aldermen candidates Marcy Richmond and Robert Katz in the Ward 8 race.
Cohen had endorsed Richmond, not Katz. Katz was endorsed by former Newton State Rep. David Mofenson.
The Graphic regrets any inconvenience caused by the error.

Kiwanis Club is fuming over house raffle hassle

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer
NEWTON — The Newton Kiwanis Charitable Foundation, forced to suspend ticket sales in the raffle of a $64,000 Plymouth home for charity, is fuming mad at the Attorney General's Office.

The organization has been hampered by requests from the Attorney General's Office since the raffle began, according to Robert W. Tennant, an attorney for the Kiwanis.

It appears that the fundraising effort, which could have netted the organization dedicated to aiding underprivileged children $40,000, will be called off. If the Kiwanis do not sell 700 tickets by

Nov. 19, the organization has reserved the right to cancel the raffle and return ticketholder's money.

"It has been a nightmare," said a frustrated Tennant. "It has been so many headaches when all we were trying to do is a good deed."

"They have killed ticket sales because of the bad publicity," he said. "It is extremely likely that we will not sell a minimum number of tickets."

The Attorney's General's Office is investigating the raffle for violations of the state's gambling laws. The office appears to be particularly concerned that Kiwanis do not clearly or legally own the Plymouth house. The Attorney General requested that ticket sales be suspended while documents pertaining to the raffle are reviewed.

"We asked for their help to avoid these pitfalls in the beginning," Tennant said. "The Attorney General has created their own monster by not promulgating rules for the raffles. In all these raffles, I don't think any organization owned the house outright."

Catherine Hantzis, head of the Attorney General's Public Charities Division, said that the Attorney General does not have the authority to "promulgate rules" on the house raffles.

She said the Attorney General is not charged to regulate gambling events and has only the power to sue organizations or charities that violate the gambling laws.

"They are supposed to be there to assist the public," Tennant said. "Here we are trying to aid charities; we asked for their assistance and they haven't given us any help."

"We are not empowered to give legal advice to charities," Hantzis explained. "Actually they should be relying on their own counsel."

"One of the problems with these house raffles is that they are entirely unregulated under state law," said Hantzis, noting that the gambling laws are open to interpretation. She said that the Attorney General has not ruled out the possibility of requesting that the legislature enact a state law regulating the house raffles.

When asked if she believed that the Attorney General's Office had hampered the fund raising effort by the Kiwanis, Hantzis said: "I don't think it is proper for us to count on the course of negotiations we may be having." Hantzis also noted that the tickets for the raffle are not a tax-deductible contribution to charity because much of the money goes to a builder.

The Newton organization, which kicked off the raffle in September, was selling the $100 raffle tickets for a chance to win a four-bedroom garrison colonial house two blocks from the ocean in Manomet.

Committee studies the Brown library's future

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

OAK HILL — A committee of parents and administrators is meeting to discuss reconstruction of the Charles Brown Junior High School library, which was destroyed during the Aug. 15 fire at the school.

The committee began meeting two weeks ago to discuss a recommendation, which will go on to the Newton School Committee.

According to William Jesdale, acting principal at the school, one of the main questions concerning the reconstruction is whether or not a resource facility should remain separate from the school library.

Prior to the fire, there was a resource room, located adjacent to the library, which had audio-visual equipment, such as microfilm. The facility was also destroyed during the blaze.

"We lost our audio-visual room with the equipment," said Jesdale, who added that he would like to see pupils using this type of facility.

Committee members are also discussing the construction of a modern library, said Jesdale. "We want to specify a library facility that won't be outdated in future years," he said. Without specifying any details about the discussion, Jesdale did say that a facility featuring more technological materials is being discussed.

"We want to include enough flexibility so that we can adapt ourselves to developing technology," said Jesdale.

Since the fire, which resulted in $2 million in damages, a temporary library has been set up in a faculty room near the school cafeteria. The 30,000 books that were lost in the blaze are gradually being replaced, according to Louise Freedman, school librarian. Teachers and parents have donated paperback books used by the English and science departments. Those books are being stored in a classroom.

Jesdale and Judy Monti, the school's co-ordinator for the reconstruction of the library, are co-chairmen of the committee which includes the school's department chairmen; Louise Freedman, school librarian; Roy Cornelius, co-ordinator for support services, and several parents. Jesdale said the committee is also divided into several sub-committees.

There is no set date when the committee's proposal would be forwarded to the School Committee, according to Jesdale. "We're moving as quickly as possible," he said.

Mayor Mann wins easily

Alderman Mark White, wearing an orange and black Ted Mann ribbon on his jacket lapel, asked, "How could anyone be surprised at the results after the preliminary?" White was knocked out of the mayoral race in the September run-off election.
Alderman Paul Coletti credited Marquis with an "admirable job," but questioned his challenge of the incumbent. "Any viable candidate that could have beaten Ted Mann stayed away," said Coletti. "The mayor is a major popular politician," said a "relieved" Marquis at Nonantum American Legion Post 440. "We came out of nowhere. This is not the end, it's just the beginning. We have a constituency out there."
"I didn't think it was out of reach," said Marquis of his candidacy. "I thought the 7,300 votes Mann got in the preliminary was his strong vote." Marquis maintained in the days preceding the election that he needed a showing of 25,000 at the polls to possibly upset Mann.

Marquis, a 37-year-old insurance salesman and father of two, said he will announce his future political plans in a month's time.
leaguer and it is going to require another major leaguer to give him a run for his money."
Former Alderman Harry Crosby, who managed William Carmen's campaign against Mann in 1972 and turned around to be a key Mann backer, attributed part of the mayor's tremendous south side success to generations of Mann supporters and the ethnic vote.

"It goes way back," said Crosby of Mann's backing in wards 5, 6 and 7. "People have been voting for Ted and his father for three generations. It has just been a good name for years."
Marquis, however, called Mann's hold on the city by another name. "Running for the mayor of Newton is a popularity contest. That's what it is," declared Marquis. "I'm sure of that. If more people knew me as an individual, I would have won."
Additional pitfalls for the challenger were a lack of funding since the preliminary and a lack of aldermanic endorsements.
Mann raised more than $44,000 as of Oct. 16, compared to just $21,670 for Marquis.

Gentile, Jones are elected

in two of the three precincts (precinct two in Ward 1 and precinct four in Ward 2).
Gentile again controlled Ward 5 although the victory was narrower with 961 votes compared with 902 for Brant. Brant won in precincts three and four in Ward 5.
Gentile's victory surfaced as the only win over a candidate endorsed by the aggressive liberal organization, CONCERN.
Targeted voters in the city received one of two mailings on Friday from CONCERN. The mailings included one of two letters and a slate card which supported Brant for the Ward 1 race and Jones in Ward 2.
The letter signed by former congressman Fr. Robert Drinan which referred to the threat of the Moral Majority and implied a need to vote as CONCERN recommended to prevent book censorship in the schools was severely criticized by Gentile.
"I strongly resent a person who doesn't know any of the local issues or local candidates trying to influence an election like he (Drinan) did," Gentile said and added that he has never met Drinan.
When asked if the mailing affected the outcome of the election, Gentile said "Who knows, but I think that it hurt the city."
In light of Brant's narrow victory in two CONCERN strongholds, Wards 6 and 8, Gentile said "I think it's a credit to their intelligence as voters that they looked at all the issues and didn't just rely on one source."
"I felt that we worked hard over there," Gentile said. "I had a tremendous amount of help from a lot of different people."

Brant, an attorney and associate professor of law at the New England School of Law, whalloped Gentile in Ward 7 by capturing 1229 votes compared with 545 for Gentile.
Gentile's best showing was in Ward 1 where he beat Brant by nearly a 3-1 margin by getting 1640 votes while Brant received 551 votes.
Brant, reached at his home on Maple Lane, congratulated his opponent on the victory.
"He got the vote out and I wish him well on the School Committee," Brant said.
"I don't think I'll run again or put my family through a campaign again," Brant said, "but I expect to be involved in other people's campaigns."
Katherine Jones, the Ward 2 incumbent with four years of experience, was "very, very pleased" with her sound victory over Hartford.
"I did well in the wards that I had had strength in before. That was clearly reinforced by the results in this election," Jones, a resident of 1087 Commonwealth Ave. said.
Jones was also happy to have been challenged, although she faced Hartford in the election two years ago as well.
"It's very nice to have had a contest even though it meant that we had to do a lot of work," she said. "It's a victory and victory is sweet."
"I have to say very honestly that I wished there had been more involvement of the community in some of the candidates' nights as a vehicle for raising issues and questions," Jones, a teacher for several years and former METCO coordinator in Newton for 10 years, said.

Jones, who was endorsed by CONCERN, said she was unsure what affect the mailings had on the outcome of the Ward 2 race.
"We (the School Committee) have a tough job ahead in the next years," she said, "and I look forward to working with the newly-composed committee."
Hartford, a lifelong resident and program planning manager with Raytheon at the corporation's Bedford Laboratories, was most pleased with his victory in precinct two of Ward 2 which represents the Cabot School where he is active with the PTA. Hartford won in three precincts in Ward 2 and Ward 3 and in precincts one and four in Ward 1. He also won precinct four in Ward 4. However, Jones controlled all precincts in Wards 5-8.
"I will continue to be active, but I don't think I'll run again," Hartford said. "I'm sorry I lost. I think I'm one of the best candidates running of all of them."
Hartford was critical of the CONCERN mailings which he felt hurt his campaign. "I lost the battle, but we're going to win the war and that war is CONCERN," Hartford said. "CONCERN is going to be exposed for what they really are."
In the unopposed races, incumbents Nancy Mann (Ward 3), Susan Silbey (Ward 4), Ann Berwick (Ward 6) and Robert Ricles (Ward 8) were all elected for another term. Newcomers Marcia Mitchell (Ward 5) and James Mnookin (Ward 6) also ran unopposed and will replace committee members Honora Kaplan and Sandra Fleishman, respectively.

CONCERN scores victories

NEWTON - CONCERN, an aggressive liberal political lobby, almost scored a complete sweep Tuesday as six of its seven endorsed candidates gained public office.
Letters were sent to selected voters throughout the city this past weekend encouraging residents to select CONCERN endorsed candidates. One of the letters, which cites the threat of the "New Right, the Moral Majority and the special interest lobbies," was signed by former US Rep. Father Robert Drinan.

The group, which bills itself as a "pro-education" lobby, endorsed just school committee candidates in past elections. However, due to the school committee's loss of fiscal autonomy under Proposition 2½, the group publically backed aldermen this year.

Gentile, who beat Jonathan Brant for the Ward 1 school committee seat by more than 2,000 votes, was the sole candidate to defeat a CONCERN endorsed candidate.

Vance tops at-large ticket

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Attorney Verne Vance topped the ticket in the contest for the two city wide ward 7 alderman at large seats to become one of the seven new faces that will join the Board of Aldermen.

Vance captured an impressive 35 percent of the vote (7,301 votes). Alderman Dominic Taglienti, who finished 138 votes behind Vance, received 7,301 votes or 34 percent of the vote.

While three of the newcomers to the board defeated incumbents, Vance is one of three new faces that will fill seats vacated by aldermen who chose not to seek reelection. Michael Malec takes over the ward 5 seat vacated by state Rep. Susan Schur unopposed. Vance will take the seat vacated by Alderman Mark White who made an unsuccessful bid for mayor.

Sondra Shick, a local attorney who has never held elected office, finished a strong second behind Incumbent Bruce Carmichael to take one of the two city wide ward 1 alderman at large seats. Shick, who received 8,653 votes (37 percent), finished 314 votes behind Carmichael.

The 29-year-old Carmichael, who was elected to his second term, received 8,967 votes (38 percent). Shick will take the seat vacated by Alderman Robert Gaynor who decided not to seek reelection in order to devote more time to his law practice.

Richard Bullwinkle, alderman from 1973 to 1978, defeated Paul Snyder in the ward 3 alderman's contest by a solid 544 votes to return to the board. Bullwinkle will take the seat of Alderman Paul Daley who moved to ward 5. Daley defeated incumbent James Miller in the city wide ward 5 alderman at large race to remain on the board.

Bullwinkle received 1414 votes or 61 percent of the votes cast. Snyder, an attorney for the US Department of Housing and Urban Development, received 870 votes (39 percent).

Joseph DePasquale, who finished one vote behind John McDermott in the preliminary, fended off a strong challenge by the 21-year-old Boston College student to retain his ward 1 alderman's seat. DePasquale, who is completing his second term, finished 224 votes ahead of McDermott. The final tally was 1309 votes (55 percent) for DePasquale to 1085 (45 percent) for McDermott.

In the ward 2 alderman at large city wide race for two seats, Incumbents Terry Morris and Edward Richmond easily retained their seats. The only challenger, Patricia Ciccone, finished 3,223 votes behind Richmond and 2,963 behind Morris.

Richmond, who topped the ticket, received 8,967 votes (38 percent) to get the go ahead to begin his sixth term. Morris received 8,707 votes (37 percent). Ciccone received 5,744 votes (24 percent).

WARD 7 ALDERMAN AT LARGE RACE

Taglienti, who finished 654-votes ahead of challenger Eve Ross, to retain one of the two seats here had some uneasy moments until the final returns were tallied. Many of the early returns showed Taglienti not running as well as expected.

Ross, 30, a practicing attorney in Boston, received 6647 votes or 31 percent of the votes cast. Taglienti did no campaigning or legwork in the race.

"I didn't work hard enough," admitted Taglienti. "When you run for office in this city you have got to work...It's really tough."

"I'm looking forward to continuing," added Taglienti, who appeared stunned by early results. After it was clear that he would retain his seat, a number of well wishers, including Carol Ann Shea and Cynthia Creem, showered Taglienti with congratulations.

Vance, who was endorsed by CONCERN, said he was surprised by his impressive victory. Vance celebrated the win at his Old Orchard Road home.

"I campaigned very hard," he said. "I thought I had outstanding qualifications. But it's a marketing job...I guess I did it better than any of the other candidates."

When asked if he believed the CONCERN endorsement was a major factor in the win, Vance said: "I have no way of knowing...I guess it had some impact because it's an organization that has been around and knows how to get votes for their candidates."

Noting the number of incumbents turned out of office, Vance explained: "It's very healthy. It shows incumbents can't take afford to take votes for granted."

WARD 1 ALDERMAN AT LARGE RACE

"I feel terrific," exclaimed Sondra Shick - one of the six CONCERN endorsed candidates who was elected.

"We ran a very positive campaign. There was no negatives. I'm the best candidate."

"I did better than I thought I would do," said Shick, who received support from many liberal public officials including state Rep. David Cohen and former Alderman Harry Crosby.

Shick said her major priority will be to provide "housing for people who can't afford to live in the city."

Carmichael, who is finishing out his first term, said he will continue his "hard work" for city residents. "The vote was an indication that I've been doing the job," he said.

Glen Morris, an architect who finished a distant third, said that the CONCERN endorsement for Shick was a major factor. "The CONCERN letter (from former Congressman Father Robert Drinan endorsing CONCERN candidates) really hurt me more than any other single factor."

"I am very hurt and angry at the tactics they used," said Morris, who vowed to work against the organization in the next municipal election.

WARD 1 ALDERMAN

Joseph DePasquale, who did an extensive leaflet drop and campaign blitz in the final week of the campaign, celebrated his victory with a party at his mother's home. "We blew him away in the end with campaign work," said DePasquale. "This was a well deserved victory."

"The kid (McDermott) worked hard," he said, "but we really worked harder. It was the hard work in the end that got us the win."

DePasquale noted that being unopposed in the last election hurt him.

WARD 3 ALDERMAN

Richard Bullwinkle accepted the victory with confidence of a man who has been there before. "We didn't concede anything," said Bullwinkle, who was at City Hall for the final results. "We just went out and did the work."

Aldermen unopposed in the election were: Ward 3 Aldermen at Large Robert Tennant and Matthew Jefferson; Ward 6 Aldermen at Large Ethel Sheehan and Rodney Barker; Ward 8 at Large Aldermen Wendell Bauckman and Cynthia Creem; Ward 2 Alderman Elaine Gentile; Ward 4 Alderman Carol Ann Shea; Ward 5 newcomer Michael Malec; Ward 7 Alderman Lisle Baker.

Anti-nuke proposal wins by 3-1 margin

NEWTON — Voters by a more than three to one margin Tuesday said "yes" to a non-binding referendum calling for a worldwide freeze on the proliferation of nuclear arms.

However, the strength of the message, which local advocates of the freeze want to send to Washington, was hindered by the number of voters who either missed or misunderstood the question.

Just 36 percent of the more than 20,530 voters voted on the referendum. Of the 7,338 votes, 78 percent or 5,750 voters said "yes" to the question while 1,588 said "no."

The referendum comes more than five months after the Board of Aldermen passed a resolution calling for a similar freeze.

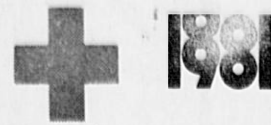

Alderman Ethel Sheehan, who pushed the resolution through the board, said she was elated with the passage but noted "so many people told her that they could not find the question on the ballot."

After a summer of virtually no advertising, several groups, including Newton for Nuclear Weapons Freeze, organized people to stand at the polls yesterday and hand out leaflets throughout the city this past weekend.

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC

The Sorrentino residence in West Newton was a strange and spooky place over the weekend as scores of masked monsters and humorous hobgoblins turned out for the family's annual Halloween affair. In this photo Carolyn and Dick Lopas of Newton help a youngster adjust his costume.

Adding to the ghoulish appearance of the Sorrentino residence in West Newton last weekend were Theresa Sorrentino, Melissa Lopes, Kevin Fairly, Morris O'Connor and Ricky Lopes, all of Newton, who gathered in the "family graveyard" in front of the house for a Halloween portrait.

Newton Country Players will present the musical 'Carnival'

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The Newton Country Players' fall production, the musical "Carnival," will be directed by Christopher J. Cardoni of Norwood.

The production will be held at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands, on Nov. 13-15 and 20-22.

Cardoni, a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art with a BFA in Art Education, directed the Country Players previously in "Natural Causes" and "The Curious Savage." In addition, he appeared as Nigel in "Something's Afoot" and provided make-up for several other productions including this summer's "The Fantasticks." He is a current member of the board of directors of Newton Country Players.

Cardoni, director of speech and drama at Fontbonne Academy in Milton, heads the Drama Club, the Drama Festival and the annual school play.

Cardoni has also been active in other local theater groups. He did set design and make-up for productions of "Camelot" and "The Pajama Game" at the Needham Youth Summer Theater. For the First Parish of Westwood Couples Club, he directed "No, No Nannette" and did set and lighting design for several other productions.

With the Norwood Theatre Workshop, Cardoni designed sets for, among others, "The Importance of Being Earnest," "The Real Inspector Hound," and "Story Theater."

Cardoni's professional experience includes production work for the Club Bene Dinner Theater in Morgan, N.J., and more than 20 productions with the Thomaston Opera House in Thomaston, Conn.

For the Country Players production of "Carnival," Cardoni is designing an imaginative circus set and creating the puppet characters who play an important role in the story.

Firewood co-op is a money saver

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The Newton Highlands Community Development Corporation (NHCDC) announced that it has now sold 30 cords of firewood to Newton residents at a savings of $20-30 a cord, through its firewood purchasing cooperative.

Howard Leibowitz, NHCDC administrator, stated that "our firewood cooperative is a clear demonstration of how community residents can band together to save energy dollars."

NHCDC began organizing its firewood co-op in June with a survey questionnaire at Newton Highlands Village Day. The idea drew favorable response so NHCDC began contacting wood suppliers to determine interest in supplying multiple cords of wood at a reduced price. At first, NHCDC had problems finding a supplier who would contract for multiple cords of wood and deliver to individual homes.

A supplier who was willing to deliver cut, split and seasoned wood to individual households at a reduced price was eventually located.

In its first week of operation, the co-op sold 10 cords, fulfilling its initial obligation to the supplier. Since then, orders have come in to the NHCDC office on a steady basis.

One customer who has already received his wood sent a note to the NHCDC office remarking, "I especially want to thank you for finding such an excellent source of wood for the co-operative members—this is certainly the best experience I've had in several years of buying firewood."

NHCDC plans to continue the co-operative venture next spring by contracting for less expensive green wood which customers can season in their back yards over the summer. Also on the drawing board are other types of bulk purchase arrangements for oil, coal and solar hot water heaters.

NHCDC's firewood co-op provides special discounts for senior citizens and low income persons. For more information on the wood co-op, call 244-5551.

Jill Totenberg named senior vice president

NEWTON — Ruder & Finn Incorporated has named Jill Totenberg, originally of Newton, a Senior Vice President, it was announced by David Finn, Chairman of the Board.

Totenberg, a graduate of Boston University, joined Ruder & Finn, a public relations firm, in 1969 and was elected a vice president of the firm in 1975. She was the recipient of a Silver Anvil Award from the Public Relations Society of America for her work on behalf of General Mills, Inc. In addition, Totenberg's work has been honored three times through Ruder & Finn's own internal competition, the Paul B. Zucker Awards.

Stoneware exhibited at local libraries

NEWTON — Marie White of Newton is exhibiting functional stoneware at the Newtonville and Auburndale Branches of the Newton Free Library now through the end of November.

White describes her work as "Boston delft." She uses a "majolica" technique, brushwork as surface design, that was first used by the Chinese masters during the twelfth century. In White's work the linear brush strokes are lightly applied using cobalt, warm browns and tones of grey and green.

White says her 'Boston delft' is handthrown and durable; "created for use, not the curio cabinet." The designs on the individual pieces, such as the dinner sets, are related but are one of a kind.

By using the Japanese technique of throwing from only the inside, White also makes large stoneware spherical vases which are heavily textured and patterned.

Currently White teaches art and gives pottery classes for the Newton Public Schools. She has also taught in the Community Schools Program. Her studio is in Wayland. For more information call 965-3765.

The Auburndale Library is located at 375 Auburn St., 552-7158. The Newtonville Library is located at 345 Walnut St., 552-7162.

The library will be closed Wednesday, Nov. 11.

Waban man enjoys 'plebe' life

WABAN — Gregory R. Brown, 19, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Brown, 21 Southwick Road, Waban, recently began his plebe (freshman) year at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., by completing the six-week plebe summer.

He was a member of the Air Force ROTC program as a freshman at Washington University in St. Louis last year.

"I wanted the Naval Academy in the first place," Brown said. "Being a year older and having an idea of what the military was like, has helped me cope with plebe summer."

Incoming midshipmen like Brown, are officially called midshipmen fourth class, but they are traditionally known as plebes. The plebe year is a demanding time requiring midshipmen to stand on their own feet, produce under pressure, respond quickly and intelligently to orders, and live up to high standards of honor.

"The only day I felt in control the whole summer was the first day, and that was because I was sick," Brown said. "About two hours before I was going to take the oath of induction, I wasn't feeling well. I guess it was a combination of heat, excitement and a virus. I ended up staying at the dispensary, and I wasn't sworn in until the next day," he added.

During the summer Brown learned to sail Navy yaws, fire a .45-caliber pistol, acquired basic skills in seamanship, navigation, signaling, infantry drill, and took part in rigorous physical conditioning. He also learned about the academy and the Navy and Marine Corps.

"I learned a lot more practical things than I thought I would," he said. "Plebe summer is exhausting. It's both physically and mentally demanding. I couldn't believe how much I could learn," Brown remarked.

Plebe summer is over for Brown, but the academic year is just beginning. During the academic year, plebes must be up at 6:15 a.m. and at their first formation 15 minutes later. Their days are filled with military drill and duties, athletics and an academic work load that normally includes 18 to 20 semester hours.

"I'm not worried about the academic year," Brown, a 1980 graduate of Newton South High School, said. "I've already had a year of scholastic experience."

"I started thinking seriously about applying here when I was a sophomore in high school," Brown said. "My father is a retired Navy lieutenant commander, so I knew a little about the Navy," he continued.

Brown was senior class secretary, a member of the science club and the varsity track, soccer, ice hockey and lacrosse teams in high school.

After Christmas leave, the first opportunity most plebes have to visit home since their arrival at the academy, they begin selecting their majors. Brown is interested in a science, possibly oceanography.

A significant part of the academic program is geared toward the scientific and engineering fields, with 80 percent of the approximately 4,400 midshipmen majoring in a technical field. The remaining 20 percent major in humanities.

Midshipmen graduate with a bachelor of science degree and a commission as a Navy ensign or Marine Corps second lieutenant, with a five-year service obligation.

Brown would like to become a Navy jet pilot. "I'd like to fly the new F-18 fighter," he said. "Someday I hope to become an astronaut and fly the space shuttle. I cut class to watch the first shuttle landing. It was worth it," Brown concluded.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
Chiropractors do not need to use jingles or tricks of phrasing to get people to pay attention to what we have to say about health care. Our message is clear and straightforward, and,
I might add, very much in tune with much of America's attitude toward health and their bodies. Simply stated, chiropractors work from the basic premise that the body, providing it is given the essential ingredients of food, water, rest, clean air, adequate nutrition and a properly functioning nervous system, is capable of taking care of itself.
We hope you're taking good care of yourself and giving your body a chance to stay healthy naturally. When you've discovered chiropractic pass the word to a friend. When all spinal and musculoskeletal misalignments and imbalances are corrected Nature can restore and normalize body function. Chiropractic can restore and build your health. Add years to your life, life to your years. In your own words tell a friend how chiropractic has helped you. It's the friendly thing to do. DR.
DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4583 Washington Street, Andover, MA, 01810. Hours by appointment and three evenings a week.
CHIRO TIP:
Fresh air is a must for good health. Even during the winter, make sure that you get outside at least three times a day.

Ben Pappas of Prospect St. in Newton kept his eyes on the doughnut during Halloween festivities last weekend in West Newton at the Sorrentino residence.

Former Meadowbrook School Brown Jr. High is now official

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — If things had worked out a little differently, the late Dr. Charles E. Brown might have been a pitcher for the Yankees instead of an educator and superintendent whose contributions to Newton were memorialized in ceremonies at the renamed Brown Junior High Friday.

At the dedication ceremony, former Meadowbrook Principal Irwin Freedman told the audience that Brown was at one time "a serious contender for a pitching position" with the Yankees. Fortunately for Brown, Freedman joked, the pitching career never blossomed.

For most of the 7th and 8th graders, Brown's impact on education in Newton and the reasons for the renaming of Meadowbrook were unclear; a blur which speakers at the ceremony sought to focus.

Although Brown was superintendent from 1960-1968 for six years and prior to that a teacher and administrator in Newton, his career in education also included work as the director of the METCO Program, as a consultant to the U.S. Office of Education, as a planning officer in the Ford Foundation's division of education and research and, in the last years of his life, director of a project he developed for the Educational Development Center in Newton.

Superintendent Aaron Fink, who initially recommended the name change to the School Committee, said at the morning ceremony, "The naming of any building or institution in memory of a person who has not only made a great contribution, but a singular one...serves as an enduring memorial to all that this person represented."

"Charles E. Brown warranted such a memorial," Fink said.

"Charles Brown had a supreme confidence in the capacity of every student to learn and to assume increasingly greater responsibility for his own behavior," Fink told the students. "A great humanitarian, he felt strongly that the integrity of each human being must be preserved."

"I like to think that the values that Dr. Brown represented are as important now as they were when he was alive and that they are very much worth fighting to preserve, both in our school and community," Fink said.

Although Brown was only 54-years-old when he died in April 1979, his contributions "were enormous," Fink concluded.

Acting Principal William Jesdale, who had worked with Brown, told the students of Brown's philosophy that "schools not only allow students, but actually insist that students be all that they could be."

"Chuck Brown wanted schools to be good for kids," Jesdale said.

Brown's daughter, Elizabeth, an undergraduate at Harvard, described her father as someone who never did anything "half way" and had the same expectations for his own children.

She fondly recalled family baseball games and said she felt her father always hoped they would be a great family team, but recognized that they did not all share the same passions or aptitudes.

"I know that my father really cared about a lot of things," Elizabeth said, "and when he did he read about them and talked to people."

"I know that he talked to lots of people, but I also know that he talked to us, his children and our friends, and that he really listened," she said.

Mayor Theodore Mann remembered Brown as a "pioneer in his day in education" and as someone who "took the heat that comes from being involved."

The festivities included a rendition of a Beethoven arrangement by Director George Livingston and the Brown Band and Orchestra called "Dedication of the House."

The Brown Chorus, led by Director Beatrice Maier, sang a moving piece entitled "Flying Free" with a flute solo performed by student, Ramani Sripada. The audience joined with the chorus in singing "America the Beautiful" at the end of the ceremony.

Also announced were the new school colors and team name which were voted on by students recently. Since the student body was "exactly tied 292-292" between having brown and white or blue and white, a student announced that all three colors would be the school colors.

Students entered ideas for a new team name for the school and Rhonda Coleman's idea, the Brown (lightning) Bolts, was top choice.

Group presses Mann on evacuation plans

By Gladys Damon
Correspondent

It started out as a "Dear Ted" letter to Mayor Mann. Last week Edmund Berkeley of Berkeley Enterprises, Washington St., Newtonville, wrote to the mayor pointing out the imminent peril of a nuclear attack in this area.

"There is no place to hide. There is no part of the earth that is immune. All the survivors, wounded, crippled, bleeding, radiated, will be dying like fish out of water from a tidal wave," the letter said.

The letter concludes, "It looks as if the City of Cambridge has at last taken a skeleton out of the closet and produced a message that will be listened to."

A few days later, Mayor Mann replied. His letter said, "Any time you have a chance, my time is yours. With every good wish, Ted."

Braving the pre-election fever prevalent in Newton last week, Berkeley was joined by his wife, Suzanne, daughter of former Newton Alderman C. P. Slocum, Rita Payne and Anita Greenbaum, all actively involved in the peace movement and anti-nuclear groups. In person, they presented Mayor Mann with a copy of the City of Cambridge brochure.

Berkeley was referring to the vote of the Cambridge City Council last March, endorsing a call for nuclear disarmament and the publication of its brochure, "Cambridge and Nuclear Weapons: Is There a Place to Hide?" He was inspired by the example of the City of Cambridge which has produced and distributed its pamphlet to all citizens residing there. Since 1945 he has been involved in the study and implications of nuclear weapons.

In a recent interview, Berkeley said, "When you call City Hall and ask for the Civil Defense office, you are referred to Jay Moskow. He is only available at his Boston office on Mondays after 11 a.m. Otherwise, you can't get any information on Newton's 'safe haven' in Plymouth, N.H. It just doesn't make any sense at all."

"We want Newton to be the second city in the United States to do what Cambridge has done. The Cambridge City Council realized that if a nuclear bomb were to be dropped on the City of Boston, it would be ludicrous to follow civil defense plans and try to evacuate its 90,000 citizens under crisis conditions. The whole of Massachusetts' Civil Defense plans are under sharp attack and criticism for the sheer impracticality of moving masses of people around the state during utter panic."

The group's main concern is the fact that in the event of a nuclear war threat Newton, apparently, has evacuation plans. According to a report made public recently, called "Hubbub," greater Boston cities and towns are expected to form an exodus via some half million automobiles on roads leading out of the metropolitan area in a criss-cross pattern to Maine, New Hampshire, Western Massachusetts and the Cape. Newton's destination is supposed to be Plymouth, N.H.

In view of the seeming impracticality of the scheme, Berkeley and his co-sponsors of the appeal to Mayor Mann also object to Newton's lack of a full-time civil defense coordinator.

In response to Plan Hubbub, the Cambridge City Council passed three resolutions: to teach peace studies in their public schools; to substitute, in place of the Commonwealth's civil defense booklet, its own brochure, which calls for nuclear disarmament as the only realistic response to the threat of nuclear warfare; and a general peace resolution which gives concrete, positive steps that ordinary citizens can follow to prevent the possibility of nuclear warfare.

Sponsored by the Cambridge Peace Education Project (CPEP), which produced a 20-minute slide show about disarmament, "The Race Nobody Wins," the brochure was developed by both CPEP and the Cambridge City Council. It will be distributed in all public schools to implement the peace studies programs to be presented there. CPEP is an ad hoc coalition of citizens and peace groups who are producing model programs for other cities to follow.

Anita Greenbaum has obtained a grant of $1000 from the Massachusetts Envelope Co., which will serve as seed money toward a fund to produce similar brochures and programs for Newton.

"The next move is up to Mayor Mann," Berkeley said. "We are waiting to hear his response."

World Community Day is this Friday

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Church Women United in Newton, will celebrate World Community Day on Nov. 6 at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 1135 Walnut St., Newton Highlands, at 9:30 a.m. for coffee and the program at 10 a.m.

Since 1943, Church Women United has celebrated World Community Day to emphasize corporate action for justice and peace. This year's theme will deal with peace in the world. The title for the World Community Day Service is "The Last Commandment: Put Away Your Sword," and was written by women of the Greek Orthodox Church and drawn upon the liturgy of their tradition.

Upon entering church, the first act of worship for the Orthodox Christian is to light a candle while offering silent prayer. The candle symbolizes the light of Christ illuminating the kingdom of peace where there is no violence.

World Community Day is also the setting for nationwide offerings for Intercontinental Grants, which enable Church Women United to express its commitment through a variety of programs.

Involved in the World Community Day Celebration in Newton are: Nancy Tolley, chairman of the day; Jeanne Balcom, Carolyn Durocher, and Retta Whitmore, hostesses; Barbara Crockett, Esther Toher, and Jeanne Balcom, participants in the service. The guest speaker will be Nancy Rockwell, associate pastor at United Parish, Auburn-dale. She will have as her topic "Peace and Reconciliation." Ms. Rockwell has degrees from Brown University and Chicago Theological School and is a senior unit care planner-analyst for Health Planning Council of Greater Boston. She has spent seven years in chaplaincy-style work with City Missionary Society and is a member of Newton Interfaith Peace Coalition. Ordained in June 1981, Ms. Rockwell will be installed on Nov. 8 as associate pastor United Parish, Auburn-dale.

Church World Service will be distributing school kits to any place of need throughout the world. As a concrete expression of their concern for others, you are invited to bring, to this meeting, any item(s) needed.

Senior Drop-In center offers crafts classes

WABAN — On Nov. 10 at 1 p.m., the Beethoven Senior Drop-In Center will be starting an arts and crafts class; an opportunity to learn a new skill or more than one new skill as many different crafts will be offered.

The first few classes will be a "Small Christmas Ornaments" workshop taught by Ruth Colton who has previously led the popular Doll Dressing Group. She will be showing seniors how to make yarn and felt ornaments which can either be worn or used to decorate a tree.

On Dec. 1, the Drop-In Center will begin a small leather crafts class. Those attending can make a keyholder out of leather as well as other crafts.

Examples of future craft classes which will be offered are large leather crafts, metal work, and rug making.

Many of the materials will either be free or inexpensive with the agreement that each participant in the class will make two of the same craft — one for himself and one for the R.S.V.P. (Retired Senior Volunteer Program) Christmas and spring fairs. Participants may make more than one for themselves and more than one for the fairs, if they like.

Call the center for more information at 527-6749.

The Beethoven Senior Drop-In Center is located at the Zervas School, Beacon Street at Beethoven Avenue.

The Center is sponsored by the Department of Human Services in cooperation with the Council on Aging.

Fire OT goes up $50,000

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — To restore a depleted Fire Department overtime allowance, aldermen unanimously appropriated $50,000 to the account Monday night to bring the department's total overtime appropriations to $244,000 for fiscal year 1982.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly requested the additional monies to pay for the overtime costs involved in operating the city-run ambulance service for the month of July.

Aldermen, disturbed by the amount of overtime money Reilly anticipates he will need by the end of the fiscal year, also passed a resolution requesting that the executive department attempt to expedite contract negotiations with the Fire Department union.

The $50,000 appropriated by aldermen will come from budget reserve. The total amount budgeted for Fire Department overtime this fiscal year was $194,000. However, these figures could be off by as much as $150,000, according to Reilly, because the budget was predicated upon the city having relief from a minimum-manning clause.

At a recent Finance Committee meeting, several aldermen criticized the administration's failure to indicate that massive overtime expenditures would be required because of the minimum-manning clause.

Negotiations between the city and the firefighters' union have been at an impasse for 20 months.

Minimum-manning, which firefighters were granted four years ago by a state arbitrator, spells out the number of firefighters that must accompany each piece of equipment that leaves the station.

According to Deputy Mayor James Hickey, "The city wants the department to have the overtime allowance but for reasons of public safety."

"Now he doesn't have a choice," said Hickey of Reilly's decisions on proper manning levels. "He must send out numbers as regulated by minimum manning."

Alderman Rodney Barker, who requested the resolution, called the budget a meaningless figure in the face of additional overtime appropriations. "It is meaningless," said Barker of the overtime allowance, "because it was passed on the basis of a contract that was not signed."

"Clearly we were presented with a budget that was an absurdity and had no basis in fact," said Barker. "The mayor must urgently finish negotiations with the Fire Department in order to stop the bleeding of the city from the overtime account."

Hickey noted that much of the overtime account is spent during the summer months due to vacations.

"We can't go on with this overtime," added Barker. "It's like a faucet."

Hickey said he hoped that the negotiations would end as soon as possible but objected to Barker's statement calling for the administration to expedite the contract negotiations.

He noted that the two negotiating teams were unable to meet between Aug. 23 and Oct. 22 because of the union counsel's unavailability.

Chaulk Ambulance Service, the firm now providing the service, was originally scheduled to operate in the city on July 1. The takeover, however, was delayed because a group of aldermen challenged Mayor Theodore Mann's right to hire a private company to handle the service.

The funding of the in-house ambulance service during this time came completely from the Fire Department overtime account.

Members sought for search

NEWTON — City residents can now apply for one of the six community slots on the Search Committee for a new superintendent of schools.

According to School Committee Chairman Ann Berwick, the deadline for applications is Nov. 13 and applicants for this time-consuming committee should include a description of their background and community activities.

Letters should be addressed to Berwick at 100 Walnut St., Newtonville, 02160.

Berwick said that she will make the appointments of the six citizen members on the basis of representing as many components of the city as possible.

The School Committee at a recent meeting approved the final makeup of the Search Committee. Of the 18 members, six will be from the community.

Berwick announced that School Committee members Katherine Jones, Honora Kaplan and Sandra Fleishman will represent the School Committee. Other appointments include Eleanor Samuels and Bonnie Armer of the PTA Council and Norman Colb of the central staff of the School Department. Representing the Newton Teachers Association will be Warren Priest, a teacher at Brown Junior High, and Joanne Gannon, a teacher at Williams Elementary.

The two principals appointed to the committee are Betty Quinn of Bigelow Junior High and Carmella Nadeau of Underwood Elementary. The two high school students appointed to the committee are Gary Rosen of North High and Joshua Davis of South High.

Abbruzzese keys Tiger cakewalk

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Call this high football's version of the dog days of August, when the opposition isn't particularly potent and the Newton North Tigers, despite protestations to the contrary, must have at least one eye on Nov. 14 and a scheduled war with Waltham High.

Saturday's contest with Cambridge, Rindge and Latin was more of an extended workout for the now 7-0 Tigers. Using the explosive formula which they initiated two weeks ago at Quincy, the Tigers struck for all 26 points in a span of 4:08 of the second period to easily slide past the Cantabs, 26-12, at Dilboy Field in Somerville.

It was a game in which the Tigers showed the Suburban League that they don't live and die by the pass only. With Mike Abbruzzese enjoying his finest afternoon of the season (143 yards in 24 carries), they controlled the Cambridge defense to the tune of 232 yards on the ground. Oh yes, they also showed that the aerial game is still intact as Billy Drew hauled in two bombs from Ryan Foley for touchdowns. Drew, maybe the best end in the league, finished the afternoon with four catches for 119 yards.

"Mike (Abbruzzese) has been running well in practice so we decided to give him the ball and let him go," said coach Norm Walker. "It was important for us to establish the running game because it gives other teams another thing to worry about. Our offense is more balanced now."

Here is a synopsis of how a 0-0 game suddenly became a rout. After both teams did very little in a slow first quarter, the Tigers took a 6-0 edge at 7:28 of the second stanza. The drive spanned 81 yards in 11 plays and was accomplished almost entirely on the ground. The only non-running play was a pass interference penalty which brought the ball from the 15 to the one.

The march started with Al Fortune (69 yards) gaining 14 on three consecutive rushes. Abbruzzese then picked up the next 52 as the Tigers gave him the ball four straight times. The last one of 18 gave Newton the ball at the Cambridge 25. Fortune burst through the middle for 12 and, following the penalty, Abbruzzese went over from the one.

Three plays later, the Tigers had the ball again after Dean Morreale recovered a fumble at the Cambridge 28. Newton efficiently covered the distance in four plays with Fortune getting the final call from four yards. That made it 12-0.

The proverbial roof then fell in on the Cantabs. They fumbled the ensuing kickoff, Dave Rowland recovered and on the first play, Foley lofted a high spiral to Drew for a 31-yard TD. Drew ran under the ball on the right sideline, caught it over his shoulder and lunged into the corner of the end zone, just inside the flag. That gave Newton two scores in 16 seconds. Abbruzzese ran in the conversion and it was now, 20-0.

The Cantabs took the kickoff, ran one play, and lost the ball again when linebacker Neil Hadro intercepted a bad Mike Harshbarger delivery. This time the Tigers took what seemed like ages before scoring. They called three running plays before Foley went downtown to Drew again from 39 yards with the exact same result. The time: 3:20 of the second quarter; The score: 26-0; The outcome: Decided.

The Cantabs added a TD moments later to make it 26-6 and actually threatened somewhat in the second half, but each time the Tiger defense made the big plays. They had first downs at the Newton 13 and 10-yard lines in the second half and failed to score. The latter opportunity was set up by Jack Lopes, who intercepted Tim Brandon at the Cambridge 45 and raced 43 yards before being tackled.

Cambridge did finally get back on the scoreboard with a little over two minutes remaining when Harshbarger completed a 59-yard drive with a nine-yard pass over the middle to fullback Jim Hoog. It was the first time anyone had scored on Newton all season in the second half.

But in the end that score hardly mattered. What did was the job the defense, especially people like Matt Davis, Dave Rowland, Leo Butera and John Corsi, did on Cambridge when the game was on the line.

"It was our best defensive effort of the year," said Walker of the unit which allowed only 96 yards rushing. "It was great to see our running go but I was happiest about the defense."

Next comes Weymouth North and after that, Waltham. "It'd be impossible not to be thinking about Waltham a little," admits Walker. "But we're trying to take them one at a time."

Hawks win on fumble recovery

Newton North JVs make use of Cambridge errors

The Newton North junior varsity football team took advantage of Cambridge errors to gain a 14-0 victory Monday at Newton in Suburban League matchup.

The Tigers were led by a strong defensive performance. The first touchdown of the contest was scored by the special teams. Newton North's defense had pinned the Warriors deep in their own territory and forced a punt.

The Cambridge punter fumbled the snap in the end zone and Bill Norwood was there to scoop up the fumble for a quick six points. Price Leonard ran around end for the two-point conversion and the Tigers had a quick 8-0 lead.

The teams played scoreless football for the next three periods, but Cambridge did mount an offensive threat late in the second period. It would be their only offensive threat of the contest.

The Warriors kept converting on third down and were moving the ball down the field. Defensive back John Bresnahan ended the drive when he stepped in front of a Cambridge pass for the interception. The interception ended the drive and preserved the shutout.

The win over Cambridge marked the third time this season the Tigers' defense has blanked an opponent. Sophomore defensive end Kevin Blake and junior linebacker Marty Daly anchored the defense against Cambridge. Defensive tackle John MacDonnell had done well on the line for Newton North.

The Tigers put the game away with a 70-yard march in the fourth quarter. The drive was led by the rushes of Leonard and fullback Fritz Phillips. Quarterback Larry Tafe scored when he rolled out, and scooted in from three yards out.

The win lifted the Tigers record to 5-1 on the season.

Waltham battled it out with rival Brockton and managed to earn a hard-fought 6-0 victory. It was a defensive battle and it was fitting that the lone touchdown was scored by the defense.

Hawk junior defensive end Chris Bowler recovered a Brockton fumble in the end zone for the Hawks lone score of the contest.

Bedford nips Tiger girls

Bedford High's Maureen Benson scored 10 minutes into the second half for the only goal of the game as the Newton North girls' field hockey team lost its ninth game of the season, 1-0, Thursday at Bedford.

Goaltender Patty Hunt played well in defeat for the Tigers, who are now 1-9-2. They host Newton South Monday.

Weston High remained unbeaten thanks to a 1-1 tie with Acton-Boxboro.

Karen Wilder gave the Wildcats the tying goal 11 minutes into the second half, leaving them still in first place in the Dual County League with a 9-0-4 mark.

Also playing strong games for the Wildcats were fullback Ann Hinckley and offensive star Cindy Healey.

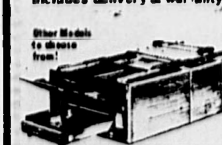

Weston travels to Wayland Tuesday in a battle for first place in the DCL.

Newton South gets back on winning track

After a haphazard first half of football, Newton South showed signs of its early season success, as the Lions rolled in the second half to post a 16-0 blanking over Madison Park in a non-league contest Saturday at Newton South Athletic Field.

The win snaps a two-game losing streak for Newton South, but the Lions remain winless in Dual County League play.

Both teams were unable to muster much of an offense in the first half. The Lions managed just three first-half first downs as did Madison Park. It was the running work of Arthur Walton (eight carries, 23 yards), Jeff Steven (10 carries, 51 yards), and Steve Anglin (10 carries, 56 yards) that propelled Newton South to victory. The Lions totaled 127 yards on the ground on 33 carries, while posting 63 yards in the air on 12 passes.

The Lions were able to compile just 65 yards offensively in the first half, while Madison Park ground out 75 first-half offensive yards.

A fumble recovery by Denis Murphy at the start of the third quarter gave Newton South perfect field position at the Madison Park 20 yard line.

Anglin knocked out eight yards on two carries and Joe Spagnuolo added two to give the Lions a first down at the 10 yard line of Madison Park. Steven collected four yards on two carries to set up a four-yard touchdown pass from Spagnuolo to Dave Hill.

Hill a six foot, 170 pound senior was on the receiving end of another Spagnuolo touchdown ariel in the final frame and completed the day with three receptions for 31 yards.

The slashing and cutting ground attack of Anglin (5'9", 160 pounds) and Steven (5'7", 155 pounds) churned up 70 yards to set up a Steve Mosca field goal in the fourth quarter. The drive consisted of five first downs, a 10-yard penalty on Madison Park, and 10 running plays before Mosca split the uprights with a 15-yard boot to make it 9-0.

Along with the running of the Lion backs, the offensive line came to life in the second half and began to handle the Madison Park defense. Madison Park was stacking eight men up front to guard against the run and to apply pressure on Spagnuolo.

Denis Murphy, Kenny Kohlberg, Gene Lindsey, Neil Johnson and James Campbell all turned in strong performances on the Newton South offensive line and made it possible for the Lion backs to open the field up in the second half.

Newton South made it 15-0 in the fourth quarter on a Spagnuolo to Hill passing score and Mosca added the final point with a point after conversion kick.

Hill was standing all alone in the right corner of the endzone when Spagnuolo connected with him for the 10-yard touchdown hookup. Spagnuolo appeared to turn his game around this week as the junior slinger completed six of 12 passes for 63 yards and two touchdowns.

Another key to the Newton South victory was the Lions ability to limit their mistakes and to take advantage of Madison Park's. Newton South lost the ball on one fumble and one interception but had a fumble recovery of a Madison Park misque that led to a Lion score.

The Lions were not penalized once in the game, while Madison Park suffered five penalties for 40 total yards.

The win raises Newton South's record to 5-2, but that is still without a DCL victory. Newton South will have its chance at cracking the win column in the Dual County League this coming weekend when the Lions travel to Acton-Boxboro Saturday. The summary:

Tigers rising to top in volleyball

It is a sport which receives very little notice either in the newspapers or on the school grounds itself. While the football and soccer players are playing before decent size crowds every time out, the girls' volleyball team is usually lucky if 10 people show up. If it's a losing team, the numbers are even less.

Such is the case this fall at Newton North, where the girls have recently finished a sparkling 12-3 season (9-2 in league-play) and captured their first ever Suburban League championship. All in relative obscurity.

But the Tigers haven't been affected by their lack of publicity. "The thing that sets this team apart is the unity," says coach Jay Cradle, now in her eighth season. "Every person believes in everyone else. All the girls are very supportive of each other."

The Tigers began the year with six seniors and one sophomore. They lost that sophomore, Midge Connolly, for the season when she broke her ankle in the fourth game. But, at the same time, they picked up senior Rachelle Scott, a transfer student from Haiti, in a move which turned the season around.

"We were a good, talented team, but not a great one, before Rachelle," says Cradle. "She was the deciding factor for us. It was not only her ability but her confidence which did it. Rachelle believed in everyone and had no fear of the Suburban League."

That last point about having no fear of the league is an important one. The Tigers had been talented in the past, but were always intimidated by the Brockton's, Waltham's and Quincy's of the league. Here came Scott from Haiti with no preconceived notions. It changed the entire team's attitude.

Another main reason for Newton North's tremendous development has been the emergence of captain Amy Merritt as one of the finest spikers and servers around. Merritt, manning the No.1 spiking position in Newton North's 4-2 offense, has averaged eight spikes and four aces a game. "Her development has been amazing," says Cradle. "Her leadership, dedication and poise on the court have been a big factor in our success."

Scott has been the quarterback of the attack, deciding who to set up for spikes. In order to succeed at this spot, Scott must have a clear knowledge of the sport and a quick mind capable of making split-second decisions. "Rachelle has obviously been the added plus that we never expected," smiled Cradle.

The Tigers are far from a two-women team, however. Megan Guiney, up from the jayvees, has blossomed into one of the best defensive players on the squad. She also spikes well, averaging five a game along with three aces.

The versatile Tiger is tiny, 5-5 Elissa Weltz, who began the season as a spiker but switched over to setter when Cradle informed her that the Tigers were in desperate need of one. Like Merritt, Weltz lends stability to the Tigers, hardly ever losing her composure. "Neither Elissa or Amy ever crack on the court. They're amazing," says Jay.

Others who have made important contributions this season are Ginger Zukowski, Sonia Yee and Marcia Zukowski. All three have come through with some very important points in the past few weeks. Ginger Zukowski especially has averaged seven points a game for the last four matches.

Next on the agenda for the Tigers is the Division I tournament. If they are required to play a preliminary, they will do so Nov. 7. If not, they will begin South Sectionals Nov. 11. The pairings will be announced Friday night.

Whatever happens in the tournament, 1981 will still go down as a landmark year for Newton North volleyball. A league championship is nothing to scoff at; even if very few people notice it.

Martin powers North girls

The Newton North field hockey team was powered by Carol Martin's two goal performance en route to a 4-0 victory over cross-town rival Newton South Monday in a non-league game at North.

The Tigers broke out to a two goal lead behind Martin's first-half effort. Newton North cemented the win with goals by Audrey Garfield and Jenny Greenberg. Patty Hunt had the shutout for the Tigers. The win lifted North's record to 2-7-1.

Recreation Comm. Russell J. Halloran (L), Paul J. Burke and Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

Name baseball field for Burke

The Newton Recreation Department has voted unanimously to name the lighted regulation baseball field at the Albemarle Playground in honor of Paul J. Burke of 161 Randlett Park, West Newton. The official dedication and ceremony will be held this spring.

Burke has been directly and indirectly involved with recreation programs for the youth of the city of Newton for 35 years. He coached his first basketball team in Newton Recreation Leagues in 1947; coached St. Bernard's teams in Pony League and adult baseball leagues for 10 years, and also managed St. Bernard's baseball teams in the American Division for five years.

Burke has served on the Newton Recreation Commission for 12 years and was chairman for two terms.

Paul was one of the original founders of the Babe Ruth League (now the International League). His involvement in the community over the years included six years as the alderman for the West Newton area; 15 years on the Board of Directors for the Newton Community Service Centers—two years as president.

For years, he coached semi-pro basketball teams. Six times they won the Waltham Boys' Club Championship. In addition, he served on the Billy Hamill Memorial Committee which annually selects the outstanding high school baseball player in the city of Newton; also co-chairman for 20 years, of the Charles Cosgrove Memorial Scholarship Committee.

Paul is married to the former Carolyn Mitchell of West Newton. They have three children: Mrs. Christina Robertson of Rhode Island, Thomas J. Burke of Columbus, Ohio, and Stephen P. Burke of West Newton.

Heartbreak Hill race a family affair

The Fifth Annual Purity Supreme Heartbreak Hill Road Race will be held Sunday, 10 a.m., in Newton. Each year this race is the traditional "last stop" in the Boston running circuit.

Under the sponsorship of Purity Supreme, this race has grown in popularity in recent years, and will feature nearly 5,000 runners. Proceeds from the race will benefit the Kennedy Memorial Hospital for Children.

Perhaps one of the most unique aspects of the Heartbreak Hill race is the number of families who participate either as runners or as race volunteers. There is something attractive about spending a crisp fall day at a road race, with good food and lots of people, that brings out so many families to the race.

This year's event will feature one of the best known husband and wife running teams in the country—Patti and Joe Catalano. Patti's mercurial rise as a world-class runner under the direction of her coach and husband Joe, is well known.

The rapidly growing field in this year's race presently features more than 70 husband and wife running teams. The race volunteers also their families as illustrated by the St. Onge family of Purity Supreme. This will be the fourth year that 20 or so members of the St. Onge family have worked serving large quantities of food to the runners and spectators after the race.

Purity Supreme gift certificates will be awarded to the top two overall male and female finishers. Puma USA will provide shoes for the top five winners in each age category. The top three corporate teams and the top three club teams will receive plaques recognizing their performance.

New church opens in Newton Nov. 8

NEWTONVILLE — A new church, the Creation Assembly of God, has opened its doors in Newtonville with its first official Sunday morning worship service slated for Nov. 8.

The church, pastored by Reverend Les Bishop, will be meeting at the Swedenborgian Church Building at 11 Highland Ave. in Newtonville, Sundays at 10 a.m.

Creation Assembly will be directly affiliated with the Assemblies of God, a Charismatic/Pentecostal denomination which has about 10,000 churches throughout the United States and 12 in the greater Boston area.

Rev. Bishop, who received his theological training at Wheaton Graduate School of Theology in Wheaton, Ill., has served as an assistant minister in churches in both Illinois and California.

Rev. Bishop said this week that, doctrinally speaking, the Creation Assembly will be committed to the historic Christian faith and the belief "that a person can have a relationship with God through faith in Christ."

Areas of emphasis, Rev. Bishop said, will be "commitment to God, to one another and the community" as well as "the cultivation of a right relationship with both God and one another" and "the corporate expression of our devotion to God."

New pastor for Baptist Church

NEWTON — The Rev. Norman R. De Puy will be installed as the 19th pastor in the 201-year history of the First Baptist Church in Newton on Nov. 8 at 3 p.m.

A Pennsylvania native, De Puy, 52, comes to Newton from the First Baptist Church of Dearborn, Michigan, where he served as minister for seven years.

De Puy is an author and columnist, writing a monthly column for the national denominational magazine, "THE AMERICAN BAPTIST."

The Rev. Dr. William F. Keucher, president of the American Baptist Churches of the USA since 1979 will deliver the sermon at the installation service. He retired this fall from a pastorage with the Covenant Baptist Church in Detroit.

Other participants in the service will include the Rev. Susan De Puy McCone, and the Rev. Dr. H. Edward Whitaker, Area Minister of the American Baptist Churches of Massachusetts. Representatives from the Newton religious community will also be present.

Church members who will participate include the Rev. Mark M. Clinger, associate pastor, the Rev. George W. Peck, Dean of Andover Newton Theological School, Dr. David Jenkins, church moderator, and the Rev. Dr. Harold D. Moore, chairman of the Board of Deacons.

Special music will be provided by the Beacon Brass Quintet from Boston. The public is invited.

NCS has wide range of fall activities

NEWTON — This fall, Newton residents will have opportunities to spend a Sunday evening with Congressman Barney Frank, play Renaissance music, study Yiddish Theatre, and barter materials and services with other city residents.

"This season represents a very exciting period for Newton Community School," notes NCS Executive Director Joseph S. Baron. "NCS volunteers from across the city have developed an incredibly wide range of innovative programs for children, adults and seniors. Resource people — including musicians, local artists, and professionals widely known in their fields — will all be a part of the fall Community Schools programs."

One such pilot program is entitled the "Sunday Evening Series," and provides a format where distinguished speakers may present their insights into provocative current issues. Sponsored by the Cabot Community School, the series will present Congressman Barney Frank; Leslie Carruthers, deputy regional administrator for EPA; Lance Liebman, professor of law, Harvard University; Mark Moore, Guggenheim professor of criminal justice policy, Kennedy School of Government; Martin Zimmerman, associate professor of economics, Sloan School of Management, M.I.T.; and Donald Hafner, associate professor of political science, Boston College.

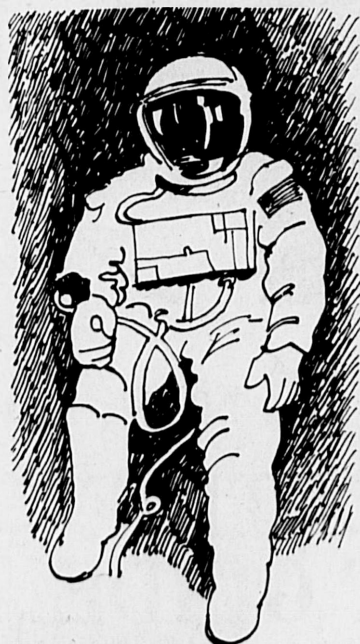

"We wanted to give Newton residents a chance to come together in a relaxed atmosphere, have a glass of wine, and discuss current issues with professionals who are knowledgeable in their fields," says Dottie Engler, Cabot Community School coordinator.

Focusing on such issues as Reagan economics, affirmative action, arms control and national security, the series will meet in the homes of participants. "Almost all of the speakers are local residents," Engler continued. "Often, everyone knows what their neighbors do for a living, but those people never have the chance to sit down and really discuss important issues with their friends and neighbors."

The Bowen Community School has also incorporated several new activities into its fall line-up. For children, two music groups will be offered. Sixteenth century music in two and three parts will be the theme of the 'Bowen Madrigals', and will be offered to students in the 4th through 6th grades. For string and woodwind players, the 'Bowen Chamber Orchestra' will play music from the classical repertory.

Adults will also have the choice of two musical groups, involving beginning and advanced Renaissance Music. Taught by Hope Ehn, M.M., the groups will play music from the 15th and 16th centuries and will combine Renaissance instruments (viols, drumhorns, lutes, shawm, etc.) with modern instruments such as strings, flutes, oboe and guitar.

The Ward/Underwood Community School will offer residents varied opportunities to study the theater. For those interested in Jewish Culture, Cladys Heitin will offer a four-session course entitled "The Yiddish Theatre — from Shtetl to 2nd Ave. to Revival." Recordings and readings will be used to discuss Yiddish theatre history from the Purimspiel to ghetto cafe theaters to present-day theater restoration attempts.

Newton police notes

Cab driver arrested at Marriott

NEWTON — A cab driver blocking the driveway of the Marriott Hotel was arrested after he refused to cooperate with Newton police officers.

Around 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Newton police officers patrolling the parking lot of the Marriott Hotel at 2345 Commonwealth Ave. were alerted to a cab driver blocking the driveway at the main door to the hotel. Police said the man, Bruce S. Cousineau, 33, of Jamaica Plain, was "jumping around suspiciously" in the front seat of the car and, with the motor still running, had the car pointed in the direction of the main door with the lights shining in.

According to police, the two officers at the scene asked the driver to roll down his window, but the driver refused. They also asked the driver to move his car, but got no response, police said.

Minutes later, Sgt. Frank MacKenzie arrived and advised the hotel security to keep guests away from the front door. After several attempts to get the driver to move the car, MacKenzie broke the front passenger side window and then placed the driver under arrest on charges of rude and disorderly conduct, police said. According to police, the driver was working for "L and H" taxi company.

Burglar breaks into Barclay Travel

NEWTON — For the second time in one month, Barclay Travel was the target of a suspicious break-in. Police said it is not known at this time how entrance was gained through the locked outer door of the building at 26 Peabody St., although it is estimated that the break-in occurred sometime after 6:30 p.m.

Wednesday and shortly before 9 a.m. Thursday.

The inner office door to the business had been jimmyed and $40 in bills from petty cash were stolen. A second business in the building, Newprint, also reported the theft of $15 from a desk drawer.

Equipment worth $1,660 stolen

NEWTON — Approximately $1,660 in equipment was reported stolen from Taylor Instrument Co. of 181 Wells Ave. early Thursday morning, police said.

Police said the theft occurred sometime after 5:45 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday. A front door lock was pryed open and missing were a video cassette recorder and a 19-inch color television.

Stereo equipment valued at close to $1,000 was stolen from a Highland St. resident apparently only minutes after he stepped out for an errand and left the front door unlocked.

Police said the resident left around 2 p.m. and that a clock, located in the same area as the stereo equipment, had apparently been unplugged when removing the stereo. Although the owner did not actually discover the theft until around 3:30 p.m., the clock was found stopped at 2:10 p.m.

Two nabbed after robbery attempt

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Two suspects were arrested last week and charged with beating and robbing at knife-point a 22-year-old Sudbury man at the Riverside MBTA station.

The suspects, Benjamin Wood, 19, of 1144 Brushhill Rd., Milton, and George Stuart-Vail, 18, of 16 Holly St., Burlington, were arrested shortly after the incident as the result of a positive identification of a witness at the scene who saw the three men leave the station together.

The victim told police he was at the Riverside MBTA stop shortly before 1 a.m. when two men approached him and offered him a ride. He began to walk with them toward the area where their car was supposed to be.

When they approached a field at the rear of 266 Grove St., one of the men allegedly grabbed the victim around the neck while the other held a knife to him. The victim told police that the man with the knife threatened, "Don't yell or talk or I'll cut you."

According to police, the victim said he was then hit over the head with a motorcycle helmet which knocked him to the ground. He said his wallet which contained several credit cards, some personal papers and a bank card were taken while he lay on the ground.

The victim said he was beaten until he fell unconscious. He estimates that he regained consciousness about 10 minutes later. He then alerted police from the Riverside station.

Police searched the area and found papers belonging to the victim. At 1:50 a.m., police went to Wood's family home on Aspen Ave. in Newton and were told he lived in Milton.

Milton police were alerted and went to Wood's home where they found and arrested both Wood and Stuart-Vail.

The pair are charged with armed robbery and assault and battery with a deadly weapon.

Blackwood named chief engineer by Marriott

NEWTON — Douglas G. Blackwood of Newton has been named chief engineer of the Marriott Hotel, Newton.

A long-time resident of Newton, Blackwood is a graduate of Newton Technical High School. He started with Marriott when the hotel opened in 1969 and was appointed assistant chief engineer in 1974. He was promoted to chief engineer in Springfield in 1980.

The husband of the former Cheryl Blaquere of Newton, Blackwood is the father of three children. He served with the Navy for two years as an engineman and later attended Wentworth Institute.

Intruder breaks window on Essex Rd

NEWTON — Nothing appears to be missing from an Essex Rd. home following a break-in Wednesday morning. Police said that thieves, after breaking a window to enter the basement, were apparently frightened away by workmen in the house.

NEW LOW RATES

Just prior to the air controller's strike, fierce competition for the air travel dollar had propelled the airline industry into a price tangle. Smaller airlines introduced no-frill, inexpensive shuttles between major cities which the major airlines had no choice but to match or beat in price. Major long-distance routes were also being flown at exceptionally low prices. Taking advantage of the low prices that still exist requires a thorough knowledge of the particular routes. Never before has your travel agent been so invaluable a part of making travel plans. As travel packages virtually spring up and disappear overnight, only your agent can give you an up-to-date rundown of the best routes and prices.

Our travel agents at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham, can do much more for you than offer expert advice and issue a ticket for the most direct flight at the best possible price. We can arrange hotel and resort accommodations, meals, local sightseeing and transfers of luggage and passengers between terminals and hotels. There is never any additional charge to you for our services. Call us today at 899-5668. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Fri. till 8, other times by appt.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist. These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program. To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Local fund-raiser

Transcript Correspondent

Cookbooks come and go, featuring everything from the joys of cheesecake to the adventures of chicken. But there is a cookbook that is both versatile and purposeful.

The Massachusetts Division of the American Cancer Society has recently published a recipe collection whose proceeds will go to support cancer research and education programs.

"Cook It In Massachusetts" is a cookbook comprised of the favorite recipes of local experienced chefs and amateur cooks--many of whom are residents of the Norfolk County area. Featured below are recipes from Rita Kahn of Norwood, Margot C. Pyle of Dedham, and Jeanette Haven of Newton.

The 300 donated recipes consist of foods from appetizers to desserts, including many international specialties. There are also sections on vegetarian dishes, popular restaurant selections, and modern cooking--microwave, crockpot, and food processor recipes. Diet and low-calorie creations are also included.

The cookbook has spiral binding and will conveniently lie flat on your kitchen counter.

"Cook It In Massachusetts" was made possible through the volunteer efforts of editor Marilyn Furtado of Fall River and many other American Cancer Society volunteers in 41 units throughout the state.

According to Karen Rouse, public information director for the Massachusetts Division, the group has sold close to 6,000 copies since September when the book became available to the public.

The cost of the cookbook is $6. For information call 235-6476.

'...a cookbook comprised of the favorite recipes of local experienced chefs and amateur cooks--many of whom are residents of the Norfolk County area.'

LAMB GALLIANO
Rita Kahn of Norwood

1 (5-pound) leg of lamb, boned and butterflied
1/2 cup Italian Galiano
liqueur
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup sesame seeds

Marinate leg of lamb in Galiano for 2-3 hours. When ready to broil, sprinkle with garlic powder (not garlic salt), then sprinkle sesame seeds on top. Broil at 500 degrees Fahrenheit, until crunchy. Turn meat over and broil on other side. This tastes better when made on outdoor gas grill. Makes 6-8 servings.

STUART'S TOMATOES AND ZUCCHINI
Margot C. Pyle of Dedham

2 tablespoons oil, olive or vegetable
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 medium zucchini, cut into 1/4-inch slices
1 (28-ounce) can whole tomatoes, cored, seeded, and broken up, with juice
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Heat oil in a large skillet; add onion and cook until translucent. Add zucchini slices; cook, stirring frequently for five minutes. Add tomatoes, juice, sugar, and seasonings. Mix well, cover, and simmer for at least 20 minutes. (May be kept at least possible simmering heat for an hour or more.) Delicious served with steak. Makes 4-6 servings.

BLACK WALNUT GINGER-BREAD WITH FROZEN APPLE CREAM
Jeanette Haven of Newton

Gingerbread:
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/4 cup butter
2/3 cup molasses
1-1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 teaspoons ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 egg
1/2 cup chopped black walnuts

Combine water, sugar, butter, and molasses in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring until butter is melted. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Combine flour, spices, and soda in a large mixing bowl. Stir in water mixture and egg; mix well. Stir in nuts. Pour batter into a greased and floured 9-inch square cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 40-45 minutes. Serve with Frozen Apple Cream.

Frozen Apple Cream:
1/2 cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons honey
1/2 cup applesauce

Whip cream until slightly thickened; gradually add honey and beat until thickened. Fold in applesauce. Freeze. Serve on warm gingerbread.

How to use empty schools

With an estimated 10,000 schools expected to be closed nationwide by the end of the 1980s because of declining enrollments, their conversion to new use may seem simple but can be a no-man's-land of booby traps.

"It's a much neglected art if it hasn't been practiced," says Dr. Robert F. Savitt, a pioneer, who learned the hard way as a former school superintendent in Plainville, N.Y.

"I said to the school board, 'I'll handle it,' and I soon found it was taking a great deal of my time and I was into a field that was highly specialized," said Savitt, who has since mastered its complexities and is now president of Guidelines Consultants Inc., in Great Neck, N.Y.

He said putting a school in mothballs is an option that should be done only as a last resort. First, there is vandalism no matter what the security. And second, people assume the building will require little or no maintenance. "Nothing could be further from the truth," he said.

In Waterbury, Conn., a 14-year-old boy was accused of the April 13 torching a frequent target of vandals, the vacant Webster elementary school, which was scheduled for needed housing conversion. The building was said to be a total loss.

Once a building is boarded up, it is not only an eyesore, but a psychological eyesore.

"The school probably hasn't been paid off by the school district yet and when taxpayers see those boards on the windows it becomes an irritant in their minds and they are apt to ask who made the decision to build the school in the first place," he said.

Since 1974, Educational Facilities Laboratories, a New York-based non-profit organization, has been providing direct assistance to school districts on planning for declining enrollment and reuse of surplus space.

Vacant school facilities can be a new resource, the agency says, and they can increase neighborhood stability by offering public services to benefit the broadened community. It regards its report, "Surplus School Space: Options and Opportunities," as the standard text on school reuse.

The agency notes that at the same time school enrollments are declining, the retired senior citizen population is growing. In Austin, Minn., seniors rented a vacated elementary school for $1 a year, and in Seattle, Wash., a food program operates for senior citizens in an under-used school.

In Gloucester, Mass., a grammar school built at the turn of the century was converted into subsidized housing for people over 55.

When will the declining enrollment stop?

That depends on the number of children per family. Census Bureau projections suggest if there were to be 1.7 children per family, it would continue until 1986 before it starts to rise.

With 2.1 children per family, the decline would bottom out in 1982

Royal couple back to work

LONDON (UPI) — Even royal honeymoons must end, and the honeymoon is ending for Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Wales — in the practical though not the romantic sense.

Since the splendor and magnificence of their wedding July 29, the 32-year-old heir to the throne and his 20-year-old princess have had themselves to themselves as much as any royal couple can.

Now it's back to work. A three-day tour of Wales Oct. 27-29. An art exhibition to open, a Buckingham Palace reception, a film festival to attend, a ceremonial luncheon — it's the royal round familiar to Charles but barely sampled by Diana, who will be making her official debut as Princess of Wales.

"To some extent there has been an attempt to reduce the pressures upon them," a Buckingham Palace spokesman said. "So their schedule is not excessively heavy during the autumn."

But "excessively heavy" is a relative phrase. For Diana especially, only a year from sequestered days as an unknown part-time kindergarten teacher, the list must seem daunting.

A dozen public functions, several royal "walkabouts," a gala dinner during a high-speed whisk through Rhyl, Llandudno, Bangor, Caernarvon, Cardiff — and that's just their first three days.

With hardly a break come a Buckingham Palace reception, a concert in grandiose Blenheim Palace, an evening of Indian dancing, a session on raising the 400-year-old Tudor warship Mary Rose, formal openings of the London Film Festival and the "Art of the Gonzagas" exhibition — "and so on right through the month," the palace spokesman said.

For the past three months, Charles and Diana's main public preoccupation has been keeping out of the public eye. They were remarkably successful.

The press was thwarted during their brief honeymoon starter at Broadlands, country estate of the late Lord Mountbatten, Charles's idol.

British newspapers went to extraordinary lengths to

Auto Smarts By BRAD SEARS

Dear Brad,
I have a 78 Plymouth Valore, 17,300 miles on it.

The problem: When I put it in reverse it will conk out, either immediately or after a few feet. Once when I went in for a sticker we had to push it out of the bay. No problem in any forward speed, and weather is not a factor at all. It happens in good and bad weather. Any help would be appreciated. I bought it new and gave up on the dealer.

Sometimes when I put my foot on the gas pedal it just may not conk out.
Peter Harrington

Dear Pete,
The only tie-in with reverse and your problem is the driving habits in reverse. You drive slow, in reverse than going forward so the defect in the car shows up. There are two areas to check, exhaust emissions control, especially the EGR (exhaust gas recirculator valve) and the carburetor.

Again, the problem should not be difficult to find following recommended tune-up procedures, which include checking the choke, emissions systems components, etc. I thought for a moment that there could be some binding in the automatic transmission, but after going over the schematics and specifications for the gear box, I think we can eliminate that. And that leads us right back to the carburetor and ignition system. I would look at the idle speed, timing fast idle, choke and EGR.

Dear Brad,
I am having a problem with my car. It's a 1979 V6 Buick Century. When the motor is warm and I take my foot off the gas to come to a stop, the motor shuts off just like you had turned the key off. It won't do it very often; sometimes I can stop 25 times before it will do it. The garage man said if it would do it in the yard of the garage he could probably find the problem, but I have stopped near the garage fifty times and it won't do it.

I have put in new spark plugs, new air filter, oiled the carburetor and put in a new electrode but it didn't help.
LEP

Dear LEP,
Louis - your type of problem is the most difficult to find. And I tend to agree with your mechanic. You could give the car to him and let him drive it for a few days, or over a weekend. I am sure he will find the problem. It sounds like a sticky float in the carburetor to me.

Dear Brad,
I have two questions you may have the answers to:

1. Does a 1980 Citation, 4-cylinder, manual be rustproofed by a system like "Rusty Jones" or Ziebart or is the rustproofing done at the factory or is it an added extra when one purchases the car?

2. The Citation's four cylinders, running rather hot in the warm seasons and without air conditioning rather uncomfortable, is there anything on the market like a windbreak for the car windows, with open windows the noise of the windstream and/or insects while driving can be lessened?
Hugo Grass

Dear Hugo,
Any automobile, regardless of make or number of cylinders, should have some sort of rustproofing here in New England. That is if you plan to keep the automobile for more than sixty days. Oh ya, factory rustproofing does take care of the car during the first three years of ownership, with the factory picking up the tab on any problems created through rust that have gone to the perforation point.

This means that you have to have a hole in your automobile due to rust before the factory will pick up the tab. But what happens after the three years? This is where Rusty Jones, Ziebart or any other good rustproofing processes take over. In shopping for a rustproofing for my new automobile, I would certainly read the manufacturer's warranty. And I think that the manufacturer's warranty for the rustproofing would mean as much to me as the actual application of the rustproofing itself. I would pick a good dealer, or a good independent applicator of the rustproofing process, make sure that the warranty covers the car for at least five years, and has a renewable clause, that means that the rustproofing protection can be extended almost indefinitely. This then makes the rustproofing a worthwhile investment on your automobile.

As far as Question #2 goes, all small cars are hotter inside than are their larger counterparts. Most people think that the small cars don't need air conditioning, and that small cars will be cooler in the summer. This is a misconception, due to the fact that the passenger compartment is closer to the engine, radiator, the catalytic converter and exhaust system, and the heat of the road itself. The inside of a small engine can rapidly heat up, due to the fact there is less cubic space of air to absorb the heat taken from outside sources. Windows wide open on a small car can rapidly destroy fuel economy, and that is the reason you bought a small car to begin with. Air conditioning is almost essential on these hot running small automobiles, otherwise the driver can end up with fried brains.

There are some windbrakes on the market for the car windows, so that the windows can be opened and the noises and windstream lessened to almost a bearable point. I would suggest that you check with a good automobile accessory house, who can probably provide these for you. But, not only does the windbreak keep the noise down, it reduces the effect of opening the window, making the inside of the car hot. My suggestion? - Have an air conditioner installed in the vehicle if the heat bothers you, you will save money, energy and temper in the long run.

this way: "My philosophy has always been that you play the cards that were dealt to you, that's how you play the game."

For 40 years, Barton lived in Newton Corner, but was forced to leave his apartment 15 years ago when the city built Bigelow Junior High on the location.

He now lives in Watertown, but is still active at the Eliot Church and has many friends in Newton, where for several years he was a tutor with the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program, at the Garden City Activity Center.

"House Beautiful" magazine held art competition in 1933 for a cover design and Barton's work was one of 12, out of more than 1000 submitted to be chosen that year. "It was the first time I submitted a design," Barton says proudly, as holds up the award winning cover. It's a colorful design depicting a variety of tools to be used for refurbishing a home.

"Autumn Twilight," an oil painting he did in 1945 following a fishing trip to Kokadjo, Me., is Barton's favorite. The pale yellow sky and still waters suggest a "quiet beauty, a feeling of eternity."

Like his other paintings, "Autumn Twilight" is not an exact replica of the site of his fishing trip. "You shouldn't try to reproduce something photographically. You should use a camera if you want to do that."

Instead, Barton relies on his memory and his imagination. An object should be filtered through the artist's imagination, according to Barton, who doesn't think that a painter should try to copy something in exact detail.

"You have an emotional reaction to something," says Barton, who stresses that he usually sees the bright side of life. "You might as well look on the bright side. That's the way to be."

Ken Barton, artist with a fresh outlook

NEWTON CORNER — A photograph in the 1925 "Newtonian" features a cheerful-looking young man who puckered his lips as he were about to burst into laughter.

"As happy as a clam at high tide," reads the caption in the Newton High School yearbook. Not the catchiest photo caption you'll ever read. But it was fitting for Kenneth Barton, a funny young man who utilized his artistic talents and good sense of humor to entertain fellow students with cartoons he created for the "Newtonian" and the school's newspaper. Even Barton, now 76-years-old, laughs when he sees that picture.

"Serious-looking fellow wasn't I," he says jokingly. "Yes, I was happy." Barton didn't go on to become a comedian or a cartoonist. His drawing talents, which took shape at the age of ten while he was confined to a wheelchair, expanded to a flair for oil painting with a gentle, child-like quality. His landscapes and portraits, some of them 50-years-old, were displayed recently at the Eliot Church in Newton Corner.

His facial expression is still the same, often puckering his lips as he did in the 1925 photograph. And his sense of humor, too, is still in tact.

"I still have the same outlook. You need a sense of humor to keep your sanity!"

Born in Hartford, Ct., Barton moved with his family to Newton Corner in 1919, shortly after he contracted polio. "My family thought I would be better off if we came to Boston where they knew more about polio and its treatment," he explains.

For six years, Barton didn't go to school as other young people did. Instead, he was confined to his home, while his mother and her friends tutored him. "They didn't have special classes and programs for children who couldn't go to a regular school," he remembers.

During the years that he was confined to a wheelchair, Barton began drawing with pencil. "I did it to amuse myself," says Barton, who was then fascinated with battleships. He'd draw large versions of ships pictured in books and magazines.

Several years later, Barton entered Newton High School at the age of 17, and took drawing and painting classes. Soon, Barton was making posters for various school drives and sports events, as well as drawing cartoons for the newspaper, where he was an art editor.

"I'd do what I thought was funny," Barton remembers. "I'd take a real serious quote, like Lady Macbeth saying, 'Out damn spot,' and have her scrubbing a floor."

Although Barton had been absent from school for six years, Barton says his return "wasn't difficult." There were some adjustments, Barton remembers, but they were mostly typical teenage problems.

"I feel I went to Newton High School at a very good time. We had excellent teachers," says Barton, who thinks the current standards at the high schools are not as high. When Barton attended Newton High School, it was one of the top ten in the country. Barton was also active at that time with the Eliot Church, where he is still a member, as well as the church treasurer. Young people in the church often put on plays and other productions, and Barton would design and paint the scenery. "I did that through high school, college and for some years later." Polio did not limit his ability to paint. In fact, as an art student in Boston, following high school, Barton was able to stand for two hours, supported by crutches, as he painted. "It would get tiring after a while," he remembers. "It cuts off the circulation, you know." Barton doesn't like to dwell on the fact that he had polio, and alludes to his handicap

School enrollment down; officials worried

Largest single decline

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Newton public schools are currently experiencing the largest single decline in student enrollment, a drop of 6.4 percent this year, Dr. Vincent Silluzio, director of research and planning for the schools, told the School Committee Monday night.

Private schools, on the other hand, are attracting an increasing number of Newton students. Silluzio told the committee the percentage of school-age children in Newton currently attending private schools is 15 percent (up from 11 percent in 1974) and "may go as high as 16.5 percent this year."

According to the annual enrollment report, the number of students in the Newton schools dropped by 791 students this year, while Silluzio had originally projected a decline of 592 students.

Silluzio said the 11 percent error, the largest error in 11 years, was partly due to an unexpectedly large drop in the number of kindergartners (by 51 students) because of parents not placing their four-year-olds in the Newton public schools. This phenomena is Better publicity pondered

NEWTON — Do the Newton Public Schools need to launch a public relations campaign?

According to one School Committee member, alarmed by the increasing flight to private schools as stated in the Enrollment Analysis Report presented Monday night, it's not such a bad idea.

"I think that the school system is in good shape given all of the horrors that we have been through," Sandra Fleishman of Ward 7 told the committee. "Yet the number of parents who increasingly chose to send their kids to private schools is alarming me."

"I think the system needs to have an aggressive campaign to retain students and to help parents maintain confidence in the Newton Schools," she said.

According to enrollment figures presented by Dr. Vincent Silluzio at the meeting at Bigelow Junior High, the number of school-age children attending private schools is increasingly steadily in Newton and currently represents 15 percent of the school-age population, up from 11 percent in 1974.

Mayor Arthur Clark wagered their jobs on the outcome of Saturday's football game between the two cities. Photo by Richard Lodge

Super Bowl and mayors' jobs are at stake Saturday

When the Newton North Tigers face off against the Waltham High Hawks Saturday afternoon there will be more at stake than just a chance at a Super Bowl berth.

For Newton Mayor Ted Mann and Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark the stakes involve their jobs.

Monday afternoon Mann and Clark made a friendly wager on the game at Newton North's Dickinson Stadium with the winning mayor taking over the reins of the losing mayor's city for a day.

Mayor Clark issued the challenge, vowing that his Hawks would walk away with the game and Mann good-naturedly replied.

"I accept that challenge," Mann said. "Your kids are real good this year, and it's so good to have the twin cities engage in this kind of challenge that may have national implications."

Both teams go into Saturday's game with 7-0 records.

Asked what he would do if Newton North wins on Saturday and he gets to run the city of Waltham for a day Mayor Mann quipped, "I'll put Waltham in my wife's name."

Mayor Clark said the first thing he would do if the Waltham Hawks win the game and he takes over Mann's City Hall office for a day would be to "carry out a recruiting process to get some ball players on our team."

The two mayors, who plan to sit together near the 50-yard line for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. game, said they hoped the wager would become an annual event.

No specific date for collecting on the wager has been set, the mayors said, and it has not been determined how the winning mayor would also keep tabs on the activities in his home city, once installed in the other mayor's office for the day.

In closing Clark joked, "The better team will win Saturday and it will be a great victory night for Waltham."

By Gladys Damon
Correspondent

NEWTON—John Forbes Kerry of Chestnut Hill, former First Assistant District Attorney of Middlesex County, is the second Newton resident to declare his candidacy for lieutenant governor in next year's election. In addition to Lois Pines, also of Newton, Kerry is running in a crowded field of Democrats for the second highest office in the Commonwealth.

"I believe in putting one's body on the line," the much-decorated Vietnam veteran told his audience at the Sunday Brunch Club for Singles, in Newton Highlands. Talking about political activism since the Vietnam War, Kerry said, "This is a perilous moment in world history. I'm worried about what Ronald Reagan is doing. He is making catastrophic moves. There is the tragic possibility of a confrontation. He is bringing us closer to the brink. I am not a pacifist. I believe you have to defend yourself. But you have to preserve your ideologies. Therefore, it is essential to put people into leadership roles who believe what you believe in."

Kerry acknowledged that the crescendo of political activism sparked between the years 1972 and 1978 has peaked. It has dropped to a near-standstill after the many deceptions and frustrations of that era. He cited "the war that wouldn't end" and the "secret plan" of former President Nixon for ending that war, which still remains "a secret." Watergate and "the mendacity of our leaders" as the leading causes of citizen disillusionment.

"It's tough to be in public office nowadays," he continued. "The people just don't believe you anymore. There has been burnout. People are feeling tired and washed out. In the last couple of elections I have never seen an electorate so disenchanted and cynical, with the lowest voter registration and turnout in years."

And what may be even more serious, according to Kerry, is that "People no longer think they can be of help in changing things around. I don't blame them. They want to know what's going on."

"You have to have personal involvement and realize we have a real stake in the system. You can get the programs you want if you become politically active and support the candidates who stand for what you believe in," he said.

Kerry had harsh words for his own party's role. "We Democrats lost the election (1980) last time because we were stupid in relation to the economy. We tried to cope with economic problems by ignoring the concepts on which this country was built. We were trying to help others get their piece of the pie. We tried programs such as CETA to provide what business should, but doesn't, provide."

"But we had to learn the greatest lesson of all. Through the private enterprise system, money seeks its greatest return. The Democrats ignored these basic economic principles and focused on social problems instead. They were shortsighted and not smart about the consequences."

"But I remain optimistic. I'm still an idealist. I've been involved in some very important issues that have made an impact on the recent history of this country. Despite drastic cuts and cutbacks in many areas, there have also been great gains in the field of civil rights, there are new laws on the books for women, and even the air we breathe."

"As Robert F. Kennedy said when he visited South Africa, 'The greatest of all dangers is futility.' It's time to get active again."

He's the picture-perfect senior

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Eddie Swail is living proof that you don't have to look like Brooke Shields to be a successful model.

Swail, 74, retired from one job and began a new and exciting career in magazine and television modeling. "There's definitely a need for older models," says Swail, whose distinguished-looking face has been used in advertisements for Polaroid Corporation, Boston Gas Company and a variety of other businesses.

"I've been very fortunate," says the life-long Newton Highlands resident. "I've had a lot of work."

An outgoing man whose always had a flair for performing, Swail loves modeling because it gives him a chance to express himself as an actor, especially utilizing his expressive face. "I'm great at posing!" he says. Swail, who is also a lay preacher at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Newton Highlands, has posed as "Scrooge" for a Christmas-time Polaroid advertisement; as a 19th century gentleman for Boston Gas and a millionaire for a national investment firm.

Though Swail is often cast as a grandfather or distinguished gentleman type, he doesn't have an image. Like the world-famous models who are well-known for their sexy, exotic or sophisticated style, Swail says he'd like an image, too.

"I'd like to be a swinging grandfather type," he explains, "being photographed with a young granddaughter bride. How does that sound?"

Swail's fantasy image is not unlike Swail himself.

Swail is hardly a run-of-the-mill senior citizen. He avoids senior citizen's discussion groups, retired-men's club meetings or senior outings. And he is not a grandfather.

"I'm a breed apart," says Swail, who'd rather put on his dancing shoes and paint the town. "I'd rather be move moving, not sitting."

Swail is also a singer, and performs regularly at cocktail lounge in Millis. "I love to sing and dance!"

Shunning the senior-citizen image, Swail wears youthful clothes, such as preppy shirt and canvas shoes, and reads fashion magazines, such as "Vogue," admiring beautiful women. "They asked me once to join the ministry," says Swail referring to his preacher role at the church. "But I like girls too much!"

Swail's modeling career began a few years ago, after he retired from 50 years in retailing. Before leaving his job as manager of the Stearn's Children's Store in Newton Centre, Swail was approached by an acquaintance who owned a modeling agency. "She thought she could use me (as a model)," remembers Swail, who was excited about the idea.

After organizing a professional portfolio, featuring pictures of Swail modeling in different areas in Newton, he began his career through the modeling agency.

One of the funniest incidents occurred while Swail was posing for a photographer in front of Newton City Hall. It was an election year, when a woman passed Swail, who was dressed in an expensive pinstriped suit, on the City Hall steps. "Are you one of the candidates?" asked the woman; she observed, "You look better than any of the other ones!"

Swail was being photographed for a portfolio snapshot. He's also modeled around Newton Highlands, including several picture-taking sessions at Chrysal Lake, where he and his wife walk every day.

"We get up at 6 a.m. every morning and walk up to the square," says Swail, who says the long walk and eating small amounts of food often during the day help to keep his 6-foot, 160-pound body trim.

Modeling is a good career for seniors, according to Swail, who recently helped a friend break in to the business.

"You need about $200 to start for the portfolio pictures," says Swail, whose face has been published in TV Guide; Stars and Getting old's no drag for this pair

Sandra L. Rotberg
Correspondent

Newton-The famous song lyrics "What a drag it is getting old" may be true for the Rolling Stones, but not for Dr. Nathan Fineberg of Newton.

At an age where most people have long since retired and are searching for the nearest rocker, the 81-years-young doctor of Otolaryngology (ear, nose and throat) keeps his body and mind young with daily exercise, a healthy diet and his favorite hobby, sculpting.

"I live by what I tell my patients," says Fineberg. "Exercise, but according to your age and capacity." Fineberg uses his car as little as possible. When going short distances, he'll jog a little, then walk a little. During the week he and his wife will take three to four mile walks. Every morning and night he does routine calisthenics along with yoga.

Until five years ago, Fineberg stood on his head, but when he developed a touch of bursitis from sculpting granite, he had to stop.

"I taught my wife Bertha how to stand on her head," said Fineberg. "Now she stands on her head twice. Once for me and once for her."

He attributes some of his good health to genes. His father lived to be 89 and his mother to 91. The rest is exercise and a healthy diet.

A graduate of Boston University School of Medicine in 1930, he celebrated his 50th class reunion last year by giving the school a solid granite waterfall (which took over one year to complete) that he designed and sculpted.

The waterfall is decorated with symbols that intertwine his medical and personal life. One symbol is an eye which represents his wife and son, both ophthalmologists. "And water," he explains, "is a symbol of life."

His feelings towards patients are compared with the old time family doctor, when people would call all hours of the night and doctor's would go to their homes to treat them. "I grew up in those times," said Fineberg, "and carried the same concept with me through my professional career."

Times have changed. In his day, people didn't have cars. Students went to school by streetcars, took sandwiches for lunch and there was no such thing as a dormitory. Fineberg said, "I grew up in an era where we had to work, struggle and fight all the way."

"Medicine has changed drastically," he continued. "When I first started practicing, there was no such thing as an antibiotic. I saw a lot of abscessed ears, pneumonia was rampant and meningitis just isn't seen anymore. People didn't live long enough to develop cancer. The big problems were infections and now we have medication to combat these illnesses."

Married for over 40 years with grown children, Fineberg reflects that his home life was always a priority. In summer, the family would picnic together and travel the country. In winter, they would gather together to play music as a family ensemble. Today, his son plays french horn with a symphony in Georgia, along with practicing ophthalmology.

Fineberg and his wife Bertha, who goes by her maiden last name of Offenbach professionally, continue to keep their professions active by sharing the first floor offices of their 19-room home.

Dr. Nathan Fineberg, 81-years-young, sits with his wife Bertha and self portrait sculptures.

Working three and a half days a week, Fineberg considers his current practice a leisurely one, although he leaves two days open for emergencies. "I hate to see anyone in pain," he says. "Especially an old patient of mine." There are some patients he has treated for over 45 years.

Summers are spent at his second home in Gloucester, where he commutes to Newton two days a week to see patients. Picking berries, going to the beach and taking conservation walks every Sunday are some of the activities he shares with his wife. It is here where most of his sculpting is done.

His interest in working with sculpture stemmed from his skills as a plastic surgeon. Fineberg said he needed a hobby to relax him from the strain of working. He still has pieces that were made for his mother when he was only eight.

A sculptor for over 30 years, Fineberg still has no favorite medium. He works with them all—varieties of marble, olive wood from Israel, Coca Cola from the Amazon, wax, tree stumps, different stones and aluminum. A piece of driftwood that he found on the beach sat on his front porch for three years. One day he saw in it the face of an old man leaning forward on a cane. It now stands in his office entitled "Old Man with a Stick."

He has received awards and recognition by the New England Journal of Medicine, Rockport Art Association and has shared group and juried shows throughout New England. Although medicine is still primary, the height of his ambition is to have his work in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts or the Metropolitan Museum in New York. "Sculpting has a different type of recognition than medicine," claims Fineberg.

Fineberg nor his wife (who is 71 and a former student of his when he was teaching medical school) have no plans of retiring. Bertha Fineberg (which she uses socially) is interested in the Women's Medical Society and is the incoming president for the Hypnosis Society.

As for Nathan Fineberg, he says, "I love my work, the people and want to continue to be of help. I don't expect to have the strength or mental ability I did at 40. We change and fortunately the change is slow."

Bertha and Nathan Fineberg will keep up with their diet and exercise and continue with what they're doing according to their capacity. Fineberg wants to live up to what he tells his patients and he tells them this, "I hope you live to be 120, but when you reach 100, I want you to feel like 20." Now who said it's a drag getting old?

Better communication eyed Enrollment decline noted

Silluzio predicted.

"I'm very concerned about a trend and I just don't think the school system can sit back and afford to wait until we have 18 percent or higher," Fleishman warned.

Noting that the elimination of a school newspaper in a recent budget may "not have been such a good idea," Fleishman said, "We cannot rely on outside agencies to report what's good about the Newton schools."

Committee member Susan Silbey of Ward 4 countered, "Publicity is only as good as what is behind it. Only when people are satisfied will they keep their children here."

Emphasizing that some of the lamenting over cuts under Proposition 2 1/2 may have been "counter-productive," Nancy Mann of Ward 3 said, "I think we've got to be careful what we say during budget time."

"Something that has concerned me for a number of years is fact that our class sizes vary so greatly from school to school and even within schools," she said. "It's my view that we cannot afford classes of 16. We have several kindergartens here of 16 and we also have kindergartens that are huge."

Katherine Jones of Ward 2 said uncertainty about junior high reorganization, four-year high schools and kindergarten class size are issues which parents are concerned about and which need to be addressed.

"I don't think that we can deal with it by public relations because what really affects people is what their experience has been," Jones said.

Jones also said that schools with recent changes in administration appear to be schools with some of the greatest flight to private schools.

Superintendent Aaron Fink said the school system is currently caught in the "trap" of on the one hand saying it needs more money and is "suffering," while, on the other hand, trying to convince parents "everything is fine."

Silbey said that of the complaints she most frequently hears from parents, "very rarely does it require greater expenditure of money to meet those demands."

These demands are "higher expectations" and "clearer expectations," she added. "I think that so long as we think that quality depends on more money then we are damned because we aren't going to get more money."

referred to as "out-migration" by the enrollment report.

"Out-migration" represents both students leaving the public schools for private or parochial schools as well as families moving out of the city. However, Silluzio stated in the report, the number of students leaving to enter a private school has increasingly become a larger share of the total "out-migration."

The net out-migration this year was almost three times as large as the average experienced over the last five years, Silluzio said. In 1980-81, 189 more students left than entered the system compared with a five-year average of 66 students per year.

The report also found that public school enrollment had decreased steadily since the 1967 boom of 18,424 students with a total decline during that time of 36.9 percent. However, he emphasized, two-thirds of the decline has occurred in the last six years.

Other figures in the report showed that the largest declines had been in elementary enrollment and that total enrollment on the north side of the city had declined faster than either the south or central areas of the city.

F.A. Day Junior High earned the distinction of being the only junior high school which did not decrease in enrollment this year, and instead had 18 more students than Silluzio had predicted. The report also showed Day to be the most popular out-of-district school in the city.

"One bit of good news, if there is any in this report," Silluzio quipped, "is that births increased in Newton in 1981."

"Last year there were 752 children born in Newton which represents the first time since 1972 when births went over 700," he said.

Newton Centre dedicates its piece of the rock

Dozens of Newton residents gathered in Newton Centre last week to get a close look at the community sculpture project which involved many people, under the direction of Lilli Ann Killen Roseberg, and took some six months to complete.

The planning stages for the Newton Centre community art project, part of the Arts in the Parks program, included discussion between (from left) fiber artist Dora Hsiung, Mayor Ted Mann, printmaker Alice Aranow, actress Frances Shrand and Judy Dore of the Newton Rec. Dept.

Artist Lilli Ann Killen Rosenberg worked with members of the community who each added their own touch to the work of art unveiled in Newton Centre last week.

Mayor Theodore Mann praised artist Lilli Ann Killen Roseberg during groundbreaking ceremonies which marked the start of the six-month long Newton Centre sculpture project unveiled last week.

George M. Levy, of the Newton Centre Improvement Association was a happy man who pitched in as one of the leading forces behind the Newton Centre community sculpture project unveiled at the corner of Langley Road last week.

Edison official warns of complacency

One of New England's utility executives last week warned regional consumers that complacency about the energy crisis can only lead to a "false sense of security."

Thomas J. Galligan, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Boston Edison Company said a continued dependence on foreign oil coupled with the continued threat of war in the Middle East makes a mockery of a sense of comfort being felt by American consumers in general and New England consumers in particular.

"The gas lines are gone, the price of oil has stabilized — for the time being at least — and I sense a feeling of comfort and complacency," Galligan said.

In a speech delivered before the annual meeting of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce Galligan said, "The comfortable period we are experiencing will not last for two reasons: New England remains dependent on foreign oil and the day-to-day threat of war in the Middle East means that our oil supply is constantly in jeopardy."

Police OT is okayed

NEWTON — The aldermanic Finance Committee and Public Safety Committee both gave initial approval of $40,000 from budget reserve Monday night to cover police overtime costs caused by vacancies on the force.

Police Chief William Quinn said that much of the overtime resulted from 12 vacancies on the force which will be reduced when 11 new officers hit the streets by the end of December. The $40,000 from budget reserve was earmarked for police overtime.

Three recent openings as a result of resignations and a retirement, Quinn said, will be filled as soon as possible.

Quinn said the funds will cover overtime costs for the next four months, adding that he will be forced to return to aldermen in February or March for an additional overtime request of approximately $50,000.

Quinn said the department's budget is "very tight."

"We don't have any special squads out or anything," he said.

Alderman Lisle Baker pointed out that the board is anxious to defray overtime costs. Quinn, however, claimed that the department will spend $100,000 less than last year in overtime.

BATH, ENGLAND
The town of Bath is Britain's only hot water spa. The hot spring water was once thought to have curative value. In the 18th century, the Romans discovered the town and built beautiful baths there. Today, Bath remains little changed. You can visit the Roman baths and the magnificent cathedral Bath Abbey. See the Assembly Rooms, which include the famous card room that Dickens wrote about and the world's greatest costume exhibit.

The great social center in Jane Austen's day was the Pump Room where you can still drink hot spring water from a bubbling fountain or sit and drink tea while a small orchestra plays. Many other unique and historical cities, towns, and hamlets are located in the English countryside, which will enhance your visit to Britain.

There's no time like right now for a holiday in Britain and our staff at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham looks forward to planning it with you. AG's office is at fault

The recent intervention by Attorney General Frank Bellotti's office into a house raffle sponsored by the Newton Kiwanis Club has created an unfortunate good guy, bad guy situation.

The local club had only the best of intentions, in keeping with its tradition of public service, when it began the sale of tickets on a house located on the South Shore.

The house raffle idea has been successful for other groups in the state this year but each time the AG's office has intervened at some point in the ticket sale process, claiming there might be unresolved questions tied in with the state's gambling laws.

The local Kiwanis Club approached the AG's office early in the planning stage of the raffle, seeking guidance on how best to run the event within the law.

The AG did not respond since that office is charged not with giving legal advice, but rather, administering the laws in the process.

Since the attorney general put a halt to ticket sales in Newton on the grounds there may be unanswered questions about the title-holder of the house the Kiwanis Club comes off looking like the bad guys, the ones who ignored the laws or approached the fund-raiser in ignorance.

Such is obviously not the case.

If, as Bellotti's office has said, the newness of the house raffle syndrome needs to be studied for its legality under existing laws, that should have been done long ago. To stop the raffle in midstream shows ineptitude on the part of the AG's office and wrongfully casts a shadow of doubt on the intent and intelligence of the local Kiwanis Club.

Staying in shape

The voters, or at least some of them, have spoken again in Newton.

The majority turned out for Ted Mann, against four incumbent aldermen and in favor of a nuclear arms limitation question.

They enjoyed sunny skies and a crisp autumn day to go to the polls.

And they braved innumerable candidates' debates, countless political flyers on their doorsteps and even a last minute flurry of activity over a controversial letter of endorsement by a local special interest group.

Yet more than 40 percent of the registered voters in the city went down to their precinct voting stations, stood in line in some cases, and took just enough time off to vote.

It is never an easy thing to vote. The voter has to listen to what the candidates say, assess how he or she feels about them and then actually take the time, make the effort, to go to the polls. It is not the least bit habit forming.

Yet each voter made his or her own individual statement about how this city will be run in the coming years. It was not a bad exercise, since it comes about so infrequently.

Too bad so many people are out of shape.

Graphically speaking

Lame duck season: Don't shoot

RUNNER UP

Okay, you know who won the mayor's race last week right? Ted Mann. And Bruce Marquis of Waban finished second in the two-way race.

But who finished third?

Got you on that one?

Although The Graphic staff was up until the wee hours of the morning last Wednesday tabulating the election returns it wasn't until that afternoon that Graphically speaking got a tip on who the third place finisher was. Larry Scott of the Highlands.

Who? Larry Scott, a teacher at Bunker Hill Community College. And we got that unofficial scoop straight from the teacher's mouth.

Seems that Larry, a Newton Highlands Area Council member, received a few write-in votes from some admiring students. Not bad when you can say you finished third in the race for the mayor's office in Newton, unless of course the person to whom you are speaking knows there were really only two people running.

Asked if he had plans to try again for the big City Hall office, Larry said he just hadn't decided yet.

Only one thing for sure, though. Look out Ted Mann.

GIVE THAT MAN A BLUE RIBBON

Speaking of the election last week, the crowd at Ted Mann's victory party in the Sidney Hill Country Club ballroom was an interesting lot.

When Hizzoner took the mike to thank his supporters and talk about his plans for the future, the entire front row standing in admiration had an average age of about five years old.

The kids, you see, got the best seats in the house.

One of the more conspicuous supporters in attendance was outgoing Alderman Mark White, who ran against Mann and Bruce Marquis in the preliminary contest in September.

You couldn't miss Mark since he sported a huge orange "Ted Mann" ribbon on his coat lapel.

Seems like only yesterday it was a "Mark White" button, but fashions do change.

REROUTING TRAFFIC

The Newton Police School traffic supervisors took a little break recently from their corner duties and dropped by the Burton Convalescent Home and Elliot Manor Nursing Home to bring some Halloween cheer to residents there.

The supervisors showed up with freshly-baked cupcakes and a Halloween bat for each nursing home resident.

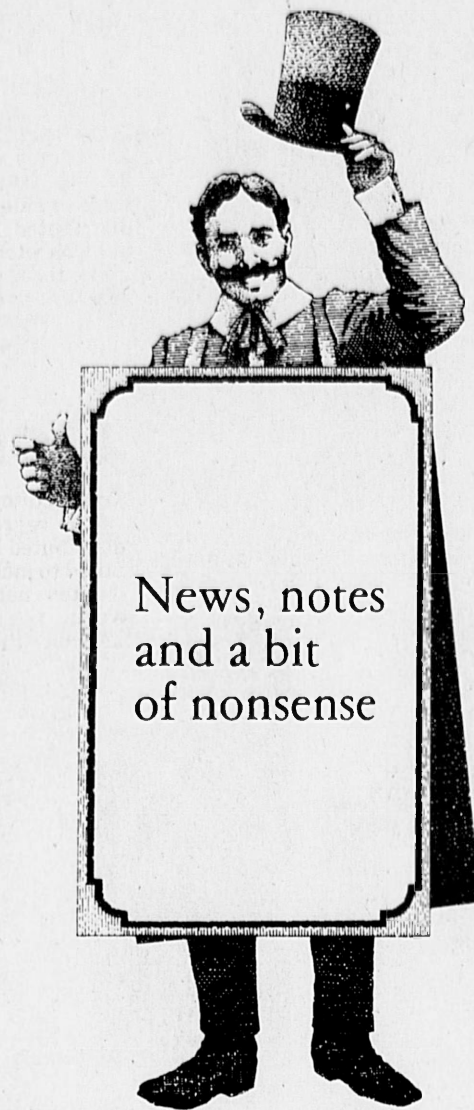

Along with chairperson Mary Andersen, the cupcake bakers included Carolyn Alexander, Barbara Athy, Anita Braceland, Florence Cair, Joan Calabro, Nina Calderone, Norma Chisholm, Angie Clark, Nancy Daniel, Beverly Deverix, Janyce Jennings, Barbara Leehan, Judi Notartomaso and Maureen O'Donnell.

Bats off to you ladies.

FULL HOUSE

Barney Frank's open house on Sunday at his new West Newton office was a smashing success, according to his press secretary Jim Dorsey.

Among the more than 150 residents and notables were Rep. Joe DeNucci, candidate for "It was packed," Jim Dorsey told Graphically speaking this week. "We thought we had a lot of nice space in there until we got about 150 people in at one time. Then it was like a cattle car."

No offense intended, folks, but it was crowded. That made it more of a good old-fashioned house warming, as Barney came home to Newton.

OVER THE TOP

The Retired Men's Club of Newton achieved something of a landmark recently when its 1000th member was inducted.

The club, open to all retired men from Newton and surrounding towns, meets on alternate Thursdays at 9:30 a.m. at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church.

On the Thursday when regular meetings are not held there's always a lively discussion group. So for all you early risers, feel free to join in. The group also has a number of "side clubs" according to publicity head H.J. McDade, for those interested in such things as golf, bridge, bowling, hobbies and even good old walking.

The next meeting of the group is Thursday, Nov. 19.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

It seems just about everybody knew about Gov. King's veto of the bottle bill even before it happened. But in the mail last week The Graphic received a release from Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill which was somewhat curious.

"Upon learning that King had vetoed the bottle bill for the second time in three years," the release read, "O'Neill said 'the governor is still afraid to challenge the status quo'."

We've all heard the stories about how Tom and Ed don't talk much anymore so it leads one to wonder whether Little Tip learned about the veto from the horse's mouth or by reading it in the papers.

REUNION TIME

The Newton High class of '32 is looking forward to its 50th reunion (and it seems like only yesterday...)

So now reunion committee member Mary Hogan is looking for several missing classmates.

If you were in the class and are missing, or know someone who might be, give her a call at 527-0485.

It's a once in a lifetime thing.

GOING QUACKERS

When outgoing Alderman Mark White took the floor at a recent aldermanic session to deliver what was termed his "lame duck" alderman's speech there was a bit of commotion in the crowd.

Alderman Edward Richmond sat back and quacked and honked during White's speech.

Some in the crowd thought the honking and squawking was actually a pretty good imitation of a canvasback but others likened the noise to that of the common wood duck.

Be advised that if you do any hunting in the marshes around Newton this fall, look before you shoot. You could be eliminating a key vote at City Hall.

(Compiled by The Graphic staff)

Jackson, Homestead's unique guest

By Lieselotte Willoughby

When Major Timothy Jackson built his new home on Washington Street in Newton in 1809 he could not foresee the importance this home, built for the comfort of his family, would assume over the decades to come. Some years later, when William Jackson, successful Newton businessman and abolitionist, occupied the house with his wife and 18 children, he gave shelter in his cellar to escaped slaves until they could safely move to eventual freedom in Canada. This "secret place," a station on the Underground Railroad, can still be seen by visitors today, for the Jackson Homestead is now Newton's Historical Museum.

Thousands of people have come to see the house, its exhibits, its treasures; some stayed a while, learned something about Newton's past, worked there, had fun. But last week a very special guest appeared. He came uninvited, stayed a while, and caused quite a stir.

It was during one of the history classes, held there regularly, when Dusha Scott, the director, took the children into the "office," which in one corner sports a 300 year old well, which remains from the old salt box house built on the same site in 1670 by Edward Jackson, one of Newton's earliest settlers. The well is indoors now and covered with glass. For some reason attention to the historic explanations wasn't as keen as it usually is — in fact, nobody much listened, because 30 feet below ground level, when the light was turned on to reveal the depth of the well, the children discovered a skunk! In the midst of a lot of excitement a totally disbelieving Mrs. Scott had to acknowledge the fact that another distinguished visitor had made it to the Jackson Homestead.

What does one do with a skunk in one's well? The Newton Police Department through its Animal Control section was glad to help. A Havahart trap was lowered into the well baited with crackers. But Jackson, the skunk, was smart. He tripped it several times, but never got in. For a week work at the office practically came to a standstill and had to be relocated while loads of people paid Jackson a visit, including Officers Rivers and MacDonald from the Police Department, depending on who was on duty. This was a sensitive situation, no matter how you spelled it.

At City Hall Mayor Mann inquired about progress. Commissioner Thomas told the Jackson Homestead staff — if the skunk is alive it is the responsibility of the police — if he is dead it is a matter for Public Works. Jackson remained passive and unimpressed. Eventually the Animal Rescue League lent its expertise. They came with a special trap, looking more like a cage, and a can of tuna fish. Jackson took the bait, he must have been starving. Gently the trap was lifted out of the well, covered with a rug, and carefully moved out of the house. Jackson, the skunk was returned to nature, without leaving his calling card. Everybody was greatly relieved.

How did he get into the well in the first place? Speculation is that he was nosing around the house at ground level for ant eggs or similar skunk delicacies, found a crack and plunged into his temporary prison. Everyone who saw him agreed that he was very attractive with a lot of white in his soft fur.

Life and work has returned to normal at the Jackson Homestead; but Jackson the skunk's visit is another chapter in the yet unwritten book of wonderful stories about this historic old house.

(Lieselotte Willoughby of Waban is past president of The Jackson Homestead.)

How recycling works other places

By Betsy Lewenberg

From time to time, this column will highlight a successful recycling program. Today's column features recycling in Islip, N.Y.

Islip, a town composed of 14 communities on New York's Long Island with a total population of 300,000, operates what probably is the largest curbside collection program for bottles, cans and paper on the eastern coast of the United States.

Approximately 220-250 tons of newspaper, corrugated cardboard, glass, cans and plastic bottles are collected by private contractors each Wednesday and brought to the town operated recycling center at the former incinerator. The recyclables, which are all collected together, are weighed and then dumped into the old incinerator pit. From there they are scooped up and deposited onto a series of conveyor belts. First, the corrugated cardboard is handpicked from the other materials. The remaining recyclables are put through a trommel (a rotating tube that has holes which segregate small from large objects). Paper emerges from the end of the trommel. The glass, cans and plastic fall through holes in the trommel onto another conveyor belt. Steel and bimetal cans are then magnetically separated from the glass, plastic and aluminum. The aluminum and plastic are handpicked, leaving mixed colors of glass. The recyclables are now ready for the town trucks to transport to various markets.

The creation of the Islip recycling plant involved a capital investment of $35,000. Equipment purchases — $8,000 for a trommel, $8,000 for a magnetic separator plus various conveyor belts, other assorted items and building improvement — represent the bulk of the investment. The initial cash outlay was relatively small because Islip utilized an existing building, several vehicles in its fleet and other equipment where available.

Islip's recycling program has been in operation for almost one year. The impetus for the program came from the prospect of a state mandated shutdown of the town landfill unless source separation recycling were initiated. In order to insure that the program succeeds, Commissioner Thomas J. Hroncich of the Department of Environmental Control took the following steps:

— Made the program mandatory and imposed a fine for violation of the ordinance (to date it has rarely been invoked, mainly because the volume of materials recycled is as much as they can handle at present).

— Encouraged recycling by allowing private truckers as well as residents to deposit recyclables at the center free of charge, unlike the deposit of refuse for which a fee is imposed.

— Encouraged recycling by instituting a system that would be simple to participate in, although more complicated at the processing end.

The results speak for themselves. In less than one year participation has steadily increased. Approximately 30 percent of the residents recycle and about 10 percent of Islip's refuse is recycled rather than dumped. The gap between the operating costs of approximately $18,000 per month and the estimated revenues of $15,000 per month is rapidly narrowing as participation continues to grow. And if the avoided landfill costs of $8 per ton (savings incurred by not dumping recyclables as refuse) are included in the calculations, the program is operating at a profit.

Although local officials initiated the mandatory recycling program under duress, citizens of Islip have easily adapted to it, primarily due to the work of Commissioner Hroncich. His enthusiastic, optimistic and innovative spirit permeates all facets of the program. He and his community provide a positive example of a progressive solution to the problem of solid waste disposal.

Reader urges support for control of arms race

To the editor:

The ad-hoc committee of citizens which worked to support the Nuclear Weapons Freeze referendum question on the Nov. 3 ballot is much encouraged by the better than three to one margin of endorsement by those Newton voters who answered the question. This is a substantially higher victory margin than on last year's "Jobs with Peace" and N-Power Moratorium questions. It is evidence, we believe, of the growing popular base for this critical campaign — one which must rapidly expand to the proportions of a true mass movement if governments are to control the nuclear arms race and avoid eventual, global disaster.

The emergency campaign was mobilized three weeks before the election when local activists learned that the question had been placed on the ballot as a consequence of its endorsement last June by the Board of Aldermen. The support which poured in in that short interval testifies to a depth of citizen concern which the vote tallies do not communicate. 15,000 leaflets were written, printed, financed, and distributed. Some 56 volunteers worked at all Newton polls but one!

The three to one margin was achieved despite clear handicaps other than them. Newton, with its decentralized village structure and its lack of a predominant media instrument of its own, is an especially difficult city in which to spread a public message quickly. Then too, the position of the question as the only referendum on the ballot clearly produced a 'blanking' phenomenon: over and over poll workers heard people say, "I just didn't see the question."

Nevertheless a clear message was broadcast from Newton's voting booths on Nov. 3: thoughtful U.S. citizens, along with their counterparts who have just demonstrated by the hundreds of thousands in Europe, are demanding that our governments stop leading us, like lemmings, down the path to nuclear holocaust.

Group cites dismay over Drinan's letter

To the editor:

Dear Fr. Drinan:
We, the members of the Steering Committee of the West Side Educational Association, read with great dismay your letter which accompanied the CONCERN slate card last week.

The WSEA is a group of concerned citizens whose main objective is to increase awareness among residents of the West Side of Newton of political and educational actions that affect public educational policy. During this past election season we sponsored two coffees to introduce citizens to all the candidates running for School Committee. We feel that it is important to provide a forum to educate voters to enable them to make their own intelligent decisions.

Although the WSEA as an organization did not endorse candidates this year, most of our members have, do, and will continue to support and work for a variety of candidates. Many of our number, in fact, in the past supported Congressman Robert Drinan, a politician who distinguished himself by dealing with facts and issues rather than vagaries and innuendoes. The implication that some of the candidates we, as individuals, have supported are somehow associated with the New Right, the Moral Majority, or book censorship simply because they have not been endorsed by CONCERN is insulting, outrageous, and absurd.

We feel you have played a reckless and irresponsible role in this election, and we know you know better.

Very truly yours,

Nuke story criticized

To the editor:

Jonathan Greenspan's article about the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Referendum in Newton was shoddy journalism. He had determined that the "story" was the lack of organization in publicizing this ballot question and that was the focus of his questions when he called for some comments. He chose only to use those quotes that buttressed this contention and made no effort to balance this with the equally important story that people who are stretched to the breaking point in their activities to prevent nuclear war were able to organize a campaign to leaflet and cover the polls in a very short time.

To compound his shabby reporting he used this "news story" to pompously lecture to the group engaged in the Nuclear Weapons Freeze effort and predict their failure.

Reporters who cover community events for local papers play an important role in providing information to the public at large. Their job is to inform not to destroy community groups who are very serious about the activities they are engaged in.

Trust is a crucial component of responsible journalism. The Graphic reporter will probably miss some very worthwhile stories in the future because he clearly cannot be trusted.

Sincerely,
Rohna A. Shoul

'Inaccurate analysis'

To the editor:

To print in bold-face type that the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Efforts Bomb in Newton was an inaccurate news analysis, as well as a frustrating setback to those of us who volunteer countless hours in the quest for true peace.

If Jonathan Greenspan had researched further than just calling a few members of "Newton for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze" he would have recognized that although there was an unfortunate lack of communication about the Referendum appearing on the (Nov. 3rd) Ballot, Newton's participation in this issue is growing at a phenomenal rate.

The Newton Chapter of Women's Party for Survival emerged this spring with coordination of the Mother's Day Rally for Peace in Boston. Under their Letter Writing Campaign hundreds of people have written to politicians in support of the U.S. - U.S.S.R. Nuclear Weapons Freeze. During International Disarmament week, the phones of Senators and the President were kept ringing every 15 minutes by Newton residents calling in for a halt to the arms race.

We have sponsored and participated in events, films, forums, petitions, and educational outreach on a continuous and growing basis.

Newton Interfaith Peace Coalition, with members from various religious organizations from across the city, has done the same.

Many prominent people working in National groups are residents of Newton.

The three Newton groups network as much as possible to outreach in different ways to raise the conscious level of thinking on this subject which effects each and every one of us.

Although Newton is at the forefront in anti-nuclear weapons activities, we have received little positive recognition from the Graphic or Tribune.

We hope that this situation will improve in the future.

Beverly Curtis-Droz
President, Newton Chapter
Women's Party for Survival (WPS)

Don't attack Drinan

To the editor:

It is regrettable that the CONCERN distributed letter written by Fr. Drinan failed to include a sentence that the candidates not endorsed by CONCERN were not considered to be anti-democratic.

This omission, or itself, does not justify a claim of malicious intent. Fr. Drinan gained his considerable reputation for his application of energy, intelligence, and high ethical principles to actively promote the interests of the ordinary people. Not content with stigmatizing CONCERN the critics attacked Fr. Drinan applying bad ethical conduct on his part.

Fr. Drinan's critics, Rep. DeNucci and others, would have more credibility as experts on ethics, if for instance they protested the Reagan office's accusing the "Jewish Lobby" of attempting to influence U.S. foreign policy. This, at a time when a Saudi prince whose mission was just that, was welcomed to the White House, and when the multi-billion dollar Mobil Oil Company was putting ads in newspapers all over the country selling the Saudis as great guys.

Did DeNucci and friends anywhere repudiate this clear intimidation — propaganda? If they had done so, then they could be respected as authorities on political ethics.

Ted Mann's good vote

To the editor:

Reviewing the results of the Nov. 3 election, it should not surprise us that Mayor Mann received so handsome a vote out of Ward 8. The ward is his home territory and the base from which he served with high distinction as a Newton alderman for eight years and later as the area's representative on Beacon Hill for a like period. It is fitting and reasonable that the ward's voters should join as they did with others throughout Newton in according him recognition for his superb performance in office as alderman, legislator, and mayor.

It is interesting to note that even without the Ward 8 vote Ted Mann's support throughout the city was strong enough to carry him back into office. Even if all of Ward 8 ballots favored the opposition, Mann would still have prevailed, given the vote elsewhere.

Clearly, the remarkable support for Ted Mann was city-wide, crossing ward, village, and so-called ethnic lines. This perhaps signals the idea that it is time to abandon stereotype concepts on which we tend to lean too heavily in analyzing voting results. In a community such as Newton, performance in office and merit are more often than not the factors that gain voter approval.

Reader notes mistake

To the editor:

I would like to make a correction in the otherwise well-written article in the Nov. 4 edition of The Graphic. I did not obtain a grant of $1,000 from the Massachusetts Envelope Co. — the reference to a grant should have been that the Cambridge City Council, in response to requests for many more of their pamphlet, "Cambridge and Nuclear Weapons: Is There a Place to Hide," received a $1,000 grant from the Council for a Liveable World, to cover the additional expense.

Thank you,
Anita J. Greenbaum

An offer for Cablevision

To the editor:

I think it would be a wise and clever inducement for the Newton Cablevision Co. to offer free Cablevision to the viewers in the particular village community they intrude upon with their tower and microwaves (which results in lower property values, etc.) in exchange for that community's backing.

Or will it be as usual an all take and no give business operation?

Thirty-one pairs of spinal nerves travel down the spine from the brain through a series of openings between the vertebrae. Any number of events, including accidents, falls, stress, tension or over-exercising can cause displacement of one or more of these vertebrae. If this occurs, there may be a malfunction in some part of the body or an overall reduction of the body's level of resistance. This leaves one more susceptible to peripherally related diseases. This is why chiropractic directs its interest to the spinal column.

Weeks School proposal hits little opposition

NEWTON — A number of residents voiced objections Monday night to a plan for the conversion of the former Weeks Junior High School into 75 units of mixed income rental housing.

Several abutters of the school, which is located at Hereward and Rowena Roads, contended that the plan provides inadequate parking and will result in increased traffic problems.

Memory expert to speak

AUBURNDALE — George Bell, author and memory trainer, will be the guest speaker at the President's Day meeting of the Auburn-dale Woman's Club on Wednesday, Nov. 18 at 11:45 a.m. at the club, 283 Melrose St.

Bell is the author of "Your Memory: How To Improve It" and has prepared cassette programs on memory, listening skills and employee discipline. He has been featured in several magazines and conducted memory training courses around Massachusetts.

Dorothy Faulkner will be day chairman. Elizabeth Nabors will give the invocation. Myrtle Curtis and Marian Lynch, hostesses, will be assisted by members of Group 2.

A long string of supporters of the proposal by the Newton Community Development Foundation, however, argued that the project will help alleviate the shortage of rental housing in the city.

The city has signed a 65-year lease with the non-profit organization to convert the school into rental units. The Board of Aldermen must approve a zoning change and special permit before the conversion can begin.

Under the proposal, 34 of the units will be subsidized elderly; 33-market rate elderly renting for approximately $600 a month; and eight subsidized family units. The elderly units would include 46 one and 21 two-bedroom units.

The junior high school was vacated in July after a vote by the School Committee to close the school because of declining enrollment. Mayor Theodore Mann selected Newton Community Development for the project after a number of companies submitted proposals to the city for re-use of the school. The Planning Department has recommended that aldermen approve the project.

Land Use Committee Chairman Terry Morris said that there does not appear to be "substantial opposition" to the plan and it should be approved.

John Kerry's putting 'body on the line'

As a Yale student in the sixties, Kerry said his political inspiration was the late Adlai Stevenson. While an undergraduate, Kerry was president of the Yale Political Union and treasurer of the Young Democrats. He won prizes for oratory and debating as well as winning his varsity letters. He delivered his class's commencement address in 1966.

Following graduation, he joined the Navy and saw active duty as an officer on a guided missile frigate in the Gulf of Tonkin. He later commanded a patrol boat in the Mekong Delta and served as skipper of his patrol craft.

His combat duty decorations include the Bronze Star for "great personal courage under fire" while rescuing a comrade when he himself was wounded in 1969. He was also awarded the Silver Star for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action while under heavy enemy gunfire" the same year, plus three Purple Hearts.

After completing his active duty in the Navy, Kerry became identified with the antiwar movement on behalf of Vietnam veterans and their special problems. He is still actively involved in veterans' affairs as founding member and organizer of Vietnam Veterans of America.

In 1972, while residing in Lowell, Kerry ran for Congress from the Fifth Congressional District. As front contender and Democratic nominee, he was narrowly defeated in that contest.

Following his graduation from Boston College Law School in 1973, he began work as a prosecutor in the Middlesex County District Attorney's office and was appointed First Assistant District Attorney.

His achievements in that office included securing more than $4 million in federal grants, reducing the backlog of criminal cases from 12,000 in 1977 to 228 by the middle of 1979, inaugurating a rape counseling program, a victim-witness assistance program, a priority prosecution program to accelerate the prosecution of violent crimes within three months, an organized crime unit and a white-collar crime unit. He successfully led the investigation and prosecution of one of the top organized crime figures in New England.

Resigning from his Middlesex County position in 1979, he established his own private law practice in Boston. During this period, Kerry was a regular panel member on Channel Five's weekly Sunday public issues program, "Five on Five." He also served as a regular political analyst during election-night telecasts since 1974.

Kerry and his wife, Julia, have two daughters, ages five and eight.

Fleeing Newton schools

NEWTON — Newton public schools are currently experiencing the largest single decline in student enrollment, a drop of 6.4 percent this year, Dr. Vincent Silluzio, director of research and planning for the schools, told the School Committee Monday night.

Private schools, on the other hand, are attracting an increasing number of Newton students. Silluzio told the committee the percentage of school age children in Newton currently attending private schools is 15 percent (up from 11 percent in 1974) and "may go as high as 16.5 percent this year."

According to the annual enrollment report, the number of students in the Newton schools dropped by 791 students this year, while Silluzio had originally projected a decline of 592 students.

Christian Science lecture set

NEWTONVILLE — Christian Science lecturer Andre Plot, a native of Switzerland, now living in St. Louis, will speak here on Thursday, Nov. 12, at 8 p.m. in First Church of Christ, Scientist, Newton, 300 Walnut St., Newtonville.

The topic of his lecture is "Christian Science: Unlocking the Treasures of the Bible."

Plot, who speaks English, French, and German, had a varied career as a mechanical engineer before choosing to devote his full time to the public healing practice of Christian Science.

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Newton, is sponsoring this free public lecture. All are invited and child care is available.

Swail expects to keep modeling as long as there is a market for older models. He expects that as long as the number of older people in the population is proportionately high, there will be a demand. "I think there will be greater opportunities for seniors in modeling," says Swail, who admits he's unlike other senior citizens. "I'm someone entirely different."

City reaches $1.6 million settlement

NEWTON — The city will receive $1.6 million from the construction company that built Newton North High School because of building deficiencies.

The settlement, which comes after a legal tug of war that has lasted more than five years, is reportedly one of the largest ever received by a city from a construction firm.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk confirmed that a settlement had been reached with the company after a one-hour closed door "executive session" with the aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night. Details of the settlement with the firm were unavailable.

Mayor Theodore Mann is scheduled to release a statement on the settlement sometime this week.

Election returns listed in last week's Newton Graphic for Alderman Marcia Richmond were incorrect.

In precinct 1 Richmond received 463 votes, not 263 as previously reported.

The final tally for Richmond was 1,703 and her opponent, incumbent Robert Katz, received 1,281.

'The Mann factor' was a consideration

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Revelers at the Sidney Hill Country Club Tuesday night began sipping champagne almost an hour before Mayor Theodore D. Mann made his way to the podium to acknowledge his landslide victory over Businessman Bruce Marquis.

The unofficial announcement by former Alderman Harry Crosby that the three-term mayor had topped the ballot was almost anticlimatic. The crowd expected it.

Even Marquis, who campaigned for eight months to unseat the incumbent, said he was not "surprised by the numbers."

"It was a disaster across the board," said the 37-year-old defeated challenger last week.

Mann garnered 67 percent of the vote by taking 26 of 32 precincts and seven of the city's eight wards. By taking ward 1, precinct 4 by 274 votes, Mann was able to slide ahead with a narrow 1,298 to 1,264 triumph in the heavily Italian north side ward.

The 59-year-old Mann lost by more than 100 votes in only one other precinct, ward 3, precinct 3.

Although Marquis won three of the precincts in ward 3, Mann's 363 vote margin in precinct 2 catapulted him to a 160 vote victory in the ward. Precinct 1 has a fair sized moderate republican base (although Mann is a republican, he is considered progressive) while precincts 2 and 3 are predominantly blue collar as are the two wards in ward 1, and ward 4, precinct 4 where Marquis also topped the ballot.

However, these victories for Marquis were small — a credit to Mann's broad appeal — when compared to the tremendous differentials enjoyed by Mann on the city's south side.

Mann began his political career as a ward 8 alderman in 1958 following in his father's footsteps. As a result, he has left an indelible mark on the south side and the people, many of whom are professional, liberal and of Jewish persuasion, turn out faithfully each election.

Mann captured 78 percent of the 10,799 votes cast on the south side compared to 58 percent of the 9,731 ballots on the north side.

The Mann coalition is citywide and according to Crosby, one of the reasons the mayor keeps winning is that he has a "real sense of the networks of this city and has time for all of them."

Marquis, undaunted, campaigned right into the heart of the mayor's strength. "I had so many people say to me: 'If you weren't running against Ted Mann,'" said Marquis of potential supporters.

However, Marquis, as Alderman Mark White found out in September, was running against the Mann.

A successful veteran of four runs for mayor and more than 23 years of Newton political wars, Mann's experience and greater visibility were too much for Marquis to overcome.

The Mann factor, according to several aldermen, also kept more well-known aspirants from running for mayor this time around.

Alderman Terry Morris, who polled 8,707 votes topping the ward 2 at-large ticket, ruled out running for the office of mayor because he did not think Mann could be beaten.

"Four years ago, you had three candidates who were highly visible in the political arena," noted Morris. "Yet they couldn't muster the effort to beat him."

In 1977, Mann defeated former state Rep. Peter Harrington by 3,500 votes in the final election after having knocked off Board President Eliot Cohen and Alderman Richard Bullwinkle in the preliminary.

Bullwinkle, who was re-elected to the board yesterday, said neither Marquis nor White "were viable candidates." He thought Marquis's showing identified to a large account the anti-Mann vote citywide.

Marquis agreed, as he noted: "One of the things I would like to know is how many of my votes were anti-Mann votes and how many were for me."

Each of the six precincts Marquis won Tuesday, Harrington took in the last mayoral election. The vote differential between the two hopefuls, however, was substantial. Harrington beat Mann by 1,376 votes in the six precincts while Marquis defeated the incumbent by just 512 votes.

Some of the differential could be attributed to the low voter turnout, yet others felt Marquis' lack of a political track record was part of the reason Mann appeared stronger this year than in 1977.

"There has to be a perception of you as a reasonable candidate for office," said Bullwinkle. "Marquis hasn't paid his dues."

"Part of the problem," said Morris, "was that people looked at the preliminary and psychologically asked was it a race?"

The perception that the "race was all over," not only cost Marquis at the polls, where just 20,530 of the city's 49,567 eligible voters showed, but also in the purse and on the floor of the board.

While Mann's re-election bid picked up steam during the weeks following the preliminary, Marquis' simmered. Mann, who spent just $10,000 prior to September, coughed up more than $18,000 since Sept. 4, while Marquis could raise just $6,700 to add to the $15,000 he spent thru August.

Aldermen, according to Marquis, turned their heads when he asked for endorsements. Marquis said that several board members were afraid of retribution from the current administration if they lent their support to the challenger's cause.

Issues, or a lack thereof, also was a problem for Marquis. He raised some, including revaluation, but each failed to catch the public eye.

"There were no issues for anybody to divide on," said Alderman Carol Ann Shea, "I'm not surprised. Next time there will be better candidates."

Alderman Paul Coletti said: "You have to give credit to the mayor that he's performed so well that he received almost 70 percent of the vote and those who would aspire for his position stayed away."

The political backlash of the tedious revaluation procedure will not be felt until the second tax bill is sent out in the spring. Mann made reference to the possible furor last night in front of his supporters. "I have one hope," he said, "that the people love me as much in May as they do now."

Fr. Drinan stands by his letter

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Former Congressman Father Robert Drinan said Wednesday that he "stands by" a letter he wrote to voters in the city which incited a storm of controversy and charges of "McCarthyism" from public officials and candidates.

The letter, which was mailed out by a liberal political lobby called CONCERN, caused enormous unrest as the municipal elections came to a close. Many candidates and public officials contend that the letter implies candidates not endorsed by CONCERN are associated with the Moral Majority.

In the letter, which was sent to voters on the south side of the city, Drinan warns of the threat of the Moral Majority and urges voters to choose CONCERN endorsed candidates; six of whom were elected Tuesday. Drinan, who did not interview the candidates for public office, admitted that he did not write the letter alone. "I consulted with some people and wrote the letter with help," he said in a telephone interview from Washington, adding, "It's my letter. I signed it."

Drinan said he did not believe the endorsements were unfair even though he never spoke or met many of the candidates running for elected office against CONCERN backed candidates.

When asked how he could make the endorsements without interviewing candidates, Drinan said: "What I have said, I said...I don't want to elaborate on it. I stand by it."

Many candidates argued that the Moral Majority was not an issue in the municipal election. However, Drinan viewed it differently.

"I'm not saying it precisely about Newton," he said. "It is a national issue. Their (the Moral Majority) contamination is pervasive. We have to resist the insidious they have. I would write that letter to any city or town."

Many candidates defeated in the election blamed the powerful CONCERN endorsement. Jonathan Brant, who was defeated by Leonard Gentile in the ward 1 School Committee contest, was the only CONCERN targeted candidate that did not win.

"CONCERN definitely had an impact," noted Alderman Mark White who is finishing his fourth term. Whether you liked the (Drinan) letter or not, they did the job."

"Lenny Gentile ran the best campaign in the city," said White, "and that is why he survived. Lenny was everywhere! Whether you voted for Lenny or you didn't, you met him."

Former Alderman Harry Crosby, a self described "great admirer" of Drinan and Drinan's former Newton campaign coordinator, called the letter "ill advised."

Papers signed for golf course buy

NEWTON — "In spite of Proposition 2½ and these times of fiscal crisis, the City of Newton took a bite of the apple," stated Mayor Theodore D. Mann, in announcing that the city has purchased the buildings and 71 acres of the former Chestnut Hill Golf Course following over two years of planning and negotiations. As a result of the combined efforts of the mayor's office, Mutual Bank For Savings and the civic-minded residents of Newton — as well as several creative financing mechanisms — both the acquisition and the maintenance of the land will not impose any financial burden on the taxpayers of Newton, Mann said.

To fund the $700,000 purchase, to be mortgaged by Mutual Bank, Mann obtained a $125,000 grant from the state and utilized restricted funds generated by the sale of surplus buildings. Newton will recoup additional funds through the use of a "betterment district" made possible by the efforts of City Alderman Lisle Baker and the cooperation of neighbors residing along the golf course periphery. Also, substantial new tax revenues will be generated, Mann said, from the 42 condominiums to be developed adjacent to the golf course by Mutual Bank in a joint venture with Mel Barkan Construction Company of Newton.

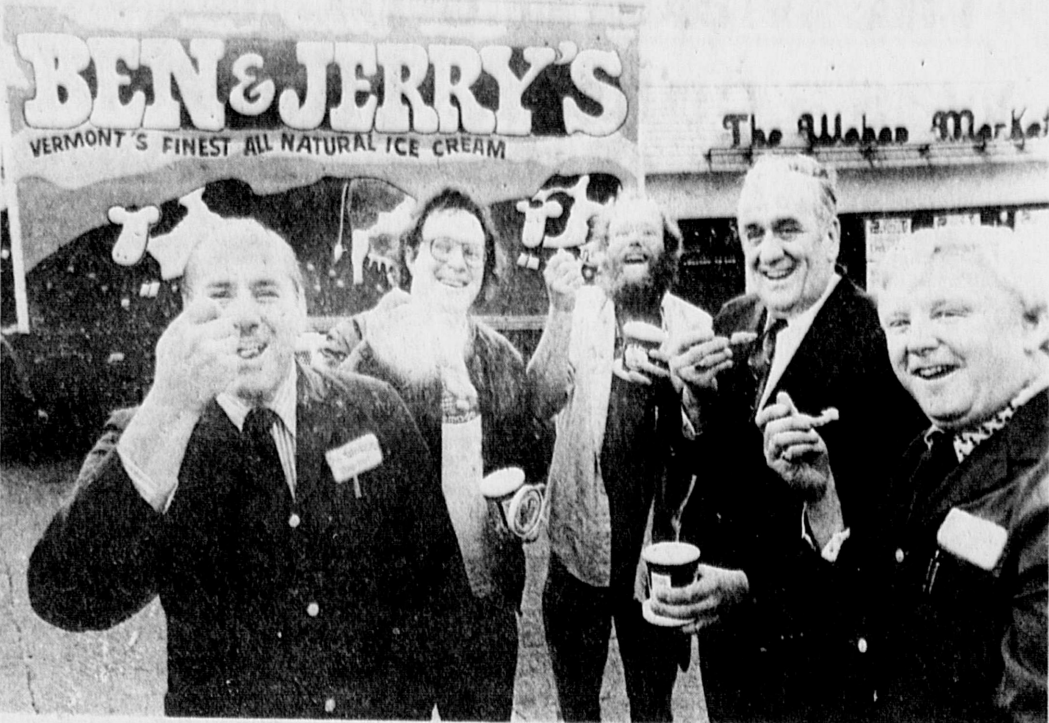

Mayor Mann also indicated that as a result of an agreement that he has reached with the Newton Commonwealth Foundation, a non-profit group of citizens headed by Norman Wolfe, "the cost of long-term maintenance of this valuable recreational resource will at no time in the future be borne by the taxpayers of the City of Newton." An annuity fund has been established with an initial investment of $115,000. This fund is to be reserved solely for the purpose of maintaining the 71 acres as attractive open space in the event that the golf course fails. Moreover, Mayor Mann pointed out that, "If at any time revenues from the fund exceed what might be necessary to maintain the 71 acres, the excess revenues may be used for maintenance of other city-owned conservation lands."

With the acquisition of the golf course — which will be open to the public — Mann also announced a lease with the Newton Commonwealth Foundation to operate the golf course. Seventeen Newton residents have been appointed by the mayor to the Foundations' Golf Course Management Committee. This Committee will have complete responsibility for operation of the Course.

The project began more than two years ago when the former country club was purchased at auction by the Newton Commonwealth Foundation, a neighborhood organization. Mayor Mann asked the group to participate in the purchase because of fiscal constraints brought on by Proposition 2½. Further pursuit led to the Mutual Bank/Barkan venture which relieves the NCF and the city of all costs related to the property.

Mann expressed gratitude to all who participated in making the acquisition of this large tract a reality. He commended Mutual Bank, referring to it as "a bank with its heart in the community" and concluded that "in years to come, future citizens of Newton will benefit from their foresight and efforts to further enhance Newton's Garden City image."

School experience workshop Thurs.

NEWTON — On Thursday, Nov. 12, the Newton-Needham Mental Health Association and the NEWW Center will offer a workshop for parents, called "The School Experience: A Mental Health Perspective." Grace Church at 76 Eldredge St., Newton Corner, will host this event from 7:30 - 10.

Child psychiatrist, David Paul Mirsky, M.D., who directs the Newton-Needham Guidance Clinics, will present an overview of the developmental problems and issues that children, adolescents and their parents encounter on their journey through the educational system. Then parents will break up into discussion groups of elementary, junior high and high school issues. These groups will be led by child mental health specialists from the Guidance Clinics: Psychologist Paul Welch, Coordinator of the Needham Guidance Clinic, psychiatric nurse, Patricia Herlihy and chief social worker, F. Robert Johnson both from the Newton Guidance Clinic. All have been actively involved in the Newton and/or Needham schools.

Refreshments will be served following the discussion.

This program is one of several offered each year by the program committee of the Newton-Needham Mental Health Association and the NEWW Center. This is the first joint community education event; two more will follow later this year.

Dann Coriat Wyman

Newton Symphony opens to sell out crowd

NEWTON — The Newton Symphony Orchestra opened its 16th season Monday with a sold out program featuring music of Tchaikovsky, Beethoven, Stravinsky, and Newton composer Dann Coriat Wyman.

The program opened with the premiere of Serenade for Strings, a composition by one of the founders of the NSO, Dann Coriat Wyman, who is also a violist with the Orchestra. The Serenade was dedicated to the late Dr. Jacob Swartz. Wyman's works have been performed by the NSO before, and he will have a Sonata for Violin & Piano premiered at the Isabella Stuart Gardner Museum in January 1982.

The much-beloved Romeo & Juliet Overture-Fantasy followed the Wyman work. This classic of the orchestral literature has worn well, surviving its own popularity very nicely. Its rich harmonies, swashbuckling rhythms, brilliant orchestration and, of course, singing soulful Tchaikovsky melodies still sweep audiences into the drama portrayed in this music.

Most community orchestras would finish the concert with the Tchaikovsky, but the NSO continued its program with the Triple Concerto of Ludwig Van Beethoven. This featured violinist Roman Totenberg, cellist Samuel Mayes, and pianist Yvette Roman Schleifer as soloists with the orchestra. A lyrical piece, its three movements call for great sensitivity and ensemble from the three soloists and a particularly high degree of technical ability on the part of the cello soloist.

After intermission, the orchestra performed Stravinsky's 1947 version of the suite from his ballet, Petrouchka. It is a combination of imaginative rhythmic "games," fresh harmonies, Russian folk melodies and consummate orchestration.

Because of the enormous interest in the Monday concert, and in the entire season as well, the NSO management is reminding all subscribers of the "turn-back" ticket policy. This policy allows subscribers and other ticket holders to turn in tickets which they cannot use, for resale to the community. This permits more music lovers to attend the concert. The donor of the tickets will receive a gift acknowledgement. For "turn-back" of seats, at future Newton Symphony Orchestra concerts please call 965-2555.

New book will list discounts for Newton seniors citizens

WEST NEWTON — The Newton Department of Human Services and Council on Aging are pleased to announce that plans are underway to publish a new directory listing local merchants and services that offer special discounts to senior citizens 60 or older. The former list is now outdated.

Any one who wants to participate in the program can contact the Department of Human Services at 552-7170 for more information.

Those senior citizens who are interested in assisting in this process are encouraged to attend the meeting of the Anna Fleischer Discussion Group scheduled for Nov. 18, 9:30 a.m., at the Newton Community Service Center, 492 Waltham Street, West Newton.

Members of the Anna Fleischer discussion group, which is sponsored by the Retired Senior Volunteer Program will be assisting in this joint effort.

Beginning in early December and running through March of 1982, teams of senior citizens will be soliciting local merchants. The new discount book is scheduled for publication in the spring of 1982.

Degenhart takes post as director of development

NEWTON CENTRE — Faith C. Degenhart has returned to the Andover Newton Theological School as director of development.

Degenhart has been involved in development for almost 12 years in three institutions. She has extensive experience in all major aspects of fund raising and public relations and has been involved with two capital campaigns.

Following six years at her alma mater, Wellesley College, where she had charge of special gifts, telethons, fund volunteer training programs and was responsible for gift income from individuals totaling over $4 million, she spent two years at Wheaton College in Norton, Mass. as director of development in charge of planning and implementation of annual and capital support programs, stewardship programs, and foundation solicitation.

At Wheaton College, Degenhart was responsible for securing grants totaling approximately $1.5 million from foundations and a 29 percent increase in alumnae gift support.

During her last position at Emmanuel College in Boston, the college received the largest grant in its history, and alumnae support increased significantly in response to a foundation challenge grant.

Following her graduation from Andover Newton, Degenhart worked for nine years as director of religious education in United Church of Christ churches in Massachusetts and for the Troy, New York Council of Churches.

Children's book author Lois Lowry spoke to more than 50 parents, students and teachers in her final talk as part of a series at the Cabot School library last week.

Children's author visits local schools

Award-winning children's book author Lois Lowry spoke to more than 50 parents and children at the Cabot School library last week as part of a month-long series of speaking engagements in local schools sponsored by the citywide Creative Arts Committee.

Partial funding for the series of talks on children's books, which included dates in eight local schools, came from the New England Foundation for the Arts, Mass. Council on Arts and Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The series by Lowry included readings from several of her books, the most notable and widely-acclaimed of which is "A Summer to Die," published in 1977. The book tells the story of a 13-year-old girl who must come to grips with her sister's fatal illness and the story is drawn in part from Lowry's own childhood.

As a spokesman for Lowry's publisher, Houghton Mifflin, said of her work, "Lois Lowry's strength as a writer comes from her exceptional sensitivity and skill that allow her to raise her characters out of the realm of storytelling and into our lives."

Other books by Lois Lowry include "Find a Stranger, Say Goodbye," "Anastasia Krupnick," and "Autumn Street."

Grant awarded for dance and theatre piece

NEWTON — Dorothy Hershkowitz, choreographer and teacher, has been awarded an "Artist in Residency" grant by the Artist Foundation to choreograph a new dance/theatre piece with an inter-generational theme.

Because she is a superb artist with an ability to arouse her audiences to experience their lives in a different dimension, the possibilities for this work are enormously exciting. Working with young dancers, mature professional dancers, and older people, Hershkowitz will develop through the exploration of every-day forms, such as the bed, the chair, hands, a work which brings to life the rites of passage — birth, marriage, and death. In creating this original dance piece, Hershkowitz will encourage students and other members of the community to watch the artist-at work in open rehearsals, share their insights and observations, and as much as possible, to involve them in the work in progress.

Hershkowitz' full length work, "Monday Morning Quarterback," received wide acclaim, as did "Kaddish," "Sundance" and numerous other works. She has studied with Martha Graham, Merce Cunningham, Jose Limon, Dan Wagoner and Viola Farber.

The Artist Foundation, funded by the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, The National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, and local matching sources, provides artists in residencies to schools and other community agencies in Massachusetts.

Institute in CPR slated at Marriott

The Newton Marriott Hotel, in cooperation with American Red Cross Chapters in Mass Bay, announces the fourth annual Institute in First Aid and CPR Training on Dec 1, 2, and 3, at the Marriott Hotel, 2345 Commonwealth Ave., Newton from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. This institute will be hosted and coordinated by the West Suburban Red Cross Region.

The purpose of this institute is to train representatives from local companies to be certified instructors in first aid and or CPR. Upon completion of the program, the representatives will return to the company and teach these new skills to other employees through scheduled in-service training. OSHA requirements mandate emergency trained personnel in industry because it has been demonstrated repeatedly that first aid and CPR skills, when properly learned and used, do save lives.

The fee for the three day institute is thirty-three dollars, which covers the cost of testing materials, equipment and supplies only. The cost for individual days is:

Day 1 - CPR Module, $10; Day 2 - Multimedia First Aid $14; Day 3 Instructor Program $9.

Introducing THE '82 MODELS

The furnished models at The Gables in Newton are open. They are extraordinary. The extravagantly large rooms lend themselves to an almost unlimited variety of treatment. Architect, interior designer, and Nationally syndicated columnist John D. Bloodgood and his associates have combined rich detailing, exceptional use of wood and mirror, and brilliant furniture placement in a breathtaking manner.

Tradition is carefully observed in a two-bedroom two-level townhome, where the design team has introduced special moldings, paneling and mantle treatment to enhance the mood of the mahogany furnishings. A brick patio with formal gardens carries the traditional spirit out-of-doors.

The spectacular two-story living room in the three-bedroom townhome model is a warm mixture of wood textures, Colonial fabrics and authentic antiques. The rambling kitchen has a comfortable seating area by a pine-paneled fireplace. The master bath is paneled in cedar. The courtyard features a wooden deck and a waterfall cascading down a stone embankment.

A two-bedroom home has been furnished in plush contemporary style with rich fabrics, muted colors and an extravagant use of mirror. The trend-setting wall treatment in the master bedroom is but one of the exciting ideas you'll find in this, and the other exceptional models.

All but a few of the first group of homes at The Gables have already been sold, but a new group will be underway soon and available for early selection. Prices range from $250,000 to $400,000.

The '82 models at The Gables are easy to find — directly adjacent to the Charles River Country Club at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets in Newton. Open daily from 9 to 5 or phone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

THE GAME finally arrives

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Since that memorable second Saturday in October, better known as the day Newton North upset Brockton, this is the game which has had everyone's mouth watering.

Undefeated Waltham High vs. undefeated Newton North for, in all likelihood, the Suburban League championship and a berth in the Division I Super Bowl. It will be the biggest game in the state this week, and, along with the Walpole-Norwood clash last month, the most important contest all year, barring the Super Bowls.

"Ever since we beat Brockton," says Tiger coach Norm Walker, "everyone in the city has been looking ahead to this game. It's been tough on the teams because we've tried to take each game one at a time. But we couldn't help looking ahead, either."

To their credit, neither team suffered any letdowns along the road to this showdown. Waltham easily slid past its final obstacle, Cambridge, last Saturday, 34-0, while Newton North did the same to lowly Weymouth North, 22-0. Ironically, they were the first two shutouts for both this season.

Both clubs showed their pleasure at having finally cleared the path for each other. The Waltham players began shouting "Newton! Newton! Newton!" in the final seconds of the Cambridge game while the Tigers, upon entering the locker room, let out a very audible sigh of relief with the additional words of, "Now we can finally place all our attentions toward Waltham."

The Hawks, as usual, had no trouble chalking up their seventh straight victory. With John (Mr. Everything) El-Masry picking up 150 yards on 20 carries and scoring the first TD via a 22-yard gallop, they bounced out to a 13-0 lead at the half.

The underrated Frank Frenna (48 yards, five carries) opened the third quarter with scoring jaunts of two and 26 yards, and Darren Marcou fell on the football in the end zone for a third TD to put the game out of reach before the final period had even started.

The Hawks, who are far from being a one-man team, finished the afternoon with 19 first downs and 298 yards rushing. Five different players had more than 20 yards.

The defense, led by tackles Dan McCarthy and Chris Behrikis, limited the Cantabs to 36 yards rushing and 45 passing, effectively stopping QB Mike Harshbarger in the process.

The Hawks have now scored 204 points this year while allowing just 55. El-Masry, who is sure to be picked up by some major college next fall, has gained 997 yards in 121 rushes. That's an average of 8.2 yards per carry.

Newton North was not at its best last Saturday in beating Weymouth North, but the Tigers still managed to take the game without much of a struggle.

QB Ryan Foley, who has now firmly established himself as the starter, was again the impetus for the Tiger offense. He hit Billy Drew for a 64-yard TD on the team's second possession to get the offense in gear.

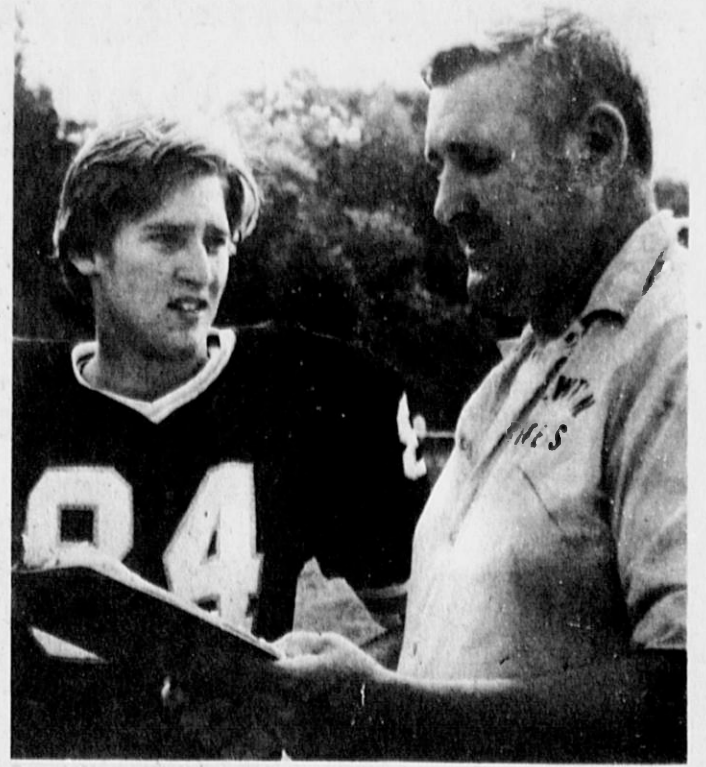

A surprise was the play of halfback Ed Natale. Natale got his first start of the year when Mike Abruzzese was injured in gym class during the week. He came through with a 14-yard touchdown, a pretty 27-yard pickup which set up another Newton score, and 55 yards rushing for the day.

But Abruzzese, who had enjoyed the finest game of any Tiger back two weeks before (143 yards) and is the team's leading rusher, will certainly return for the Hawks.

Drew also scored Newton's third touchdown by taking a 38-yard pass from Tim Brandon. Fast becoming the Stanley Morgan of the Suburban League, Drew has caught seven TD passes in his last four games.

Walker also gave credit for the victory to his offensive line, which handled Weymouth's various formations and blitzes, and fill-in safety Jim Clemmer, a senior who

'Methodical' Tigers romp

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

It wasn't quite the sort of performance one expects to see from the No. 11 team in Eastern Massachusetts. Against just about anyone else but 0-7 Weymouth North Saturday, the Newton North Tigers might have found themselves in a dogfight. But with the Maroons as the opposition, they remained among the undefeated by virtue of a methodical, albeit uninspired, 22-0 victory at Dickinson Stadium.

The triumph sets up the biggest game in the State next week when Waltham High (7-0) comes to Dickinson Stadium to face Newton (7-0). On the line will be the Suburban League title and a Super Bowl bid.

Actually, the Maroons did not play all that badly. They trailed by only a touchdown after the first quarter and 15-0 at the half. But every time they put together a drive, they committed a crucial mistake. They drove to the Newton 14 in the first period, then were called for illegal motion on third down and had quarterback Peter Kane slip down for a 10-yard loss on fourth. Late in the third quarter, with the game still very much on the line, Weymouth North marched to the Newton 15 only to die there when Ken Padula fumbled a bad pitch from Kane and Dean Morreale recovered. That was the last gasp for the Maroons.

The final statistics do not show a Newton North domination. Weymouth North actually had more first downs (12-7) and more yards rushing (106-101), but the Tigers, as usual, came up with all the big plays. Billy Drew hauled in two more long touchdown passes of 64 and 38 yards, giving him seven TDs in his last four games, while Ed Natale (55 yards in 10 carries) replaced the injured Mike Abruzzese at halfback and scored once from 14 yards out and added a two-point conversion.

Conservatism was not the word for the Tigers on this day. QB Ryan Foley went for the bomb on two of Newton's first three plays, overshooting wide-open receivers both times, but on the sixth play from scrimmage he finally connected with Drew for a 64-yard TD.

"That long pass was there all day," said coach Norm Walker. "Weymouth was bunched up the line and playing everyone close, almost forcing us to go long. When you have something like that, you have to take it. I mean, that's six points from anywhere on the field if you hit it."

The play was a thing of beauty. Foley ducked just under a heavy Weymouth North rush ("A great athletic move"—Walker) and fired the ball as far as he could down the right sideline. Drew, who was covered closely by Dave Sudbey, outleaped his defender at the 20, slipped a tackle and skipped into the end zone.

The first quarter ended that way, but the Tigers took a 15-0 lead with 5:30 remaining in the half after a nine-play, 68-yard drive. Natale, playing because Abruzzese got hurt in gym class during the week, began the march with a 10-yard pickup. Foley then hit Paul Howley on a sideline pattern for 21 more, giving Newton a first at the 33.

Four straight carries by fullback Al Fortune brought the ball to the 14, whereupon Natale burst off left tackle, cut to the outside, and fought off two tacklers to slide into the end zone. He added the conversion for the 15-point cushion.

The Tigers completed scoring with 5:56 left when Tim Brandon, in for his first play of the game, hit Drew for a 38-yard TD. Natale had gotten the drive started with a 27-yard burst to the outside on first down from the Weymouth 49. After a penalty for an illegal man downfield had set them back, Brandon entered the contest and fired away.

"I have to give our offensive line lots of credit," said Norm. "Weymouth was blitzing and throwing a lot of different defenses at us and they handled it very well."

The Maroons threatened for a final time in the closing seconds by moving to the Newton eight, but the clock ran out on them. For the undefeated Tigers, it was their first shutout of the season.

Now, finally, they can begin thinking about Waltham, a team that has been in the back of their minds since their win over Brockton some weeks back. "There was a big yell of joy in the locker room after the game by all the kids," said Walker. "They were so happy to finally have every other obstacle out of the way. And I have to admit, I was too. I tried to keep everyone from looking ahead for the past month, but I couldn't help doing it myself."

Tiger girls begin title quest

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

At the moment, it seems the only thing that stands between the Number 1-seeded Newton North girls' soccer team and the state championship is the Newton North girls' team.

The Tigers finished the season with a perfect 17-0 record to win their seventh consecutive Suburban League Championship. Belmont, meanwhile, finished 11-3-1 in the Middlesex League and defeated Lexington, 4-2, in the preliminary round of the tournament to advance.

"We just have to take one game at a time," said Newton North coach Barry Howland, who has presided over this team's success for the past seven seasons. "We have a proven, experienced team, but we have to be wary in the tournament. One mistake, one call and it's over."

"You don't get a second chance in the tournament," Howland added. "Everyone's playing their best and has great desire to win."

This team has excellent soccer skills and if we don't beat ourselves, we should do well."

The greatest asset of the Newton North squad is the tremendous amount of tournament experience on the team. No less than 12 players on the current Tiger roster have played in tournament competition and that has to be a major plus for the Tigers.

Newton North made it to the quarterfinals a year ago before being knocked out by Bridgewater-Raynham, which went on to the finals. In 1979, the Tigers made it to the semi-finals, before being eliminated. Most of players on this year's team were members of those two campaigns.

"It's a definite advantage for us," said Howland. "We've also played some tough non-league opponents this season to get us tuned up for the tournament."

Newton North had the experience, but it had to see if it could use it to win. The showdown came against Bridgewater-Raynham two weeks ago. The Tigers passed their pre-tournament test with flying colors. Newton North traveled to Bridgewater and captured a 2-0 victory. Goaltender Carol Summers played an outstanding game with 20 saves.

"That game showed us that we were ready for tournament play," said Howland. "Bridgewater knocked us out of the tournament last year and they have a good team. We played well against them and earned a tough victory. That game sort of set us up for the tournament and it showed us we could do well."

Tri-captain center-halfback Debbie Quinn has two years' tournament experience and is the quarterback of the team. She plays in the midfield and controls the ball. She has the important task of setting up the offense and coordinating the defense. A fine all-around athlete, Quinn will be a key to the Tigers' hopes.

The defense is solid with Summers in goal. Her backup is Kristine Palmer. A senior, Palmer is a transfer student from Onset where she played soccer for three years. She gives the Tigers a proven backup.

Fullback Diane Casey is also experienced and a steady player on defense. Beth Kelly has seen tournament action and she will play the sweeper position.

Halfbacks Denise Richards and Sandy Troy are both experienced in tourney play. The only starter that hasn't seen tournament action is stopper-back Kathy Maguire. Only a sophomore, Maguire earned a starting spot and her lack of experience shouldn't be a major factor.

Up front, the Tigers have people to put the ball into the net. Lori Goldenberg was a leading scorer in the league this season with 15 goals and 14 assists. Stephanie Stoyanoff had 10 goals and eight assists from her wing position. Andrea Farina, who score nine goals this season, will miss the tournament because of a leg injury.

North swimmers finish 2nd to Brockton

Katie King and Lisa Dunn each won two events for Newton North in the Suburban League meet held Friday at Newton North's pool. Brockton was the overall winner of the meet with 298 points, while North finished second with 245 points.

Waltham finished seventh overall with a total of 65 points. The Hawks had just one first place winner. Maureen Barth placed first in the 100 breaststroke in 1:20.3 for the Hawks.

King won the 200 individual medley in 2:19 and the 100 butterfly in 1:02.6. Dunn, meanwhile, was the winner of the 200 freestyle in 2:04 and the 500 freestyle in the 5:33.

The Newton North 200 medley relay team of Dunn, Laura Collins, King and Anne Bishop captured first place in 2:05.3. Eve Mazzola was third in the 100 backstroke for the Tigers, while Collins placed third in the 100 breaststroke.

North jayvees hold on for 16-12 triumph

The Newton North High junior varsity football team sprang out to an early lead, but had to hold on for a 16-12 triumph over Weymouth North Monday in a Suburban League battle at Newton.

The Tigers led by a 16-0 score at halftime, but the Maroons put together a long drive and took advantage of a North fumble to get back into the ball game. The Tigers retook control of the game in the fourth period, but got a scare at the end of the game.

With 10 seconds remaining, the Tigers had drove into Weymouth territory, when the unthinkable happened. A fumble that was brought back for a touchdown. The play was called back, however, because in high school football, a fumble cannot be advanced.

Lions turn ball over, hand Acton 20-7 win

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The Newton South football team has played perfect football outside of the Dual County League this season, but in league play, the Lions continued to be plagued by imperfection.

The Lions traveled to Acton-Boxboro on Saturday afternoon and committed three key mistakes in a 20-7 loss to the Colonials. The defeat left Newton South with an 0-3 record in the league and 5-3 mark overall.

Acton scored all its points in the first half and all of the scores were the direct result of a turnover or penalty. In the first period, the two teams traded punts. The Lions defense held for the second time on a couple of sacks by defensive end Denis Murphy.

The punt was fumbled by Jeff Steven, however, and Sean Leary recovered for the Colonials on the Newton South 33-yard line. It took the Colonials just five plays to get into the endzone.

Tri-captain halfback Jay Hickman burst up the middle for a 22-yard touchdown scamper. The kick was short and Acton led 6-0 with 1:26 left in the first quarter.

Newton South's offense led by the passing and scrambling of junior quarterback Joe Spagnuolo started to march back. Spagnuolo spotted end Mike Antonellis over the middle for a 19-yard pickup and the Lions had a first and 10 on the Acton-Boxboro 45-yard line.

Spagnuolo went back to the air and was looking for Antonellis. The 6-4 senior end had slipped and safety Lee Oldenburg picked off his first of two passes. The Colonials had a first and 10 on the Lion 44-yard line.

Acton completed its only pass of the game on the drive when quarterback Bob Kostro hit wide receiver Mark Franz for a seven-yard pickup and a first down on the Lion 14-yard line. Halfback John Burke blasted in from three yards out for the Colonials and the lead was 12-0.

Once again the Lions began to move the football, but the drive stalled on the Acton 35-yard line. Acton took over and Kostro heaved a pass deep to Franz. The ball fell incomplete, but defensive pass interference was called and Acton had the ball on the Lion 12-yard line with 35 seconds left in the half.

The Newton South defense stiffened, but on third and goal from the one-yard line Kostro burst over for the Acton score. Kostro then hit Oldenburg in the endzone and Acton had a 20-0 lead by capitalizing on the three Newton South errors.

Acton seemed to be driving for yet another score in the third period, by safety Dave Hill picked off a Kostro pass in the endzone. Spagnuolo was also having difficulty throwing. He was picked off by Oldenburg again.

Spagnuolo did manage to get the club moving late in the third period. Using ends Antonellis and Hill the Lions moved the ball to the Acton 10-yard line. An illegal receiver downfield penalty on a screen moved the ball back and erased another Lion scoring attempt.

Newton South got on the scoreboard in the final 17 seconds. The slippery Spagnuolo led the charge with some timely running out of the backfield. The junior signal-caller connected with Hill in the endzone for a 12-yard scoring pass. Steve Mosca booted the extra point for the Lions.

The Newton South defense allowed 243 yards on the ground. For the second consecutive week, both Hickman, 111 yards, and Burke, 115 yards, went over the 100-yard mark for the Colonials. Acton only completed one pass in 10 attempts for seven yards.

The Lions offense gained 54 yards rushing. Spagnuolo was the leading ball carrier with 27 yards in 10 carries. Passing wise, Spagnuolo was 10 for 29 for 102 yards passing. Hill was the leading receiver, grabbing five passes for 60 yards.

Thayer outclasses St. Sebastian's, 32-0

St. Sebastian's, playing without its two starting tailbacks, was outclassed by undefeated Thayer Academy Saturday, 32-0, in an Independent League game at Newton.

Glenn Philpott scampered for two touchdowns and Quarterback Joe Kelly ran for one and threw for another as Thayer chalked up its 18th consecutive victory. St. Sebastian's is now 2-2-2 with its final game being next week against rival Rivers.

Thayer broke on top, 14-0, in the first quarter by driving to touchdowns in its first two possessions. The Arrows actually received the opening kickoff and marched to the Thayer 30, but they failed to get a first down on fourth and an inch, turning the ball over.

"We figured we weren't going to win this game by being conservative, so we shot the works," said coach Bob Souza. "But Thayer's defense was very, very tough. We really never moved the ball on them except for a couple of big plays."

Thayer took the ball and drove 70 yards, with the biggest play being a 20-yard run by Philpott. Philpott finished the march by skipping into the end zone from four yards. Kelly kicked the point and it was 7-0.

The next time Thayer got the ball they went 50 yards in seven plays. Philpott again capped it off with a two-yard run.

In the second quarter, the Arrows took another chance on fourth and one and again came up empty. This time Thayer took over at its own 40. Two plays later, Kelly faked the defense on a bootleg and went 54 yards for a TD. "He caught us in a stunt," said Souza. "He made a nice run, but it was wide open. We just weren't ready for it."

The Arrows played better in the second half, twice moving to the Thayer 15 and twice more inside the 10, but each time the Thayer defense rose up and stopped them on downs. "We were outmanned and every time they needed to stop us they did," said Souza.

QB Jeff Simpson of Watertown hit Mark Hunter of Walpole for a 41-yard gain late in the fourth which helped St. Sebastian's advance to the Thayer five, but the drive fizzled there.

Kelly hit Jeff Toussaint for a 15-yard TD and Bill Capalano went over from four yards to complete Thayer's scoring.

The Arrows finished the day with only 82 yards rushing, 25 of those by Simpson on broken plays. "Thayer has had some great teams in the past few years. Last season they were undefeated," said Souza. "But this was the best Thayer team I've seen. They didn't make any mistakes."

White 3 goals power Arrows, 6-1

Chris White, a senior center halfback from Needham, scored three goals and had two assists, to spark the St. Sebastian's soccer team to a 6-1 victory over Thayer Academy Friday at Braintree.

The other goal-scorers for the Arrows were Kip Dugan of Wellesley, Maury McCarthy of Winchester and Bob Sullivan of Belmont. Newton's George Georgenes tended goal and had eight saves.

St. Sebastian's brought its record for the season to 3-5-3.

Arch-rivals have title ambitions

took over for the injured Tim Mulvey and played a solid game. Newton South gets its best shot all year to win that elusive first Dual County League game Saturday when the Lions travel to Wayland High.

The Lions, 5-3 overall but 0-3 in the DCL, are coming off a 20-7 loss to powerful Acton-Boxboro. They have also been beaten by Bedford (7-0) and Concord-Carlisle (21-20).

Wayland was swamped by Westwood last week, 25-0. Like the Lions, they too have yet to win a DCL game.

Newton South has played badly in only one of its three losses. Bedford beat the Lions by seven and should have won by 20. But, take away a few critical mistakes, and the Lions would have beaten Concord and come a lot closer to Acton.

It's unlikely Wayland will find the answer to stopping the combination of Joe Spagnuolo to Mike Antonellis. Newton South should move to 6-3.

Watertown High (3-4-1), losers of two straight for the first time all season, host Burlington (4-3 in the Middlesex League) in a 1:30 p.m. game Saturday at Victory Field.

The Red Raiders dropped a tough 2-0 decision to Melrose last week while Burlington was blasted by Winchester, 25-8.

The only bright spot for the Raiders was the defense, which continued to play well. They have allowed only 98 points in eight games, an average of 12 per game. Not bad for a team which has been beaten four times.

Burlington had an 8-7 lead over Winchester at halftime of last week's contest, but the affair turned in the third quarter when Winchester's Steve Costello intercepted a pass and returned it 100 yards for a TD.

Costello also had TD runs of 41 and one yard to destroy Burlington. Burlington's lone score came on a two-yard run by Shawn McGuire.

Newton Catholic (5-1) gets back to action after an unexpected week off when it hosts Northeast Regional Sunday.

The Lancers' scheduled contest with Notre Dame of Fitchburg was cancelled last week when Notre Dame couldn't field 11 players. Northeast hails from the Commonwealth League. They defeated Shawshen last week, 20-13, lifting their league record to 3-2.

Halfback Ron Caruso scored two TDs on runs of seven and three yards while QB Kevin McHugh hit Paul DiPlatzi from 10 yards for the other score.

The Lancers are still in the running for the Division 5 Super Bowl, but they must beat top-ranked Cathedral on Thanksgiving Day to have any chance. And, of course, win this Sunday as well.

St. Patrick's (2-5) hosts South Boston Sunday at Victory Field.

The Knights saw their two-game winning streak go down the drain last week with a 29-8 loss to Cathedral. But they have improved enormously since the beginning of the season.

Weston (0-7-1) goes on the road to face Madison Park of the Boston District I League. Madison Park has only lost twice this year, with one of those defeats coming to Newton South. The Wildcats, who have come so close the last two weeks, are aching for that first win.

The Independent League winds up its season when traditional rivals Rivers and St. Sebastian's get together at Murphy Field.

Rivers (3-3) upset previously undefeated St. George's last Saturday, 7-6, while St. Sebastian's (2-2-2) was losing to Thayer Academy, 32-0.

In beating St. George's, which was 6-0, the Redmen defeated the team which had blanked the Arrows, 19-0, the week before.

Ambulance arrives on field at Newton North High field half hour after Newton Catholic player received concussion. Art Illman photo

Injured player lies on field for half hour

By Art Illman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — There were 14 seconds remaining in the game when a Newton Catholic football player was injured on the 30-yard line at Newton North's Dickinson Field last Sunday, unable to get up.

It took nearly 30 minutes for an ambulance to arrive, though the emergency medical technician in attendance assumed control of the situation, holding the boy's head in traction, fearing a neck injury.

As it turned out, the athlete sustained a concussion, and was released from St. Elizabeth's Hospital that night.

The communication gap resulted because the police officer at the game left early. When the injury occurred, a student was sent to knock on doors to telephone for help.

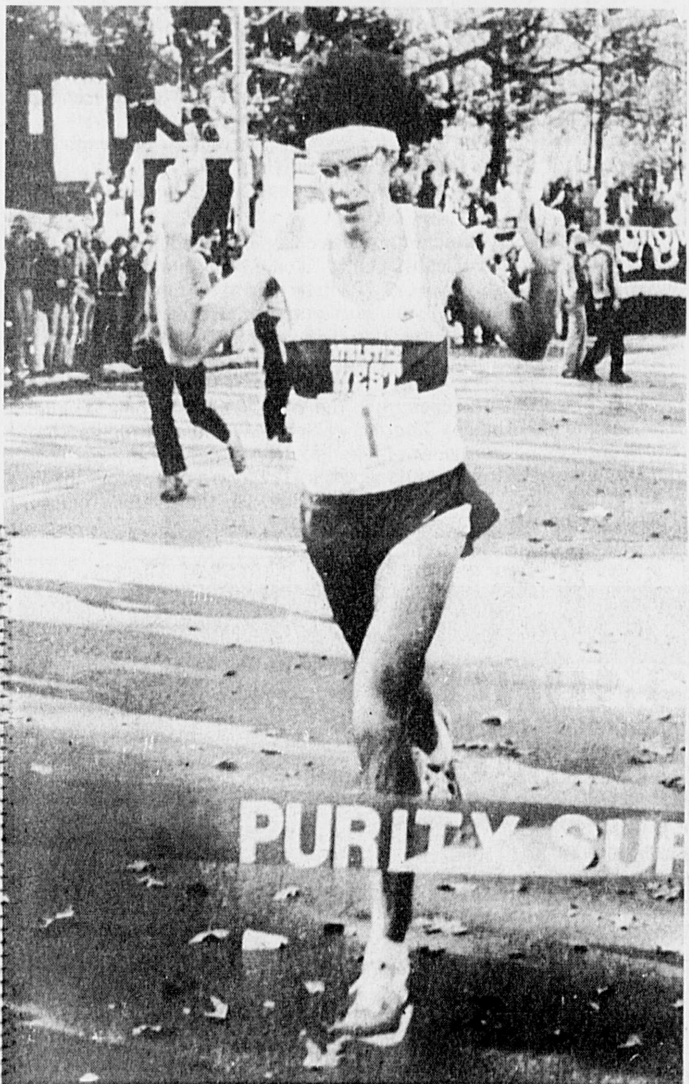

Newton Catholic Athletic Director Father Leroy Owens said in his 12 years as athletic director, this is the first time there has been such a terrible delay. The police officer who left, he said, had volunteered his services. The school has used volunteer officers who are students' parents for the past two games.

"There will be a paid police officer at the next game," Owens said.

Newton Catholic, a private Catholic high school, pays the Newton School Committee to use Dickinson Field. They do not use the press box, which includes a telephone.

"The ambulance arrived in four minutes once the call was made," said emergency medical technician Bill Jailet. "The paramedics from Chaulk did a great job. They went 5 to 8 m.p.h. to the hospital. Even though the communication link failed, the boy got proper treatment."

"I'd like to see an ambulance parked at every game. Realistically, that would cost too much. What's needed at the most basic level is an emergency defense plan, either written or thought out. You also need physician involvement."

Dan Dillon of West Newton (top) and Joan Benoit of Watertown (bottom) are shown crossing the finish line to win the men's and women's division of the 6.2-mile Heartbreak Hill Roadrace Sunday. More than 3,000 runners entered the event which helps the Kennedy Memorial Hospital for Children.

Life for Newton rescue team, long hours, ups and downs

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The shifts are sometimes 24 hours on and 24 hours off. There are meals never finished and the kitchen microwave comes in handy. The police radio is constant background music.

When the radio dispatcher calls for a rescue team, Bruce Bazter and Rich Sheehan must react as if each call is a life-threatening emergency. So goes the life of men working for Newton's emergency rescue service, the recently contracted private firm, Chaulk Ambulance Service.

At times, Bazter and Sheehan, who work as a team much in the way policemen have partners, relax in the small converted kitchen or nap on bunkbeds housed in the garage behind Newton police headquarters. Sometimes the crew can go for several hours without a call.

But what they both sought training for was emergency ambulance work and, admittedly, they like to keep in practice. As Bazter, 26, puts it, "I like what I do. I don't like seeing people hurt."

According to Sheehan one danger which can develop when business is slow is "you can get burnt out."

"There are some people who are damn good EMT's (emergency medical technicians), but they're just not cut out for emergency work because you have to make critical decisions which could mean a person's life," Sheehan says calmly.

"Everybody's different," Bazter, a paramedic, adds.

Before joining an emergency rescue team four years ago, Sheehan, 35, was an auto mechanic. He is also a former Newton Corner resident where he lived for 28 years. Bazter's interest in rescue work began at age 16 when he worked as part of a volunteer fire department rescue team in Connecticut.

Bazter is a certified EMT-P which means he has been trained above the level of the EMT to do advanced life support. Sheehan is an EMTA which means he is qualified beyond the EMT level for ambulance work. According to the pair training for rescue work is progressive and refresher courses are also required.

According to police statistics on the ambulance service since it began in the city Aug. 3 (the city ambulance service was previously operated through the Newton Fire Department), the average response time for Chaulk crews is 4.7 minutes.

Statistics also show that most calls come in during daylight hours and that Chaulk Rescue One, which services the north side of the city and is anchored at police headquarters in West Newton, is the busiest vehicle. Rescue units Two and Three service the south side of the city and, for the most part, operate out of Industrial Place at the rear of 210 Needham St.

The only exception is that during daylight hours, Rescue Three is anchored at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

According to some crew members the base pay for ambulance work with Chaulk is approximately $10,000 to $12,000. The aggravations of the job, however, as Bazter and Sheehan view them, have nothing to do with the pay, crazy hours or stressful nature of the job.

For both men, it is the death or serious injury to children and teenagers which is the most disturbing.

"It hits you afterward," Bazter says, "and you say 'God, what a tragedy!'"

Although both men place a high value on privacy for their patients, they say their wives and families are a "great support" for them.

But, Sheehan says, "I try to leave the aggravation (of the job) behind. I try not to take that home because I don't feel my wife deserves that."

According to Community Relations Director for Chaulk, Curt Lovett, stress is a very real problem on the job which is relieved by "a great amount of comaraderie" among the crew members. Lovett says, "Lay people can't understand what it's like when it's 4 a.m., freezing cold and you have to pick up a little baby out of the back seat that you know yourself isn't going to make it."

"It's a very close knit bunch of guys because they can all relate to this kind of work," he adds.

New aldermen may change board makeup

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Aldermen had a wide range of reactions on how the addition of seven new faces will affect the makeup of the board.

Although the newcomers are clearly more liberal than their predecessors, aldermen said that the issues which the board deals with can not be categorized as liberal-conservative.

Alderman Mark White, an eight-year veteran alderman leaving the board after an unsuccessful run for mayor, contended that many of the newcomers were elected on a liberal tide.

"The people that came out to vote were really sensitive to the threat from the right," maintained White, noting that many aldermen came up against the "buzz saw" of CONCERN - an aggressive liberal political lobby.

White claimed that the newcomers - three of whom are attorneys - will make the board "higher educated and progressive."

Four incumbents were swept from office in the nine contested aldermanic races Tuesday: 20-year veteran Alderman Ernie Dietz, six-year veteran Alderman Donald Budge, two-term Alderman James Miller and freshman Alderman Robert Katz.

Alderman Terry Morris, who topped the ticket in the ward 2 alderman at large race receiving 8,707 votes, speculated that it will be a "better board" with the newcomers. Edward Richmond captured the second seat in the ward 2 at large contest receiving 7,853 votes while Patricia Ciccone received 5,434 votes.

Morris, who noted that he was pleased by his consistent showing on both sides of the city, stressed that it is deceiving to classify the newcomers as more liberal because the issues which the board deals with can not be classified as conservative versus liberal.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan agreed. "You really can't classify people like that when dealing with municipal issues," she said, adding, "I hope it's a better board, but you don't know until someone performs."

"It usually doesn't come down to liberal versus conservative," echoed Ward 8 Alderman at Large Cynthia Creem who was unopposed. "It's easy to put labels on people. But you have to be responsive to people. You have to be fair to one side of the city and the other. It is the person who has the more open mind."

Carmichael, who was the top vote getter in the contested races with 8,967, noted the board has picked up newcomers with "outstanding qualifications."

"I'm very glad we topped the ticket," he added. "It was a reflection of how much work we did."

The newcomers to the board are: Harold Levinsky, a 23-year-old part-time journalist who defeated Dietz by 139 votes in the ward 6 race; Lane Sofman, a dentist who defeated Budge by 404 votes for one of the two ward 4 alderman at large seats; Marcy Richmond, a 28-year old attorney for state Department of Elder Affairs who defeated Katz in the ward 8 alderman race; Sondra Shick, a local attorney who finished behind incumbent Bruce Carmichael in the ward 1 alderman at large race (Shick will replace Alderman Robert Gaynor who resigned); Verne Vance, an attorney and Harvard Law graduate, who topped the ticket in ward 7 alderman at large contest. Incumbent Dominic Taglienti finished second (Alderman Mark White left his ward 7 seat to run for mayor); Richard Bullwinkle, a former alderman, who defeated Paul Snyder in the ward 3 alderman race to return to his old seat; and Michael Malec, a newcomer, who was unopposed and will take the seat vacated by State Rep. Susan Schur.

'Small world' opens at Mt. Alvernia

CHESTNUT HILL—The annual Mount Alvernia Bazaar will be held on Nov. 13 and 14 at Mount Alvernia Academy, 20 Manet Rd., Chestnut Hill. This year's bazaar theme is "It's a Small World."

Students, parents and faculty of Mount Alvernia High School and Mount Alvernia Academy have worked together to produce the Christmas Shop, The Greenery, the Attic N' Cellar Treasury, Knit and Stitch, Sweet and Gift Shops, Snack Bar and Children's Games.

The Bazaar will be open Friday, Nov. 13 from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 14 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Shuttle service will be provided from St. Ignatius Church. A drawing will be held before closing on Sunday and the winner will receive a thousand dollars.

Hazardous waste is topic Nov. 18

NEWTON — John Bewick, state secretary of environmental affairs, will be the featured speaker in a program "Hazardous Waste in Our Backyard?" presented by the League of Women Voters of Newton on Wednesday, Nov. 18 at the First Baptist Church in Newton Centre at 7:45 p.m.

The program will focus on the local and state levels of waste management. Study groups of the League will present their findings on the responsibilities of the individual and the city in developing a hazardous waste management program. Mr. Bewick will describe the state criteria in selecting the site for hazardous waste disposal. A question and answer period will follow.

Admission is free. For more information call 064-0333.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

'Networking' for the new job

By Mary Tobin
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Economic recession and corporate merger increase the possibility of job loss these days, but "networking" can keep a termination notice from being disastrous, says a job counseling expert.

"Everyone is vulnerable to termination in a free competitive economy such as ours no matter what his job, status, age, sex or union affiliation," said Thomas Camden, president of Hinsdale, Ill.-based Camden Associates counseling firm. "If people accept that fact as a reality they've made the first step toward a more secure future."

Camden, author of "How to Succeed in a Job Search," (Camden $29.20 with cassettes), is convinced anyone, within the limitations of his abilities can find the job he wants. "Saying 'I'm too old' or 'there's a recession' is a cop out."

Camden doesn't advocate worrying about termination; that could have a negative effect on job performance and hasten such an event. But he does think "it's foolhardy not to be prepared."

Camden said there are two steps in his program and the first, if you are happy in your job, is to enhance your position with the company.

"You can work harder, become more

'Everyone is vulnerable to termination in a free competitive economy such as ours no matter what his job, status, age, sex or union affiliation.'

— Thomas Camden, president of Camden Associates.

company oriented." The most important thing you can do, according to Camden, is come up with ways either to increase your firm's revenues or to reduce its expenses.

You also should be aware of what's happening in your company and your industry. "There are lots of tell-tale signs, such as a hiring freeze, a rash of early retirements, cash flow problems, delayed expense checks — a wage freeze is a sure red flag," he said.

Even if you love your job, your company is prosperous and has given every indication it thinks your performance is top-notch, don't relax. There's always the possibility another firm will buy your company and you will become redundant, he said.

If you pick up these and other signals, don't start sending resumes. "You must have a resume, but papering the world with them is the worst thing you can do," Camden said. "At best it's futile, at worst your boss could find out and fire you."

"The only way to get a job is by succeeding in an interview," he said. "Ethically and because it makes a better impression" it should be conducted on your own time, not that of your present employer."

Camden advises everyone, no matter how secure, to make a list of people he knows — professional acquaintances, personal friends, past coworkers, neighbors, church members.

"Everyone can come up with a list of at least 150 people," Camden said. "This is called networking and if the axe falls, or you think it's about to fall, you can put your list to work immediately."

"The people on your networking list will provide encouragement, ideas, and introduce you to their brother-in-law the banker," Camden said.

Only for 'bread and butter'?

Computers: not ready to manage

By LeRoy Pope
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Using the electronic computer to make decisions today is apt to be "like using the space shuttle for home milk delivery," an insurance executive quipped in responding to a survey.

This updated version of the old gag about using a piledriver to crack a walnut means simply that, 25 years after its general introduction, the electronic genie still is a not very useful top management tool.

The survey conducted by Dennison National Corp. of Holyoke, Mass., the office equipment subsidiary of Dennison Manufacturing Co., indicates, however, the computer is a most effective weapon at the clerical and technical levels.

"It's good for bread and butter activities," said a major steel executive. But in the top executive suite, "it provides too much data and not enough information," and seldom justifies its cost.

Many chief executives and other management people have been saying much the same thing for years but the Dennison survey provides a consensus verdict to this effect from 60 administrative and data processing executives of 52 of the country's largest corporations.

The survey indicated misuse of the computer in the executive suite is the main reason for its lack of real utility in decision making.

"An executive simply can't make a cost-effective decision using an on-line system," said the data processing manager of one of Detroit's big auto companies. "The CRT sits in the office and costs $160 a month. It simply isn't used enough."

Perhaps the biggest reason for this revealed in the survey, Dennison said, is that most of the current generation of executives are reluctant to use the computer because they don't have the required expertise in its use.

On the other hand, Bill Meserve, computer industry observer for Arthur D. Little, the Cambridge, Mass., research and management firm, in a recent speech said the personal computer has evolved, in just four years, from a new technology toy for computer hobbyists and engineers to a highly valued tool for operating managers.

There are about 130,000 in use today by U.S. managers, a figure Meserve said is less than 5 percent of potential usage.

While Meserve was talking about management productivity at the operating, rather than the top executive, level, he noted professional, technical and managerial staff represent two-thirds of labor costs and have the "highest potential for influencing the operations and performance of the corporation."

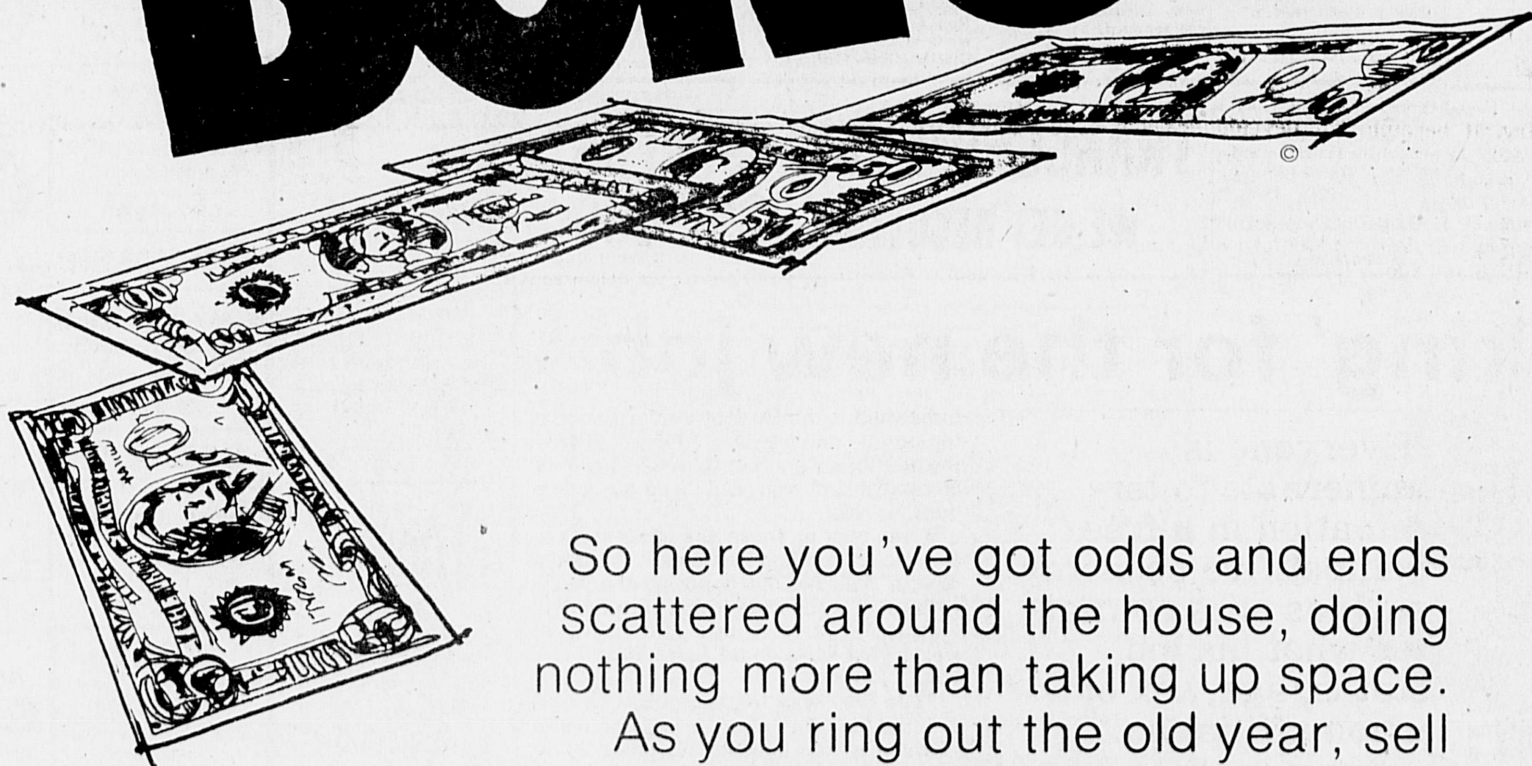

In the Dennison survey, there was general agreement that the computer manufacturers, the software people and executives and the business administration schools all have a long way yet to go before the massive amounts of data spewed out by the on-line computer can be boiled down sufficiently and molded into suitable formats so top executives will be willing and able to make decisive use of them.

SAT., NOV. 14

MICKEY AND THE BEANSTALK & DUMBO, Part 1. First, a whimsical adaptation of the classic fairy tale about magic beans, a towering beanstalk and the enchanted domain of a most unusual giant.

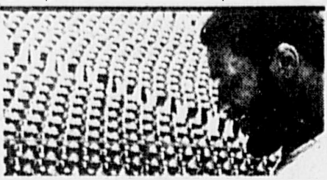

9-11PM CBS (8 Central/Mountain)

Mel Brooks

HIGH ANXIETY Mel Brooks takes on the master of suspense, Alfred Hitchcock, in a comic parody of suspense thrillers. Brooks as usual stars in, co-wrote and directed in addition to writing the title song. With Brooks' stock troupe regulars Madeline Kahn, Cloris Leachman and Harvey Korman, of course.

SUN., NOV. 15

7-8PM NBC (6 Central/Mountain)
THE STEELER AND THE PITTSBURGH KID Mean Joe Greene, famed defensive tackle of the Steelers, stars in this drama concerning a 9-year old boy (Henry Thomas) who learns about values, discipline and relationships when he is temporarily adopted by Greene and the team. Believe it or not, this is based on an award-winning TV commercial. It showed Greene limping up the ramp at Three Rivers stadium, pausing to accept a Coke from one of his young fans, then giving the kid the thrill of his life by tossing him his jersey.

8-11PM ABC (7 Central/Mountain)

Close Encounters of the Third Kind

Close Encounters of the Third Kind And no, we are not alone. A sensational Steven Spielberg film that gave more than 100 million moviegoers a spectacular vision of the arrival of aliens from

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain)
NORTH DALLAS FORTY Nick Nolte and Mac Davis are a couple of pro football players who attempt to survive physical peril while enjoying a free-wheeling life style and rowdy pursuits, and still cope with team management that has its own set of rules. Passes, downs and yardage gained on and off the gridiron. Charles Durning, Dayle Haddon, Bo Svenson, Steve Forrest and G.D. Spradlin also star.

TUES., NOV. 17

10-11PM NBC (9 Central/Mountain)
NORMA RAE Cassie Yates is a determined young mother waging a personal battle when the father of her illegitimate 10-year-old son suddenly sues for the child's custody. Based on guess-which Oscar-winning film?

SUN., NOV. 22

"Mary Poppins"

8-11PM CBS (7 Central/Mountain)
MARY POPPINS The Walt Disney classic and winner of five Oscars, comes to the TV screen for the first time. Julie Andrews is the magical governess who drifts from a cloud into the lives of a stuffy London family... but who soon envelopes them in a world of fantasy, enchantment and joy. With Dick Van Dyke as her jack-of-all-trades friend, David Tomlinson and Glynis Johns. Chim Chim Cheree, it's a dish of glee!

9-11:30PM ABC (8 Central/Mountain)
MOONRAKER Roger Moore's 4th outing as Ian Fleming's intrepid super spy 007 and Richard Kiel's reprise of his "Jaws" character from the previous Bondian episode. After an exciting pre-title opening sequence (always a high point in this 12 movie series) it goes downhill pretty rapidly.

MON., NOV. 23

9-11PM NBC (8 Central/Mountain)
FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN Ron Howard and Buddy Ebsen in a drama about an aging rancher's struggle to keep military hands from ousting him from his property in order to turn it into a missile base. Things get hot!

Venezuela comes to Newton

By JoAnne Coffey

Newton South High School welcomed 11 Venezuelan students along with their teacher, Regina Diaz, on Oct. 16 for a three-and-one-half week stay in the states.

Twelve Newton families opened their doors to the Venezuelans, acting as hosts, tour guides and friends.

On their first night in Newton the students went to the Cabaret, a talent show and dinner put on by students at South High. The following day was reserved for the students to unpack and get a chance to know their host families.

That afternoon was spent apple picking at a farm in Westboro which gave the visiting students an intriguing look at the differences between their country and the United States. One student noted that in his country, apples often cost as much as one dollar each.

The first trip the students made as to Boston was to Spin Off for an afternoon of roller skating, singing and dancing. It was quite an experience for most of the students since in Venezuela, roller skating is only done in the streets and rarely inside.

The skating was followed by a pot luck dinner and afterward the visitors shared a bit of their culture with the North Americans as they sang folk songs and played the cuatro, a traditional Venezuelan instrument.

The purpose of the exchange is for the students to learn what it is like to live in another country and to learn the customs and language.

The best way to achieve that is to immerse them directly into the environment and they are treated as North Americans for their entire stay.

The Venezuelan students followed the schedules of their Newton South hosts for the first week. During that time Carol Ficht, a Newton South Spanish teacher prepared schedules for the students tailored to each one's needs, interests and knowledge of English.

During their visit, the students from the town of San Vicente dePaul have been sharing their culture with the student body at Newton South as well as much of the Newton community.

During their free time the students visit various Spanish classes and clubs to tell about Venezuela and its customs.

Along with their talks they have been teaching the Newton students traditional songs and dances.

On Oct. 25 the students put on a concert for the community at Newton South. They had previously practiced in their homeland and were prepared to put on the show with costumes and all.

On Nov. 1 the students appeared along with their hosts on Channel 5's show "Aqui" and the program will be aired in the near future.

Nov. 7 will be the last day for the students in the United States and it is hoped by their colleagues, teachers and hosts that they will return to South America with a better of understanding of American teenagers in Newton.

CHARLOTTE R. THORNBURY

Representative William G. Robinson, the House Republican Leader, commended Charlotte R. Thornbury of Newton for her participation in the recent taxpayers suit over the increase in the automobile inspection sticker fee.

Thornbury, who serves as the Chairman of the Newton Republican City Committee joined 15 other taxpayers from across the state in filing the civil suit in Suffolk Superior Court, where the plaintiffs case was upheld by Judge Hiller Zobel. The state however appealed Judge Zobel's decision and the sticker hike ultimately remained at the new $4 fee.

"Too often taxpayers don't realize that they do have a vehicle to fight unfair, hidden taxes like these," Robinson said. "I am very pleased that Charlotte Thornbury joined me in this important issue."

GORDON A. MARTIN, JR.

Newton attorney, Gordon A. Martin, Jr., was one of the three Massachusetts representatives at a recent three-day conference, in Rockport, Me., which combined the annual meeting of the New England Board of Higher Education (NEBHE) and the special invitational conference of the presidents of New England's public colleges and universities.

The meeting attracted many of New England's leading educators and legislators, including the House speakers from Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Martin applauded the exchange program, which permits students from one New England state to enroll in a public college of another at no or little cost.

Task force recommendations

Mass Bay will stay

A task force studying a possible merger of Massachusetts Bay Community College and Framingham State has recommended against the move in a statement issued Monday afternoon.

A spokesman for State Rep. Joseph DeNucci, an opponent of the proposed merger, said Monday the task force cited the differences in the programs and populations served by the schools, located in Wellesley and Framingham.

Newton Alderman Paul Coletti, a member of the Mass. Bay Board of Trustees, confirmed the announcement and praised the move to keep both schools open.

Proponents of the merger had said earlier this year the merger would be a money-saving move but Coletti said the task force had not only recommended saving Mass. Bay but also would recommend the state college Board of Regents take $100,000 from the current year's budget at Framingham State and add it to that of Mass. Bay.

Coletti said he learned of the task force's recommendations Monday afternoon and was told "people up at the college are walking around with faces beaming."

Students at the college, which serves hundreds of Newton residents, had protested a proposal last month by the Board of NEWTON - Ward 2 Alderman at Large Terry Morris could be forced to give up his seat on the board if claims by his challenger in the recent city election are upheld.

Patricia Ciccone, who finished a distant third in her bid for one of the two city wide ward 2 at large seats, has charged that Morris does not live in the ward and therefore should not have been allowed to run for the seat.

Ciccone claims Morris is illegally registered as a ward 2 voter. Morris lists his legal residence as 391 Linwood Ave. Ciccone, however, claims the eight year veteran alderman actually lives with his parents at 10 Harding Street in West Newton.

Contacted at his office Thursday, Morris labeled the claims by Ciccone as an attempt to gain the seat "by devious means."

"My legal residence is in ward 2," asserted Morris, "and it has been for the last 12 years."

Ciccone has sent a letter to Election Commissioner Alan Licarie complaining that Morris does not live at Linwood Ave. Under the municipal charter, Morris would not have been allowed to run for the ward 2 seat if he lives outside the ward.

"He doesn't live there," said Ciccone. "He lives at 10 Harding Street. It's only a mailing address. It's a known fact."

Licarie is in the process of setting up a meeting with the four members of the Election Commission to determine if there is "sufficient grounds" for the complaint. If the four member commission determines there is "sufficient evidence," a hearing will be held on the complaint.

Licarie said that the commission's only determination will be if Morris is a registered voter. The Election Commission does not have the power to force Morris to give up his seat. Morris could only be removed after a vote by the 24-member legislative body.

The charter city charter specifies that the board is "the judge of the election and qualification of its members."

Licarie said that if Morris was unseated a new election would be held. He said that Ciccone would not automatically win the seat.

"The next in line does not get it," said Licarie. "It would just be a failure to elect and trigger a new election." Licarie said that the complaint may delay the "certification" of the election and the swearing in of new Ward 1 School Committee member Leonard Gentile.

Gentile was elected to fill the vacancy left by Howard Spengel who resigned this summer. "We'll take what time is needed on this," noted Licarie. "This is a very sensitive and touchy thing."

Morris sharply criticized the move by Ciccone. "Like a thief in the night, she is trying to steal from the voters what she could not get at the polls," he explained.

He added: "You have got to School court fight not over

By Richard Lodge
Staff Writer

NEWTON - Although a partial court settlement for $1.6 million came down in favor of the city last week in the seven-year battle over design flaws at Newton North High School the court battle appears far from over.

Robert J. Sherer, attorney for the general contracting firm of Harvey Construction said this week he expects his firm's suit seeking about $11,000 from the city to be scheduled sometime next spring.

Richard Renehan, of the Boston law firm of Hill and Barlow, which has represented the city of Newton in the seven-year series of suits and counter suits, also said this week the city still has a suit for "about $200,000" pending against two subcontractors involved in roofing and swimming pool construction at the school, which opened in 1973.

Announcement by City Hall of the $1.6 million settlement last week was erroneous, Harvey Construction attorney Sherer said, since the announcement made it appear his client was faulted for the Newton North High construction and was being assessed for the design flaws. In fact, Sherer said, the insurance company for the school's architects, Perry, Dean and Stewart, had agreed to pay $1.4 million to the city last month during 16 days of testimony in U.S. District Court in Boston.

The balance of the money, Sherer and Renehan said, came from payments withheld by the city from subcontractors - not Harvey Construction - for alleged construction flaws in the school's heating and air conditioning system.

Although statements by Newton City Solicitor Daniel Funk and a published statement by Mayor Theodore Mann said the unnamed general contractor (Harvey Construction) was involved in paying the city the $1.6 million, Sherer stressed that "to say Harvey Construction paid $1.6 million to settle a claim against them is inaccurate and could hurt their reputation."

"Harvey has been in business a long time," Sherer said, "and they do have a good reputation as probably one of the largest northern New England companies."

The city's suit in federal district court did name Harvey Construction, as general contractor for the $22.5 million project, but both Sherer and Renehan said as general overseer of the work, Harvey was legally liable for any court action pressed by the city of Newton.

Attorney Renehan, representing the city of Newton, clarified the meaning of the settlement by noting that aside from the architectural firm's share, "part of the settlement is made from the contracting chain. The general contractor's share all came from his subcontractors."

Ultimately, Sherer said, the school's architectural firm agreed to pay $1.4 million and the balance of payment to the city came from two subcontractors, Harrington Brothers and the M.J. Flaherty Co.

The architects were unavailable for comment Tuesday but a spokesman for the Newton city solicitor's office verified the terms of the settlement.

Harvey Construction Co., based in Manchester, N.H., may have been cleared of wrongdoing in the recent settlement in favor of the city, Sherer said, but the firm is still pressing its own suit for about $11,000 against the city.

The suit against the city and the city's remaining claim for approximately $200,000 against two sub-contractors both entail, in part, design flaws in the Newton North High School swimming pool.

Sherer said his firm, as general contractor, originally recommended a pool construction company different from Paddock Pool, the one specified by the city of Newton.

"The city, acting through the architect, rejected the pool,"

Local chef, man of the best taste

AUBURNDALE—Imagine yourself seated before an elegant dining table, ready to gorge into a free, gourmet extravaganza featuring seven different wines, several tempting appetizers, three tasty salads, a trio of hearty entrees of veal, lamb and duckling, two sparkling champagnes and a variety of imaginative desserts!

It's not a scene from Fantasy Island. But chef Michael Minerd of West Newton may win a fantasy island trip if his culinary talents please the taste buds of a judging panel in Washington, D.C.

Minerd, executive chef at the Marriott Hotel, recently prepared this tempting and expensive banquet as a preliminary of a nation-wide competition among Marriott chefs.

"I wanted something simple, but looked appealing on the plate," says the chef who for 12 years has been whipping up gourmet dishes at the hotel's Fairfield Restaurant.

Minerd is one of 60 Marriott chefs who are competing for the grand prize—a Hawaiian trip for nine people. What Minerd has to do is create a meal that costs $75 per person. But before making the final decision, Minerd asked several people to sample his cooking, in order to help hotel officials decide which recipes would be sent to the judges.

The sampling turned out to be quite a feast. Guests were treated to "Vol-Au-Vent De Fruit De Mer," a filling seafood appetizer baked in a decorative pastry crust. Other appetizers starting off the five course meal were "Oysters Bienville," and "Mushroom Bisque."

Minerd's favorite, a thick soup with dainty pastry accompaniments. "I chose items that I like to prepare," says Minerd, who attended the Culinary Institute of America.

Minerd added that he doesn't have a particularly favorite food. "I like almost anything," he says, but admits that he's partial to Italian dishes, or "anything with tomato sauce."

His extensive cooking career began about two decades ago. A native Pennsylvania, he was working part-time as a hotel chef's assistant. "Those were the days when chefs didn't share their recipes," says Minerd. He remembers how his former boss, who was well-known for a beef dish, would hide under an apron as he prepared the special dish.

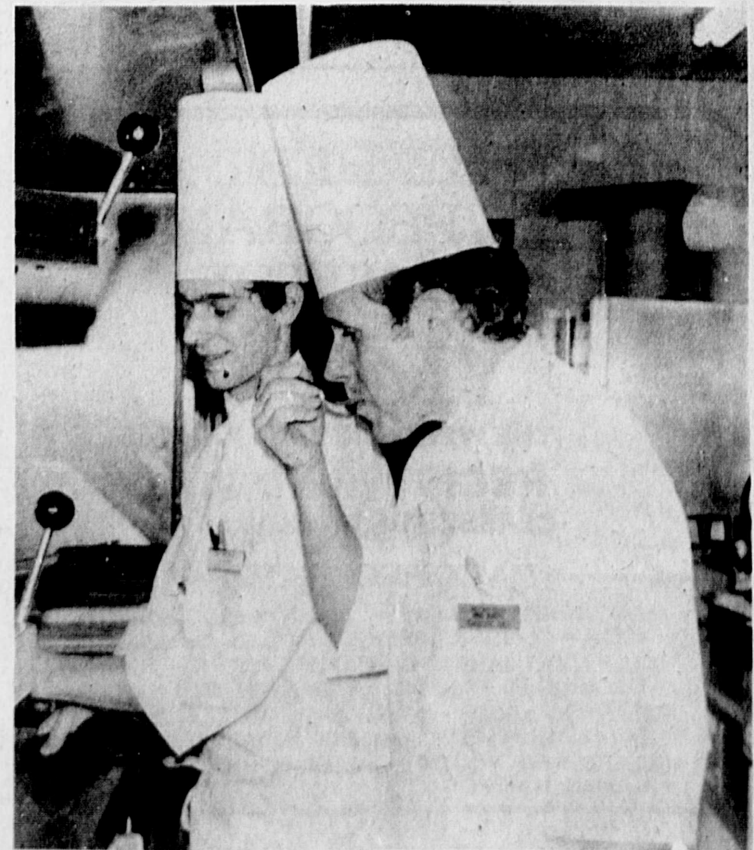

Chefs have changed since the day when Minerd's boss hid himself under an apron as he worked. "We're not as secretive about our recipes," Minerd says.

Minerd also thinks that chefs have been known as very temperamental, but doesn't consider himself unusually moody. "I can be (temperamental). But I talk to myself (if he gets upset). It's hard work. It's menacing work," explains Minerd, who was the private chef to a commanding general while serving in the army during the Vietnam War.

Seated inside his tiny, cubicle office in the huge hotel kitchen, Minerd glanced out at the dozens of busy cooks. "A chef can't do it alone. I have a lot of good help here."

Minerd has been unusually busy these days. He's been training several new workers, and preparing for the competition has also kept him busy working seven days a week.

Fortunately, at the end of the day, someone at home has a meal cooked for him. "My wife does the cooking," says Minerd with a smile.

North restaurant is a busy place for lunch

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — You had better look alive from 8:35 a.m. to 11:15 a.m. each day to prep for one of the busiest lunchtime restaurants in Newton, the Tiger's Loft faculty restaurant on the third floor of Newton North High School.

In a spotless stainless steel kitchen across from the self-supporting restaurant, meals for 70-90 teachers are prepared by a staff of 20-30 students under the direction of teacher and former chef, Bill O'Neill.

The morning regime is all part of the new Culinary Arts major at the high school which this year saddled up to join the ranks of courses in auto mechanics, metal fabrication and 11 other technical vocational (tech-voc) majors.

Student interest in the major with the fancy name has been spectacular and expansion of the program is being planned with the goal a new, commercial-sized kitchen.

Although there had always been an opportunity to learn about cooking and nutrition through the home economics department, the Tiger's Loft restaurant came into being about four years ago as a training opportunity for special needs students to learn limited food preparation, serving and clean-up skills.

According to Margaret O'Neill (no relation to Bill O'Neill), who teaches home ec and directs the special needs students in the Tiger's Loft program, "the regular school population heard about the program and wanted in on it."

Of significance is the fact that while the student enrollment has been shrinking the last few years, the entire tech-voc program at the high school has grown from 250 to 650 students, Dan Malia, director of tech-voc for Newton, notes. Included in this three-fold growth is the expansion of the food services program.

Students may enroll in the new major which meets the tech-voc requirement of being a half-day uninterrupted program or may sign up for what is known as an Exploratory Course to gain exposure to all facets of the major.

Malia and Pat Nicolas, assistant director of tech-voc, are currently looking for space in the school to house the hoped-for commercial kitchen. The difficulty, according to Malia, is not only in funding the construction, but also in finding an area with the proper ventilation capabilities which is conveniently located near the Tiger's Loft.

Currently, the only space available which already meets the needs for ventilation is the former machine shop room. Since machine shop was combined with metal fabrication this year due to lack of interest in machine shop, the room is open.

"We're hopeful that we can put this together this year," Malia says with a smile, "but we're looking for something a little more convenient."

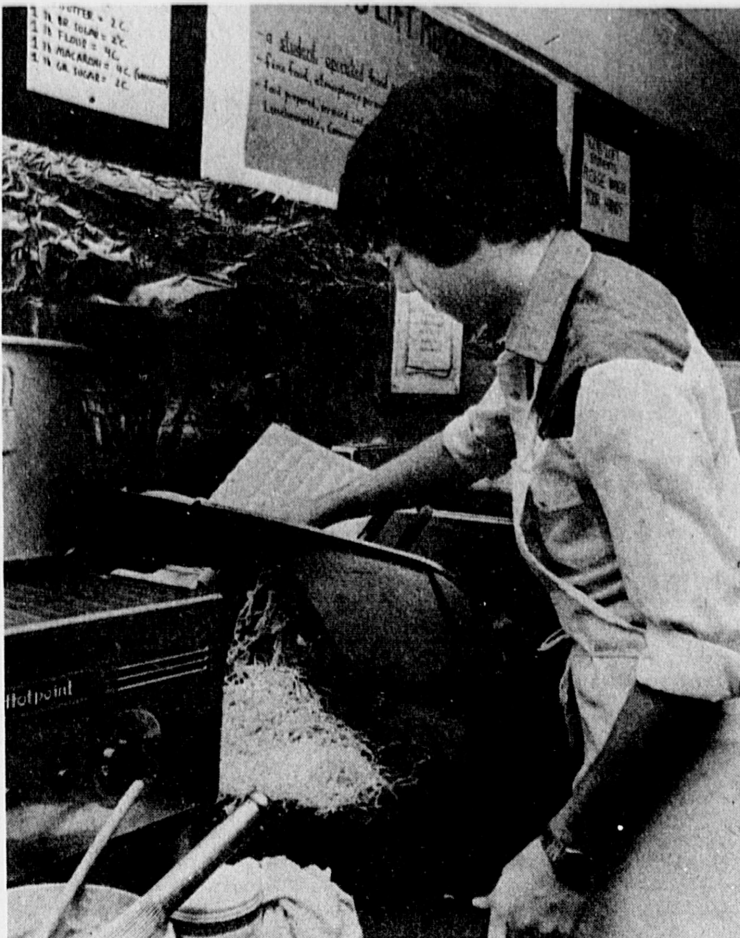

Unfortunately, the machine shop room is two floors away from the Tiger's Loft restaurant.

Mostly juniors and seniors are enrolled in the major which Margaret emphasizes is "not just for slow kids." Several of the 20 students enrolled full-time in the major are "college material" and many have ambitions of becoming a head chef or owning a restaurant, she says.

"You can make incredible amounts of money if you have the talent, ambition, stamina and intelligence to go with it," Margaret adds.

Judging by the intense concentration the students display as they prepare each day's menu — which includes unusual soups, salads, entrees, desserts and even a relaxing cup of coffee or tea — many are serious about the restaurant business. There are also certain criteria which must be met before enrolling in the major which include prerequisite courses. To enter the large functionary kitchen at the high school is to find equal opportunity in action. Cooking is no longer just for girls.

Bill O'Neill, who teaches the Culinary Arts major along with other courses, prides himself on offering a realistic restaurant experience to his students with the deadlines, pressure, marketing and management problems which arise almost daily.

TIGER - Tom Yazbeck of Newton North goes to work shredding cabbage for a stew which will be served up in the school's "Tiger's Loft" restaurant.

Fondly dubbed 'Mr. Clean,' he does not need to prove to himself that he has the personality and stamina for to be successful in the restaurant business. Prior to taking the teaching job at North, he has worked in restaurants since he was 14-years-old at "every kind of job there is" from dishwasher to head chef.

"I'm an uptight, high metabolism individual," Bill says. "I love it. I wouldn't be putting in all of this extra time (with the program) if I didn't."

"I run this class just like it was an actual restaurant or my own business," he says. "We can't pay them, but to sort of inspire them and make it more realistic, I dock them."

"I can't dock them with money, but if they're over five minutes late, they can't eat at the Tiger's Loft when the teachers are finished," he adds.

That might not seem to be such a penalty until one observes teachers frantically lining up at the Tiger's Loft each day.

Of course, Bill rewards his students as well and with some of the profits from the restaurant and catering of school functions takes them to the Pillar House Restaurant or to Anthony's Pier 4 where they are given "a nice inspirational talk."

According to Bill, the major uses four textbooks and students learn not only recipe knowledge and food preparation, but also baking, business math and accounting related to food service occupations. They also, he says, become more confident and creative as they progress.

The students are rated each day on their task (which rotates from cleanup duties to various levels of food prep) for organizational skills, efficiency, preparation technique and, of course, the final product, the food, which is tasted by Bill.

There is no such word as 'mistake' in the Tiger's Loft kitchen. The correct term, according to Bill, is "experiment."

Some experiments which come to his mind were the result of running out of chocolate chips for a chocolate chip cookie recipe or being out of curry for an Indian soup.

One student in the major, Kevin even went so far as to create a soup recipe almost entirely his own called "Kevin's Mulligatowny Soup" which teachers bought for 50 cents a cupful or 75 cents a bowl. Other items on the menu on the same day recently included "Lisa, Rhonda and Barbara's Tuna Noodle Casserole" at 90 cents and a delicious Boston Cream Pie.

Junior Tom Yazbek of Newton Centre was a contributor to the successful Boston Cream Pie. Not surprisingly, desserts and pastries are his favorite things to make.

Yazbek, a student in the major, enjoys the 17 hours each week he spends in the program. "It (the program) really gives you all-around experience on how to cook all kinds of things and food prep in a limited amount of time," he says.

"I want to go to a school for culinary arts when I graduate," he adds.

One of the highlights of the year for the students is "Renaissance Night" in February when they are responsible for putting together a six course meal for 200 parents in cooperation with the music, art and food services departments. "It's like a dinner theatre theater," Bill explains.

The students also cater smaller functions during the year including a holiday party for approximately 200 staff members at the school.

Shell official says an offshore gas strike would aid region

By Donna Lombardi

AUBURNDALE — If the Shell Oil Company finds natural gas during its exploratory, off-shore drilling of Georges Bank, the discovery would be the good for the region according to one top energy official.

"That (finding natural gas) would be the best thing for New England," Joseph G. Yope, project manager for Shell's Atlantic Coast drilling operation said.

In an address last week at the Marriott Hotel, Yopes discussed the operations of the controversial drilling of Georges Bank, 200 miles off the Cape Cod coast, where Shell is one of four companies in the area searching for oil and natural gas.

Speaking to 150 members of the Chemical Club of New England, at the groups' technical meeting, Yope said, "You can speculate all you want, but you'll never know if you're right or wrong until you drill a hole."

Yope outlined the general operations of the drilling, using a slide presentation entitled, "Shell Oil and Georges Bank," but talked little about the environmental impact of the project.

"Nothing's been released as to what's been found," said Yope of the drilling that began several months ago. He added that, "If a find was so significant, it would have to be announced."

Shell is drilling one of the two wells it plans to explore. The company has drilled 12,500 feet, and will drill another 4,500 feet, according to Yope, below ocean surface, where the waters in the rig-ed area are 450 feet deep.

According to Yope, there have been no major problems on the 260-foot-long rig, except an evacuation during a Sept. 8 storm, "Emily" which was 300 miles south of the rig.

Yope said, "Only 50 gallons of oil spilled during exploratory drilling" which he says is considered a comparatively "small amount."

He told members that a government supported biological tasks force is doing environmental checks on the project. Yope did not say how often the task force inspected the operations, except that, "It's ongoing."

"The United States Geological Survey (USGS) is really our watchdog," said Yope. The USGS estimated that there may be 0-150 million barrels of oil, and 280 billion cubic feet of natural gas in the Georges Bank drilling area.

Yope would not say how long Shell would stay in the area for exploratory drilling, or speculate on the future, except to say that, "By December, we'll be moving to another block."

School reuse proposal put on hold

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A proposed ordinance designed to reduce aldermanic committee work when dealing with the reuse of school buildings and other city surplus property was put on the backburner Monday night.

Alderman Terry Morris, who proposed the ordinance to reduce duplication of efforts, used a parliamentary procedure to stop debate on the ordinance after its defeat seemed imminent. Morris "chartered" the proposed ordinance after an amendment was added by the 24-member legislative body that canceled the intent of the measure.

The proposed ordinance would create a new eight member committee on the reuse of surplus property. Under present aldermanic procedures, three aldermanic committees (Finance, Administration and Planning, and Land Use) review the reuse of surplus property.

Under the ordinance, the new committee would be made up of two members from the Land Use Committee, Finance Committee, Public Facilities Committee and Administration and Planning Committee.

Opponents of the ordinance argued that the present system was effective and should not be changed.

"My experience is that the present process works well," said Administration and Planning Chairman Ernie Dietz. "I have never heard any objection from the community...I frankly think this is something (school reuse) that should not be rushed through or railroaded in the name of efficiency."

Morris, however, argued that it was unfair to force residents from villages where schools are being vacated to go to three aldermanic committees to view their opinions on school reuse.

Finance Committee member Donald Budge argued that the present committee system of dealing with school re-use should remain, noting that delays have been the result of the Mann administration; not aldermen.

"I have not heard any person complain that the process is long," said Jefferson. "I believe change for the sake of change is not good."

An angry Morris accused board members of protecting "turf" and "misrepresenting" the ordinance.

Morris, who called the ordinance an attempt to "streamline the process without losing public input," said: "We have an awful lot of work up here without having to drag the public up here on three different occasions...It is a scary day when we have something like this shot down because of half truths and misrepresentations."

Sherer said, "and insisted we put in the Paddock Pool. We did provide it. It cost us more money because the price was higher."

"The Paddock Pool is the one the city eventually removed and replaced," Sherer noted.

Problems with the surface of the pool and an inadequate filtration system in 1976 led to a city expenditure of $140,000 for renovations.

The $200,000 now being sought by the city against subcontractors involves both the firm which installed the original pool and the roofing company involved in the original contract.

Sherer said that as general contractor, Harvey Construction is now "in a position where the city is suing us now for the cost of taking out a pool we didn't want to give them in the first place."

Harvey Construction's claim against the city for $11,000 would cover that firm's additional cost in complying with the city's request that the Paddock Pool be installed, instead of the less expensive model suggested by Harvey Construction, Sherer said.

Besides the remaining suit by Harvey Construction against the city, Sherer said "one small claim" in the case, by DePaoli Mosaic Co. for "roughly $6,000" also remains. Sherer said that at this point, he believes the two claims against the city may be consolidated.

Police overtime receives final okay

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Police Department will receive at least 50 percent more than its original overtime allocation during fiscal year 1982.

Acting on the request of Police Chief William F. Quinn, aldermen Monday night voted 19 to 4 to appropriate $40,000 in additional monies to the police overtime account.

Under the original FY 82 budget, which was passed by aldermen in March, Quinn had requested $82,000 in the police overtime allowance. The new monies were taken from budget reserve earmarked for police salaries.

Despite the overwhelming approval of the appropriation, some aldermen felt that the request rendered the police budget meaningless.

"There has to be a point where we say no," said Alderman Rodney Barker of the additional appropriations. "This practice is abysmal."

Alderman Richard McGrath said: "We sat down at budget time and they thumbed their noses at us."

"They know they'll be back," McGrath added. "There is not one department head who takes it (budget time) seriously. When are we going to hold the line?"

On Nov. 9, Quinn told the Finance and Public Safety Committees, he was forced to dip into the overtime account for 24-hour coverage at Charles Brown Junior High School after a summer fire. The protection cost the city more than $25,000, but is expected to be recouped from insurance.

Quinn said the bulk of the overtime costs resulted from 12 vacancies on the force which will be reduced when 11 new officers hit the streets by the end of December.

Alderman Mark White had some reservations about the appropriations but noted there was really no choice but to approve the request. "Either we vote the money or we have no police," he said.

In defense of the overtime request, Alderman Edward Richmond noted that "the budget figures this year were artificially low."

Alderman Paul Colletti even called Quinn a victim. "In this case, the chief is doing only what he has to do for level funding," he said.

At the recent committee meetings, Quinn said the $40,000 would defray overtime costs for the next four months. However, Quinn expected he would be forced to return to aldermen in February or March for an additional overtime request of about $50,000.

Aldermen voting for the overtime appropriation were: Baker; Bauckman; Budge; Carmichael; Coletti; Creem; Daley; DePasquale; Dietz; Gaynor; Katz; Miller; Richmond; Shea; Sheehan; Taglienti; Tennant; White; Jefferson.

Aldermen voting against the appropriation were: Barker; McGrath; Morris; Schur. Aldermen absent: Gentile.

question the credibility of someone who claims to be a candidate, does nothing for the community and then pulls something like this."

Morris topped the ticket in the ward 2 at large race receiving 8,707 votes. Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond captured the second seat by receiving 7,853 votes.

Ciccone, who also made an unsuccessful bid for the seat against Morris and Richmond in the 1979 city election, received 5,534 votes.

Ciccone, president of a restaurant development corporation, said: "I just don't want to see this guy get away with this. I wouldn't want to see anybody get away with it."

Morris, deputy director of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination and a Suffolk Law School student, said it is "ironic" that Ciccone has questioned his standing.

"She questions my standing in the community," he said. "But where has she been anytime?"

When asked why she waited until after the election to object to Morris' residency, Ciccone said she "had to be sure" Morris did not live at the Linwood Ave. address.

"I want the seat," Ciccone added. "If he is going to be a lawyer, he shouldn't be lying about his address."

Alderman Mark White, who said he is aiding Morris in the case, called the charge by Ciccone "utter nonsense and the perfect example of sour grapes."

Licari noted that if Morris was declared an illegally registered voter and a new election was held, the veteran alderman could move back into the ward and run for the seat again.

Rubbish fire at North

NEWTONVILLE—Firefighters went to Newton North High School last Thursday after being alerted to a rubbish fire in the second floor hallway of the school.

Fire officials said the fire, which caused a light smoke condition in the hallway, was maliciously set.

Engines two, four, five, six and ladders one and three and Assistant Chief Murphy went to the scene at 12:11 p.m., and remained at the scene for about 15 minutes.

Chief issues parking caution

NEWTON — Chief William F. Quinn of the Newton Police Department announced this week that all-night parking is forbidden in all parts of the city.

The chief said the city has a year-round ban on street parking for more than one hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. to ease the problems of street cleaning and snow plowing.

"The ordinance is in effect year round and does not create too much hardship," Chief Quinn said, "as most of our residents have driveways."

With the snow season closing in, Quinn said, his department is now concentrating on enforcement of the ordinance.

"We are trying to warn violators with courtesy tags," the chief noted, since the all-night prohibition went into effect today. "Of course if we have a street that contains repeat violators or a citizen complaint, we tag and have been tagging."

Quinn said so far this year his department has "issued thousands of warning notices to avoid any misunderstanding."

"It is amazing to me that we have citizens complaining about being tagged as we have been enforcing this ordinance for over 40 years," Quinn said.

The all-night, on-street parking ban is geared toward keeping the roads cleared of snow, and allowing traffic to pass more easily.

"No one can drive until the streets are plowed," the chief said. "And plows may not get through if drivers do not cooperate and park off the streets."

South students learn management

Students from the marketing and management class at Newton South High School had the opportunity to learn first-hand how a large corporation puts textbook principles into commercial practice.

At the invitation of Irma Mann, vice-president of Sonesta International Hotels Corporation, students attended a day-long meeting at the Sonesta Hotel in Cambridge and learned about several phases of the hotel's operation, including reservations, marketing, sales, food, beverages, and public relations.

Reagan defects come to fore

You were never promised a rose garden...steady on course...convalescence follows surgery and medicine before the cure...things usually get worse before they get better.

Familiar bromides, these, but applicable to the predicament Ronald Reagan finds himself in.

Not surprisingly, his administration is a ship buffeted by turbulent waters. A honeymoon over 10 months is a long time for a presidency, particularly one which has been trying to reverse a socio-liberal trend that has prevailed for more than a half century.

With or without the foul-up by brash team member David Stockman and internal power struggles, chiefly that involving Alexander Haig, it was going to happen. These are an embarrassment, even more harmful, perhaps, in an extraordinarily sensitive time.

The simple facts of life are that no matter the personality vagaries, a recession has arrived due in part to the carrying out of the corrective program for which Reagan was elected and marketplace pressures induced by an overheated economy. Tough times are ahead, with more unemployment and business stress.

For Massachusetts, the outlook is by no means glum. Industry has generated new strength since the last recession in the mid-1970s, notably in the high technology area. Financial institutions are in far better shape than those in other parts of the country. Although jobless figures are higher, they don't look bad by comparison.

Best of all, the Commonwealth is achieving government spending constraints with Proposition 2½ and put a mortal fear in the hearts of election officials over tax policies. Benefits to accrue from this have to depend in great measure on Washington leadership.

It has to be a crisis juncture for Reagan. His foreign policy, defense buildup and reduction of federal services are under fire. Echoes of the Carter decline can be sensed. Top aides are getting him into difficulty. Reagan himself is developing a liability factor, even with all his amiability and poise, as he shifts from earlier positions and tries to talk around differences with a flow of confusing rhetoric.

For David Stockman, the humiliation has been intense and usefulness of the economic whiz kid appears to have been destroyed. Not to be overlooked, however, is awareness his indiscretion in baring his soul for Atlantic Monthly actually exposed weaknesses or legitimate doubts in the White House grand design for change.

Mr. Reagan ought to address himself to these. It is important that he reconcile military spending with human services need, for example. He has personal popularity still going for him, plus a willingness of the public to give him time for results to come. At the moment, he has to display crisis management.

MBTA: A system in trouble

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

The mismanagement and failure of the MBTA to live within its budget has put commuters and taxpayers up against the wall year after year.

This year appears to be no exception. The commuting public is getting angry. Ridership has declined approximately 20 percent in the last year. While fares have increased, service has declined.

The MBTA carmen's union, which represents 3,500 of the 5,000 MBTA employees, is determined to block legitimate attempts to reform the system. The union recently threatened a slowdown to protest concessions won by management in court. And the time bomb is ticking.

Indeed, as state Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton) and a group of public officials recently warned, time may be running out for the state transit system.

Cohen and Rep. Michael Barrett (D-Reading), who co-authored the management rights bill upheld in a federal court decision, contend that it is only tough management that will allow the system to survive.

Cohen and Barrett have called on MBTA management to implement a drastic reorganization of the system's work force in order to shave $30 million from the $380 million T budget and keep spending at the same level as last year.

"The money hose is dry," Cohen recently said. "The only way the T is going to survive is by beginning to conserve money." He's right. The 79 cities and towns served by the system are facing the fiscal squeeze imposed by Proposition 2½ and federal funds have also been sharply cut-back.

News analysis

MBTA management has taken the first step by dropping a total of 68 door guards and reassigning an additional 12 guards. The cutbacks may be painful, but they are necessary.

"The situation is so critical that all of the parties involved have to pull together," Cohen said. "A vigorous implementation of the management rights bill is in the long term interest of the union."

Union officials don't view it that way. The union tells us MBTA management are the bad guys in the black hats. Management sees the union as the villain.

Both sides are opponents in a battle that has claimed millions of dollars from taxpayers and the confidence of the commuting public.

One of the primary reasons for the high cost of the system has clearly been a myriad of work rules that have nurtured inefficiency. Certainly, management must implement sweeping changes if the system is going to survive. But the union can not be treated as a whipping boy in any successful reform.

Any long lasting and realistic reform must involve the union. The divisiveness is deep and certainly wounds inflicted from both sides - management and union - can't be healed overnight. But attempts must be made on both sides to bridge the gap that is rapidly destroying the system.

MBTA management must move quickly and forcefully with management rights. The union must be willing to take a role in saving the system if public transportation is going to get back on the right track.

Last year, the transit system came to a halt on Dec. 6, forcing the legislature to approve a $41 million supplemental budget. Next time, the money won't be there.

Strange birds, Registry woes

Wonder drugs

One thing we always enjoy at The Graphic is going through the mail each day and coming up with a number of newsletters from groups and clubs around the Garden City.

Last week's issue of the "Kiwanis Guide" which is the Newton Kiwanis Club newsletter, provided interesting reading and something of an insight into the wit of its author.

The Guide noted that Joe Sifford of Shaklee Corp. was the club's guest speaker recently.

"It seems," the Guide reported, "they have a 'wonder drug' which improves one's sex life. He (Sifford) shouldn't even waste his time at Rotary with his presentation. It's a 'dead' market."

Actually, according to the Guide, Sifford's presentation was an informative one on food supplements.

We await a response in the next issue of the Rotary Club's newsletter.

United effort

When it comes to fund-raising for a good cause, Newton residents are among the best.

A recent report from the United Way on its ongoing fund-raising efforts has some high praise for some local folks.

West Division Chairman Michael Holmes of Baybank Middlesex in Burlington cited employees of the American Can Co. of Newton, led by keyperson Carol Chomsky, after the Can Co. workers increased their giving to United Way 96 percent over last year.

Employees of West Newton Savings Bank led by keyperson Debra Martin, increased their giving some 60 percent over last year.

In these times of tight wallets, those are amazing figures.

Bird sightings

Following Gov. Ed King's veto of the bottle bill (which didn't work this time) one can only wish that supporters of the bill would dump all their empties on the lawn of his Winthrop home.

But the president of the Mass. Audubon Society in Lincoln came up with the ultimate retaliation against King - sick the "bottle bill bird" on him.

Gerard A. Bertrand, Mass. Audubon President, said last week in a whimsical news release that "the bottle bill bird, first seen in Massachusetts nearly a decade ago, is not yet extinct in the Bay State."

While describing the "bird" as endangered, Dr. Bertrand said the bird is "a patient creature, one that will eventually thrive in Massachusetts as it already has done in Maine, Vermont and Michigan."

The bird, Bertrand wrote, hasn't yet made its permanent home in the commonwealth in spite of very strong support from both the public and legislature. Dr. Bertrand's letter, you must realize, came before Monday's Senate vote overriding King's veto of the bill.

"Some of its opponents, flying in the face of the facts, have claimed that the bottle bill bird will cost consumers money and use additional water," Bertrand wrote. "Such bird-brained ideas are simply not true."

Other bottle bill detractors, apparently "winging it," question the bird's ability to reduce the amount of litter while not reducing jobs in the state, Bertyrand said.

"Since there is strong evidence to the contrary, these arguments are clearly fowl play," Bertrand wrote. "Many of the bottle bill bird's supporters believe that opponents simply identify with more traditional birds, such as the turkey."

Letters

Laws are not for protection of the dogs

To the editor:

It seems to me rather unlikely that if someone were really concerned about their lost pet, that it would take them longer than 14 days to get around to checking out the local dog pound. I would not expect the "lost" pooch to be hanging around the pound longer than 2 weeks at taxpayers' expense before it was put to sleep or given to a laboratory to be used in experiments where it could benefit medical research.

The reality of the situation is that stray dogs are a dangerous nuisance to any community, and that pet owners are often grossly negligent in their care. Frequently, someone finds themselves with an unwanted pet and hasn't got it in them to responsibly have it put to sleep. Instead, they drive it off to the woods somewhere and let it go. Then, the animals, forced onto their own resources, relearn their natural predatory instincts as they return to the wild, with a macabre twist.

The feral days, raised in captivity, have lost their fear of man. In the woods, and very close to urban areas, feral dogs hunt in packs running down deer, and chasing them onto highways where they are hit by cars. It is not very unusual for fishermen and hikers to be attacked by a pack of wild dogs, and those that live through the experience to tell about it are lucky.

Newton has a leash law that is violated so commonly that enforcement of the law is very difficult. I lived in Newton as a child and remember the particularly distressing experience of being knocked off my bicycle as a dog sank its teeth into my knee. I recognized the dog, to my chagrin it was one of the several puppies we gave away a few years earlier. Several years ago I regularly rode a motorcycle and every dog I drove by just had to give chase. I'll bet every deliveryman and mailman you meet could spend hours recounting their experiences with obnoxious dogs. Trash day is mute testimony to how many dogs were let run loose the night before (and how futile putting trash out in plastic garbage bags is).

I think I would faint from disbelief if every dog owner took owning their pet seriously and kept it on a leash and showed some respect for where they allowed their dogs to relieve themselves, and trained it to bark at burglars and suspicious character instead of other dogs.

Dana Smith
Newton

The laws are for the protection of the citizenry, the voters, the taxpayers, the people who live and work and travel through the Commonwealth. The laws are not for the protection of stray, unwanted animals who are often a threat to the public health. I'm not trying to offend responsible, caring people who take good care of and are proud of their pets.

Danger in super search

To the editor:

It has become patently apparent that the committee being set up by the Newton School Committee is in imminent implicit danger of being grievously deficient on several serious counts, despite presumably good intentions.

1. The approximately two-thirds of the citizens of Newton who pay for the public schools but have no children presently in said schools will be, for the most part, unrepresented or significantly underrepresented.

2. Despite apparent efforts to make the selection of committee members appear diverse, the most likely result is a heavily preponderant bias toward particular and possibly inbred viewpoints, cogent though they will most probably be.

Before flying off the handle, Mr. Shacter should check his facts concerning Rep. DeNucci's personal and political views. If Mr. Shacter's letter is designed to accuse Rep. DeNucci of not being supportive of Israel or the interests of the Jewish community, he could not have been more off base. I believe this is just one more incident of divisiveness which our society can do without.

Zvi A. (Skip) Sesling
Administrative Assistant

Since 1970 Father Drinan and his group have been inflicting their views on the citizens of Newton.

This group, who always vote like puppets with their biased, dominated slate cards in hand, have been a divisive influence in Newton politics.

Their premise has always been "that the end justifies the means," whether attending

3. Active, interested civic organizations representing broader segments of the city's population could be preempted — omitted from direct participation.

4. The contemplated invitation and processing of applications and resumes from the public for a relatively small number of committee memberships could too easily result in elitism or more sameness.

5. There seems to be a heavy loading of committee members subject to the authority of a new superintendent or predisposed toward such members. Prudence would involve consulting such members but not making them dominant or unduly influential in selecting their own boss.

school committee meetings or campaigning for public office.

Father Drinan knows that this premise is contrary to his Jesuit education, probably the reason he was ordered to get out of politics.

The shame is that good, qualified candidates don't get a fair shake and that other good, qualified candidates elect not to run.

Reader calls it a bum charge against Edison

To the editor:

In a recent column, J.J. Smith argued that Boston Edison shareholders should pay for the cancelled Pilgrim 2 project. We disagree and are distressed that Mr. Smith would perpetuate the myth of the fat, rich, arrogant shareholder without checking the facts.

The facts are that the average shareholder is 64 years old, retired, living in Massachusetts and the owner of about 300 shares. Since 1972 that shareholder has seen the price of stock fall from $43 a share to about $23 a share today and has realized only a 15 percent increase in dividends. Hardly what one would call rich, fat and arrogant.

Voter says she almost missed the ballot question

To the editor:

As a Newton voter, I am very distressed that I missed an opportunity to register my vote in favor of a nuclear freeze on Tuesday, Nov. 3. On the voting machine the referendum question was placed off by itself above the long line of candidates' names, so that I completely failed to see it. Only after stepping out of the booth did I recall hearing about a nuclear freeze proposition — and then, of course, it was too late.

My husband told me he too would have missed seeing the question, except that just before entering the polling place he noticed someone with a pro-nuclear freeze picket which reminded him to look for this issue on the machine. If it hadn't been for that chance occurrence, he said, he too would never have noticed that lever on the voting machine.

Since my husband and I are neither half-witted nor sight-impaired, I imagine there are many other Newton voters who inadvertently missed the nuclear freeze referendum, and therefore I don't think the numerical results necessarily reflect public opinion on this supremely important issue.

This is by no means the only time I have been confused trying to vote in

In the last decade those shareholders have been asked to take all the risks of investments while being denied any benefits. For example, since the Pilgrim 1 nuclear power plant went into operation in 1972, customers have received $700 million in fuel savings, and another $250 million as a subsidy from our shareholders. That subsidy represents the amount of money shareholders should have earned based on what the Department of Public Utilities allowed. In effect the DPU has been giving with one hand in the form of a rate of return and then taking away with the other by denying adequate revenues to attain it. What they take away from shareholders goes to the customer.

With that kind of inequity, is it any wonder that the shareholder might one day ask, "Why should I put up any more money if I take all the risks and see none of the benefits?" And what happens if the shareholder says, "STOP, don't spend any more money."

Mr. Smith also was wrong in arguing that Pilgrim 2 was the victim of Edison mistakes and "goofs" in projecting future power needs. The fact is Pilgrim 2 was to be built as the best means of reducing dependence on OPEC oil, a fact recognized by both the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Department of Public Utilities. That is not a foolhardy goal and Pilgrim 2 over the long run might still be the best means of attaining it. But too much economic and regulatory uncertainty exists today to go forward with that option.

Asking to recover an investment that was prudent and made in good faith — based on the best information available at the time — is not "unmitigated gall and arrogance." It is in fact the only responsible course of action for a regulated company to follow if it is going to attract future investors.

And what happens if Mr. Smith's approach to the problem is followed? First, Boston Edison's very ability to raise some of the $1 billion needed over the next 10 years just to maintain the system would be jeopardized, and that hurts all of us. But equally important, the company's efforts to reduce oil consumption would be stymied. It could mean not converting existing oil-fired units to coal, an investment requiring about $1 billion and resulting in fuel savings to customers of some $1.6 billion in 10 years. It could mean we would be blocked from opportunities to invest in hydroelectric and nuclear projects of other New England and Canadian utilities.

Pilgrim 2 had been the cornerstone of efforts to reduce the use of oil to produce electricity from 70 percent to 20 percent. The importance of that goal should be clear to anyone who remembers the impact on utility prices of three oil supply interruptions since 1973. No part of the country is as severely affected as New England by OPEC's actions and Pilgrim 2 would have taken OPEC out of the picture in setting prices.

District Manager

Oh, that hungry meter

To the editor:

As a college student, I was delighted to obtain a job in Newton Centre in order to help defray living expenses, if only in a small way. During my past month of employment, however, I have found that the City of Newton has devised a very effective machine which quite systematically chips away at the paycheck that I look forward to each week. It's called "The Parking Meter."

Working in conjunction with the limited parking space and the designated time limits of certain spaces, "The Parking Meter" can eat up as much as $2 per day if one works an 8-hour shift. At minimum wage, that equals approximately two-thirds of an hour's pay.

Coupled with the inconvenience of leaving work every three hours to run out and feed the machine its diet of quarters, employees of the stores in Newton Centre are being unduly penalized.

Since I am only a part-time employee, I do not experience the everyday demand of "The Parking Meter." However, my frustration at receiving three parking tickets and depositing quarter after quarter just so I can have safe transportation home after my day's work has prompted me to write this letter and pose a question: Newton — can anything be done to curb the insatiable appetite of "The Parking Meter?"

Setting the record straight

To the editor:

I am writing about several errors in your Nov. 4, (page 6) article about the rebuilding of C.E. Brown Junior High School.

Members of the faculty and staff and several curriculum coordinators have been working hard since the fire occurred in mid-August on the educational specifications of the school, that is, what needs to be rebuilt in terms of future enrollments, needs, mandates, and technologies. We do not wish to rebuild an outdated facility.

We lost not only the library, but also an AV area, a Social Studies/Language Arts Resource Room, half of two classrooms (one of which was the computer room), several storage areas, three science classrooms, three general classrooms, and access to a lecture hall.

The Ed Specs are being reviewed by the central administrative staff at the Education Center now, and will be presented to the School Committee before Thanksgiving.

Angela Nielsen,
President, Brown PTA

Mayor Mann says thanks

To the editor:

I am deeply grateful to you for your endorsement in the recent election.

I am also grateful to all of those citizens who found the time to involve themselves in working for the candidates who sought elective office.

Newton is a wonderful place to live, to raise a family, to be educated, and to make significant contributions to our society. I hope that it will always remain so.

It is my hope that the newly elected officials of the School Committee, the Board of Aldermen, and the Mayor's Office will unite to face the very difficult challenges of trying to provide services within the demands of cost containment.

Finally, to my many friends and supporters, an additional and heartfelt "thank you" for the many hours of devoted service that you rendered.

Sincerely
Theodore D. Mann
Mayor

Two good representatives

To the editor:

It could be of interest to you and should be of interest to the Newton community to learn that Newton schools are being represented at the National Conference of Teachers of English, an influential body of English educators and scholars from around the United States and Canada.

Two teachers from Warren Junior High School, Jon B. Adams and Gary W. Elliott, have been invited and have agreed to speak as well as conduct a workshop at the National Conference.

The conference will be held at the Sheraton Plaza, Boston, from Nov. 20-25.

The pair of teachers, renown throughout the United States for their 10 recently published instructor's manuals on the teaching of language arts and skills, teaching of composition skills, and the teaching of a full course in English to high school seniors (all published by SRA, Chicago), will be addressing the subject of teaching methods and curriculum facing today's classroom teachers; classroom teachers having to cope with fiscal constraints affecting class size, staffing, behavior, motivation, and instruction. Since they, Adams and Elliott, have been team teaching ninth grade English at Warren for the past 15 years and have noticed qualitative, if not outstanding results in the attitudes and achievement of the more than three thousand students they have encountered, it is appropriate that they have titled their workshop: "TEAM TEACHING...A Method for Inspiring Students toward Meaningful Learning, Clear Thinking, and Mature Writing."

It should come as a pleasant refreshment to those citizens of Newton who still have children attending its public schools to know that its teachers, Mr. Adams and Mr. Elliott as one example, are truly dedicated, of the highest quality, and recognized as insightful leaders in their profession.

KIDS' COURSES - Registration for January sessions of Arts in the Parks sponsored children's classes in music, art and creative movement is now being accepted. Information may be obtained by calling the Newton Recreation Dept. at 552-7120.

Ballet opens school

NEWTON CORNER — Keith Brown, general manager of the Boston Repertory Ballet and long-time Newton resident, announces the opening of the School of the Boston Repertory Ballet at 237 Washington St. at Newton Corner.

The Boston Repertory Ballet is considered one of the finest young classical ballet companies in the region. Under the direction of teacher and choreographer Samuel Kurkjian it has toured extensively throughout New England and has danced to critical praise at the prestigious Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Its gala at Boston's Metropolitan Center featuring Soviet defector, Alexander Godunov was heralded by critics as the high point of the year's dance season.

Rotary donates funds

Members of the Rotary Club of Boston have donated $9,000 toward the cost of new computer equipment for National Braille Press. Craig Pfeiffer, Vice President of Boston Edison, has presented a check for this amount on behalf of his fellow Rotarians to William M. Raeder, of Newton, NBP Managing Director. The equipment, totalling $315,000 in value, is being used to increase the efficiency of National Braille Press, now in its 55th year as a Boston institution helping the blind.

The Boston Rep Ballet has operated a school in Boston since 1976 and has earned a reputation as a training ground for dancers in the area. It is projected that properly qualified students will be used for occasional professional performances and lecture demonstrations within the company's regular season.

A full schedule of classes from beginners to advanced will be offered as well as popular evening classes for adults. Of special interest will be the introduction of jazz classes for children as well as adults.

Assessor reaffirms intent to release master assessment list to the public

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Chief Assessor Harold Brady has reaffirmed the city's intent to release a master assessment list with new property values of all homes to aid taxpayers in informal appeals of property values.

Finnegan Associates, the Acton firm conducting the massive accelerated revaluation project, has strongly objected to releasing the list because it may result in a dramatic increase in taxpayer appeals.

The firm has maintained that the list is the property of the company until the informal appeals with the company are completed and final figures are turned over to the city.

The company, however, has confirmed that taxpayers will be allowed to view the list if they make an appointment with company officials after proposed assessments are released on Dec.

1. Residents can schedule informal appeals with the company during the month of January.

In a recent letter to Robert Finnegan, president of Finnegan Associates, Brady told Finnegan to make necessary preparations if he believes appeals will increase if the list is released.

The letter reads in part: "This communication is to formally advise you and to reiterate our position and decision on this very important public information policy. If you feel that the distribution of this list may result in an increase in the number of informal taxpayer sessions you should begin preparation efforts to accommodate your anticipated increase."

Brady also noted in the letter that the city intends to have the list printed by local newspapers and on file in public buildings, including libraries, throughout the city.

The master assessment list could be used by residents to compare assessments of comparable homes. After informal appeals with the firm, residents still have the opportunity to appeal to assessors and the state Appellate Tax Board.

Robert Finnegan is reviewing the dispute with his attorneys. City Solicitor Daniel Funk has maintained that the list is the property of the city and will be released. Finnegan has stressed that the city did not request that the list be released in the $600,000 contract with the company.

Brady said that the city has also hired a Boston firm - R.M. Bradley - to monitor the final real estate appraisals by Finnegan. Brady said he did not know how much the contract with the firm will cost the city.

The state Department of Revenue is scheduled to begin a formal review of the revaluation beginning Dec. 1. If Finnegan does not complete the project by Jan. 1 and the figures are not approved by the Revenue Department, the city would be forced to cut an additional $11 million from this year's municipal budget. The cut could result in the layoff of an additional 500 municipal employees.

Many aldermen have contended that the firm will not be able to complete the project before the Jan. 1 deadline. Finnegan was the only firm willing to take on the accelerated revaluation project.

Brady assured that the revaluation process is on schedule and the city will be ready for the certification review by Revenue Department personnel who will spot check the data and assessments.

When the city wide master assessment list was released during the last revaluation in 1975, residents stormed City Hall. The revaluation, which resulted in 35 percent of all homeowners appealing, was not implemented after the uproar.

South High fire investigation underway

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An investigation is underway following the city's third school fire since April which caused an estimated $25,000 in damage to a wing of Newton South High last week.

Assistant Fire Chief William Dwyer said the damage to the steel and masonry two-story building was confined to the end of one wing of the school where the offices for Wheeler House are located.

According to Dwyer, the cause of the fire is "still undetermined," but is "suspicious." Dwyer said an alarm triggered by a heat detector went off around 12:30 a.m. last Wednesday and that Engines 3, 7, and 10, ladders 2 and 3 and Assistant Chief Bernard Goulding were dispatched to the scene.

Dwyer said the Wheeler House office suffered smoke and water damage and that along with interior trim and furnishings, several pieces of furniture and papers were damaged. There was no structural damage, Dwyer said.

School Department cleanup crews were on the scene around 2 a.m. last Wednesday on the Veteran's Day holiday and Building Department workers began working on replacing a damaged ceiling and lights in a section of a corridor where the most severe fire damage resulted.

As promised by Building Commissioner Allan Fraser, the section of Wheeler House affected by the fire was open and ready for classes by Thursday morning.

Fraser said windows on the ground floor were broken because of the heat from the fire, but said several second floor windows above the section of the ground floor were apparently broken by vandals.

Fraser said the fire appeared to have begun where several filing cabinets were kept against a corridor wall.

According to police officials, it appeared that someone had entered the building "because there were things out of place that should not have been," but there was no sign of forced entry.

Last April a fire gutted one of three buildings of the Hyde Elementary School and on Aug. 15, a wing of Brown Junior High (formerly Meadowbrook) suffered extensive damage.

Trash tax for apartments, condos may be nixed

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Apartment and condominium dwellers will probably no longer be forced to pay a trash collection fee.

The Board of Aldermen Monday night unanimously approved a preliminary report from the Public Facilities Committee that would eliminate the fee for all residential trash pickup.

The 24-member legislative body had approved the trash collection fee earlier this year in order to make up for the loss of revenue under Proposition 2½.

The change in the ordinance, which requires all commercial facilities and institutions to pay a fee, must still be reviewed by the Legislation and Rules Committee. In addition to commercial facilities, apartment and condominium owners have been charged the fee since July.

The Legislation and Rules Committee indicated support for the ordinance change at a brief recess meeting.

The ordinance change must be approved by the full board once again. The approval appears almost certain.

Aldermen argued that the $2 charge per pickup for apartment and condominium owners was discriminatory and unfair. Homeowners are not charged the fee under the ordinance.

Alderman Richard McGrath said that he will move that the ordinance be rescinded effective Jan. 1 and that apartment and condominium owners be given a rebate on money already collected.

A group of about 15 elderly apartment and condominium owners gathered at the meeting in support of a change in the ordinance. Wilma Strachan, who owns a condominium on Norwood Ave., protested: "I just refuse to pay it. It's very unfair."

Ellen MacLeod agreed. "We are not the owners of the building," she exclaimed. "We only rent it."

Department of Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas said that the elimination of the fee will result in an annual loss of $100,000 in revenue for the city.

The elimination of the fee, Thomas said, could possibly have a damaging long term effect. He speculated that there is a "possibility" the trash collection service could be eliminated in the next fiscal year.

Thomas had argued that the fee to apartment and condominium owners was not discriminatory because the collection requires different collection equipment.

"They are talking about special equipment," snapped Alderman Dominic Taglienti, a city apartment owner. "I haven't seen any special equipment in this city for 64 years."

Noting that the fee was not charged to all homeowners because it was an election year, Alderman Mark White said the ordinance was "clearly discriminatory and had no rational basis."

Alderman Robert Tennant called the fee part of the list of unfair "backdoor taxes" that have been implemented to raise revenue in the wake of Proposition 2½.

Ward 2 Alderman Elaine Gentile was the only board member absent.

Judge Basbas' photos are featured at library

NEWTON CORNER — Travels throughout New England provided the inspiration for the colorful and contemplative scenes of covered bridges by the Honorable Monte G. Basbas who will exhibit his photographs in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, from Dec. 2 through Jan. 5. Judge Basbas will be at the opening reception at the library Wednesday, Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome.

Wooden bridges of all shapes and sizes in New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts provide the raw material for Judge Basbas' compositions that may simultaneously represent a specific site and evoke a season and a mood.

The photographs are for the most part representational, reflecting the judge's concern in recording a disappearing aspect of New England history. The colors-greens and yellows of summer, bright sharp hues of spring, elegant rich tones of autumn with beautiful blue skies — reflect Judge Basbas' interest in the aesthetic values of picture making.

Basbas uses a Nikon F-2 and a Hasselblad camera and uses vericolor film. With the Hasselblad he gets large negatives, while the Nikon offers a rectangular format and the opportunity to use a zoom lens. The photographs, developed by Judge Basbas in his own darkroom, are treated with care, with attention to detail and a great sensitivity to color and nuance. He has been photographing scenes of New England for more than 30 years and was a photo reconnaissance fighter pilot during World War II.

Main library hours are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; Saturday 9-5; and Sunday 1-4.

The library will be closed Christmas and New Year's Day. For more information call 552-7145.

NSO concert on is Saturday

In its third performance at The Mall at Chestnut Hill, the Newton Symphony Orchestra Chamber Orchestra, under the baton of its Principal Flute Edward Johnson, will present works of Haydn and Bach, on Saturday, Nov. 21, at noon.

Johnson, who recently conducted the NSO in a work by his colleague in the Orchestra, Dann Wyman, will present the Haydn Trumpet Concerto, with John Morrison, soloist, and the Bach Cantata No. 51, "Praise God All Ye Lands," for strings, trumpet and soprano. Janice Williams, soprano, will be the soloist, along with Morrison in this piece. The group will also perform the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2.

Janice Williams, who will be singing with the NSO Chamber Orchestra for the first time, is the soloist at Temple Shalom in Newton and at the Payson Park Church in Belmont. She was a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera auditions, and is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music.

Morrison is the Principal Trumpet of the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

Edward Johnson will be the soloist at the next NSO subscription concert, on Jan. 17, joining Ann Hobson Pilot of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in the Flute and Harp Concerto by Mozart. The concert will be conducted by Guest Conductor Alan Balter, an Exxon/Arts Endowment Conductor with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. A few tickets remain for this concert, and for ticket information and reservations, call 965-2555.

Recreation notes

Keep Off the Ice
Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran reminds children and parents that the arrival of the first freezing temperatures heralds an extremely hazardous period for eager skaters.

Halloran emphasizes that it takes many days and nights of well below freezing temperatures to create ice surfaces suitable for skating. The Recreation Department monitors ice conditions and when the skating areas under the jurisdiction of the Recreation Department are safe, they will be opened. Until that time Commissioner Halloran warns children to keep off natural ice surfaces throughout the city. Failure to heed this warning could result in tragedy.

The Taylors have been bringing Folk Dancing to Copley Square and Cambridge for many years. The program is geared for both children and adults and is designed to teach children and adults separately and also provide time for both groups to join in dances suitable for everyone.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and $1.25 for children and seniors. To minimize expenses, everyone is asked to contribute something to the refreshments.

Community day care continues registration

NEWTON — Anthony J. Bibbo, executive director of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., announced this week that registrations for day care services will be continued daily Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Commenting on the programs which serve youngsters three months old through grade five, Bibbo stated that, "The major goal for the program is to provide a warm, flexible, and nurturing environment where children can grow and be happy. It is our goal," he added, "to meet the social, emotional, intellectual and physical needs of each child in accordance with his or her individual needs and abilities."

The infant toddler program provides a safe, warm, and stimulating environment designed to maximize the growth and development of children between the ages of three and 33 months. "Our primary goal for this program," Bibbo pointed out, "is to support the development in each child."

The hours are: 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. This program is housed at the Auburndale Congregational Church, 64 Hancock Street, Auburndale.

The pre-school day care centers provide a variety of activities for children two years-nine months to six years of age. Staffing is at a ratio of one to five. A hot lunch and two nutritious snacks are served daily. The hours are 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. The center will be located at the newly renovated facilities of the NCSC Inc. at 492 Waltham Street in West Newton.

The after-school care program is a flexible and recreational program designed for after school hours of children in grades one through five. The program includes a variety of activities such as music, dance, creative movement, field trips, movies, bowling, crafts, cooking, woodworking and drama.

Help with school work is always available. The staff ratio is one to seven. Children bring their lunch, which is supplemented with milk, soup, and an afternoon snack. The center is open during all school vacations (most holidays) on a full-time basis from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. The hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 3 to 6 p.m., and Tuesday and Thursdays 1 to 6 p.m. This program will also be housed at the Waltham Street facility.

The family day care is an extension of the Newton day care centers. Family day care provides care for children in private homes. Home providers receive supervision and in-service training from the agency. Full-time, part-time or temporary care may be arranged. Home providers are licensed by the Office for Children.

Beth Avodah acquires a treasure

NEWTON — Temple Beth Avodah has been fortunate in acquiring a 19th-century Torah which survived the Holocaust, unlike the Jewish residents of the town of Horovice, Czechoslovakia, from which it came. How, then, did this Scroll, holy to the Jewish people, escape destruction? Ironically it was the Nazi's plan to create a museum to show the Aryans artifacts of the "extinct" Jewish "race" that saved this Torah.

Religious articles were collected from outlying areas and brought to the city of Prague for storage. This Holy Scroll was but one of 1564 found there. Most were determined to be unusable in a religious service due to destruction. Such is the case of the signed Scroll dedicated at the Yom Kippur Memorial Service, in memory of the six-million Jews who lost their lives in the Holocaust.

The Torah then was housed in a specially-built cabinet, a focal point of the Temple's entry, by Rabbi Robert M. Miller and Bernard Julius, chairman of the committee responsible for the Torah's acquisition, as the congregation remained standing.

Arms race address is on Sunday

NEWTON — Jerome Grossman, political analyst and president of the Council For A Livable World will address the Forum at Second Church on Sunday, Nov. 22 at 11:30 a.m. Grossman's subject will be "Reversing the Nuclear Arms Race: Is There Hope?"

Cohen is legislator of year

Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) has won the Massachusetts Municipal Association Legislator of the Year Award for his efforts on behalf of municipal government.

In announcing the award the statewide Municipal Association cited Cohen for his role as floor manager of the MBTA reform bill, which strengthened the ability of cities and towns to control transit costs, and for his strong support of the new county budget law, which places the power to approve county budgets in the hands of local officials from cities and towns within each county. Cohen also was a leader of attempts in the House to provide additional state aid to cities and towns in the state's FY 1982 budget to help them cope with the effects of Proposition 2½.

"Because of Representative Cohen's persistence we now have some real leverage in the effort to cut MBTA costs while improving service," said James Segal, executive director of the statewide Municipal Association. "David Cohen has been an intelligent and dedicated worker for the interests of our state's communities."

Cohen will receive the Legislator of the Year Award at the Massachusetts Municipal Association's Annual Meeting on Nov. 14 in Hyannis. Approximately 1,000 local officials from across the commonwealth will be in attendance.

Newton blaze injures one firefighter

NEWTON CENTRE — The origin of a Wednesday morning fire last week which caused extensive damage to a vacant house on June Lane, is under investigation, according to William Dwyer, Assistant Fire Chief.

The fire department was alerted at 2 a.m. to the blaze, according to Dwyer, who said,

"There was a lot of fire showing," when officials arrived at the scene.

One firefighter was injured during the blaze, said Dwyer, who added that the injured man was released from the hospital after having a foreign object removed from his eye.

Four engines and two ladders went to the scene of the fire, which was put out 45 minutes after firefighters arrived, according to Dwyer.

"The damage is extensive," said Dwyer, "The whole building was extensively damaged."

One engine stayed until 8 a.m. at the scene of the fire, which caused unestimated damage to the 2 1/2 story wood framed structure. Dwyer said one company stayed to check the smoldering embers, "making sure that they were completely extinguished."

There was no damaged caused to any area surrounding the house. "It was confined to the building," said Dwyer.

Newton Rep. Cohen honored by ADL

NEWTON — The New England Board of the Anti-Defamation League has announced that State Rep. David Cohen of Newton will be honored on Sunday, Nov. 16, for his active involvement with and outstanding work on behalf of the Anti-Defamation League this year.

Keynote speaker will be U.S. Sen. Paul Tsongas, and the meeting will take place at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

Steven B. Kay, ADL board chairman, hailed Cohen for his filing of an ADL-supported bill banning the operation of the Ku Klux Klan and neo-Nazi paramilitary training camps in Massachusetts. The bill has the support of the NAACP, Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition, Urban League, Newton Human Rights Commission and other community groups.

Leonard Zakim, ADL civil rights director, noted that Cohen's commitment to the fight against anti-Semitism and all forms of bigotry has been exhibited on numerous occasions.

Azkim stated that when anti-Semitism and anti-Zionism on the campus and in the school paper at U-Mass Amherst provoked tensions on the state-run campus, David Cohen personally traveled to Amherst to meet with school administrators.

Zakim also commended Cohen for his active interest in such issues as civil rights, intergroup relations and Jewish community affairs.

"All of his constituents should take pride in his achievements," Zakim said.

Kay added that Cohen serves as an example to all elected officials who choose silence as a response to prejudice; that their responsibility to their community requires more than empty rhetoric or a vote on a fiscal measure.

"Cohen," said Kay, "has shown us in his typically low-key way that we can expect and get more than that, and David's actions have proven that on a daily basis."

Mayor Mann kicks off Great American Smokeout Nov. 19

NEWTON — On Nov. 19, the Newton Health Department and the Newton-Wellesley Public Education Committee of the American Cancer Society will be celebrating the "Great American Smokeout."

Mayor Theodore Mann kicked off the campaign by endorsing the smokeout and urging all smokers to lay down their packs of cigarettes for the day.

Statistics note that 108,000 people die each year of lung cancer; scientific evidence shows smoking increases the risk of high blood pressure; fires from cigarettes result in over $300 million in property loss.

The Health Department, realizing how difficult the smokeout can be, has coordinated a variety of events to help smokers of all ages to quit.

"The Department's school nurses, at the Junior and Senior Highs of Newton, are setting up publicity campaigns with films, posters, etc."

"For college students, Health Service personnel at Mt. Ida Junior College and Boston College will show the film "The Feminine Mistake," illustrating the danger to women smokers whose numbers and death rate are steadily increasing.

"For adults, there are four "stop smoking" sites where you can drop in, pledge to give up the habit for the day, and receive moral support. These locations are the senior drop-in centers at Zervas School, 30 Beethoven Road, Waban; Newtonville Free Library, 345 Walnut St., Newtonville; and the Nonantum Multi-Service Center, 48 Silver Lake Ave., Nonantum. Check with the Public Health Nurses there for information and support."

"The last location is Newton City Hall, where the City Physicians Office is also offering a publicity film, and pledge campaign. Call 552-7064 for further details."

The smokeout is only one day, but the information and support is available all year long. Any interested group can call Jane Roth, Health Educator, Newton Health Department, for a film or lecture on smoking, or for help in organizing "quit smoking" seminars.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

Thomas Edison, one of our country's most outstanding inventors, wrote that "The doctor of the future will give no medicine but will interest his patients in the care of the human frame, in diet and in the cause and prevention of diseases." To say that Edison was a visionary thinker would be an understatement and to say that Edison was correct about many of his visions would be an obvious statement of fact. His visions changed America and brought us light, as it were, so it might be well to look at what he had to say about health care. Chiropractors did.

Chiropractors take a natural approach to the restoration and preservation of health. The chiropractic premise is that the cause of disease is due to vertebral subluxations which produce an impingement upon the nerves and interfere with the transmission of vital nerve force. Through proper adjustment we correct these subluxations so that interference is removed and health is restored. I extend to you all my wish for a very Happy Thanksgiving. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment and three evenings a week.

Monday morning, ticket time

NEWTON — Early Monday morning marked the first day of enforcement of the no-overnight on street parking ordinance in Newton and the phones "did not stop ringing" all day, police said.

Police reported 422 cars were ticketed beginning at 2 a.m. Tuesday until 6 a.m.

Police said signs had been posted at "every major intersection leading into the city" giving notice of the no-overnight parking ordinance. Police also said that the restriction was being enforced by patrolmen in their own districts.

According to Chief William Quinn, the city has a year-round ban on street parking for more than one hour between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. to ease the problems of street cleaning and snow plowing.

NEWTON — Approximately $240 in cash was reportedly taken from an unlocked office desk in St. Jean's School sometime early Monday.

Police said the theft was reported around 7:30 a.m. Monday and that it was not known how thieves had entered the school offices at 251 Watertown St. Police also said vandals had done some damage to several upstairs classrooms, but did not elaborate.

Jewelry was missing from a Selwyn Rd. home following a break-in sometime prior to 10:30 p.m. Sunday. Police said thieves broke a rear door glass to enter the home.

A stereo cassette player and one cassette tape valued at a combined total of about $125 were missing following a break-in reported at the Red Coach Grill, adjacent to the Howard Johnson's at 320 Washington St., Newton Corner.

Police said thieves entered the locked banquet kitchen room by prying open a door.

Two injured in crash Friday

NEWTON — A 17-year-old Newton girl was seriously injured as the result of a single car crash late Friday. The driver, a 19-year-old Newton resident, was also injured.

Police and Fire Rescue personnel went to 1120 Centre St. about 11:45 p.m. Friday after the 19-year-old man lost control of his 1972 Oldsmobile while allegedly driving at speeds of 80-85 miles per hour and totaled the car when it crashed through a traffic signal and stone wall.

Police said the traffic signal was snapped off at its base and that the wall at 1126 Centre St. was "extensively damaged." The car also reportedly dug up turf at 1120 Centre St.

Firefighters used the Jaws of Life hydraulic tool to pry Claire H. Mitchell, 17, of Hamlin St., from the wreckage. Mitchell, the only passenger in the car, was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital by Chaulk Rescue Two reportedly suffering from head and neck injuries.

Listed in "guarded condition" in the intensive care unit over the weekend, Mitchell was listed in "fair" condition Monday afternoon, according to a hospital spokesman.

The driver, Paul J. Natale, 19, of Athelstane Rd., Newton, reportedly suffered abdominal injuries in the crash, faces summonses for drunken driving, operating a motor vehicle to endanger, and operating a motor vehicle after his license was suspended, police said.

Flasher strikes twice: on street, inside library

NEWTON — It appears that an exposure suspect who fits descriptions given by two earlier victims may have struck again Thursday.

According to police, two Newtonville women in separate incidents Thursday morning were victims of exposure by a suspect described as a white male in his 30's with a paunch, mustache, and wearing a blue jogging suit.

The description of the suspect is similar to the descriptions provided by previous victims — two women jogging at different times on Commonwealth Ave. two weeks ago in the vicinity of Grant Ave.

However, one victim of the Thursday exposures, a Newtonville woman walking on Austin St. shortly after 10:30 a.m. told police the suspect exposed himself to her from across the street. According to police reports, the woman said the suspect then ran to her side of the street and grabbed her in an obscene manner. She also said he made obscene remarks and then fled.

The second victim, a young Newtonville woman working on homework in the Newtonville Branch Library, said the suspect exposed himself to her while she was studying around 11 a.m. Thursday on the first floor of the library, according to police.

Police said the woman closed her book and that the suspect walked calmly out of the front door of the library. One librarian recalled, police said, the same man in the library on Monday, Nov. 9.

A police search of the area proved futile.

Based upon the similar descriptions of both Thursday victims, the suspect is a white male in his 30's, 5'8" to 5'10", of heavy build and has a paunch. The suspect is also described as having a mustache, dark curly hair, and all four victims further described him as wearing a blue jogging suit.

Tools taken at South High

NEWTON — A large number of assorted hand tools were stolen from Newton South High, according to a school custodian around 10:30 a.m. Thursday, police said.

Among the tools missing from a locker were five standard blade screwdrivers and three Phillips Head screwdrivers.

Checks stolen from car

NEWTON — Over $70 in change and checks amounting to $475 were among items reported stolen from a 1975 Chevrolet Camaro belonging to a Newton resident.

Introducing THE '82 MODELS

The furnished models at The Gables in Newton are open. They are extraordinary. The extravagantly large rooms lend themselves to an almost unlimited variety of treatment. Architect, interior designer, and National syndicated columnist John D. Bloodgood and his associates have combined rich detailing, exceptional use of wood and mirror, and brilliant furniture placement in a breathtaking manner.

Tradition is carefully observed in a two-bedroom two-level townhome, where the design team has introduced special moldings, paneling and mantle treatment to enhance the mood of the mahogany furnishings. A brick patio with formal gardens carries the traditional spirit out-of-doors.

The spectacular two-story living room in the three-bedroom townhome model is a warm mixture of wood textures, Colonial fabrics and authentic antiques. The rambling kitchen has a comfortable seating area by a pine-paneled fireplace. The master bath is paneled in cedar. The courtyard features a wooden deck and a waterfall cascading down a stone embankment.

A two-bedroom home has been furnished in plush contemporary style with rich fabrics, muted colors and an extravagant use of mirror. The trend-setting wall treatment in the master bedroom is but one of the exciting ideas you'll find in this, and the other exceptional models.

All but a few of the first group of homes at The Gables have already been sold, but a new group will be underway soon and available for early selection. Prices range from $250,000 to $400,000.

The '82 models at The Gables are easy to find — directly adjacent to the Charles River Country Club at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets in Newton. Open daily from 9 to 5 or phone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

VENERABLE HOUSE - The Nathaniel Allen House is undergoing extensive renovation and its backers hope it will someday gain a place as a focal point for the community.

Nathaniel Allen House: hidden treasure

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — Nathaniel Allen's beautiful, old school-house is something of a hidden treasure in the town.

Surrounded by huge, protective trees, the impressive, three-story Greek Revival house, the only secondary school-house left in the city, is inconspicuously set back on the corner of Cherry and Webster Streets in West Newton.

But if its supporters' dreams come true, then the Nathaniel Allen House may soon be a focal point in the community — a neighborhood meeting place, a learning center and a historic museum. And it will be as it was over 100 years ago, a source of community pride.

"The overall idea is to make the house well rounded," says Helen Levy, an active member of the foundation that organized the effort to restore the 19th century structure.

Its original owner was Nathaniel T. Allen, a pioneer in education who utilized the 36-room house as part of his West Newton school for teachers.

The well-known school brought fame not only to Allen, but also to the City of Newton, as many leading educators and civic leaders attended Allen's teaching school.

The enormous house, which is listed in the National Register of Historic Places, is being restored through federal funds appropriated through the city. Half of the 36 rooms have already been restored, and the outside is in the process of a badly needed face-lift.

By next spring, the foundation will embark on phase three of the restoration plan, which features the renovation of the basement area and the outside barn.

The large barn features two large rooms which could be used for various community activities, according to Levy.

When the Allen House is completed, Levi says the foundation would like to arrange a museum area on the first floor. "We want to develop a typical home of a late 19th century school teacher," says Levi, noting that four large rooms would probably be set aside for the purpose of a museum, featuring old furniture, paintings and books.

"People will be able to take advantage of the history," says Howard Haywood, president of the foundation.

Turner emphasized that "people should come in and find out about the history that's taken place here."

While residents can look forward to a new resource center, museum and community meeting place, a few lucky individuals have the opportunity to live in the interesting old home. Several renters are living in the upstairs rooms, and act as caretakers of the house and surrounding grounds. The three sets of renters are living in 12 rooms, while maintaining the upkeep of the house.

When the renovation is completed, and residents can begin utilizing the building, Levi hopes the Nathaniel Allen House will centralize West Newton.

"There's a cry that we're losing our schools," says Levi. "Even the Davis School isn't a town place anymore."

Levy hopes the house will become something of a community club. "We expect to do new things, different things," says Levy, whose ideas include renovating the old tennis courts on the grounds of the house.

Much of the money to restore the old Grecian school-house has come from Community Development Block Grant funds (CDBG), a federal program which funds community improvements through projects, including historic restorations. Through CDBG, the City of Newton has granted $36,000 to the Allen project.

Other funding has come through the National Park Service, in the sum of $50,000.

Levy explained that most people favor the project and said that the city has been helpful in getting CDBG funds for the restoration. "The city has been very helpful to us," says Levy.

"We're very excited that we survived," says Levy, pointing out that the restoration of the Allen House is a daring project, considering the size of the structure. "There usually isn't such a large preservation project."

Turner stressed that the house will be more than just a showpiece, but a place learn, which is what Nathaniel Allen originally intended it to be.

Newton North falls to Waltham 7-6

By Frank Murphy
Sports Editor

And now, the scene shifts to Brockton on Thanksgiving Day. The nimble footwork of Co-Capt. John El-Masry and a barefooted point-after kick by Tom Roche enabled undefeated, untied Waltham High to escape with a nerve-grating 7-6 victory over neighboring Newton North Saturday at Dickinson Stadium before 8,000 onlookers.

The Hawks latest conquest, its eighth of the campaign, moved them into the runner-up spot in the Division I ratings and left one more hurdle remaining in its bid for a Super Bowl berth. That final obstacle is a big one, however, a showdown with third-ranked Brockton (8-1) on Nov. 26th.

Newton North, a 22-16 winner over Brockton in the fourth game of the season, was being tagged with its first defeat and slipped back in the ratings and likely out of the running for the post-season title contest.

Waltham, which had blown out every previous rival this fall, rallied from a 6-0 deficit to put across its only score at the 4:45 mark of the third quarter. A 23-yard gallop by El-Masry, one of his patented off-tackle thrusts that have produced 16 touchdowns during the campaign, found an opening in the stubborn Tiger defense, with some key blocking along the line to get him started.

Roche, who starts at right halfback, added a perfect placekick that provided the victory margin. It was the 17th conversion for the 185-pound senior, who discards his shoe to kick soccer style.

The Waltham TD came 59 seconds after Newton North had punched out its six-pointer on a 12-play, 68-yard march following the second half kickoff. Quarterback Rion Foley subordinated his way through the middle from two yards out for the TD.

The Tigers attempted a fake placekick, which went awry. Tim Brandon, the holder, lateraled out to Fred Dalicandro, who was caught behind the line of scrimmage by Bob Qualters on a swing around left end.

This mid-November match-up of the two great inter-city rivals, which brought them together both unbeaten for the first time since 1953, lived up to all expectations. It wasn't the high-scoring duel anticipated by many, but it developed into a gruelling defensive war with individual heroes emerging from each side.

El-Masry, except for that breakaway run, was bottled up by the tenacious Tiger defense all afternoon. Big John reached the 1,000-yard rushing mark on his very first carry, but wound up with only an 80-yard aggregate for the game — his second lowest total of the season.

Newton North, as expected, put the football into the air quite a bit with Foley connecting on 10 of 26 aerial attempts for 97 net yards. Most of the passing occurred in the first half, while the Garden City eleven got some strong ball carrying from halfback Mike Abruzzese (61 yards) and fullback Al Fortune (58 yards).

The Tigers dominated the action in the first two periods and Waltham was satisfied to be locked in a scoreless stalemate by the intermission. Newton North ran off 27 offensive plays compared to Waltham's 17 in the first half.

Two ineligible receiver penalties hindered the Tigers in a pair of drives. The first came with 3:50 left in the first quarter just after Newton North had picked up a first down at the Waltham 22 — its deepest penetration on a 53-yard march. The Tigers were finally forced to punt from the 43.

Again in the second quarter, Newton North clicked off a pair of first downs in an advance to the WHS 36, but had 15 yards stepped off against it for the same infraction. Waltham forced a punt to end that threat.

The Hawks advanced into Tiger territory only once in the first half. After taking possession on the 20 on a Foley punt over the goaline, Waltham moved out to its 46 as the period ended. El-Masry and Roche gained some hard-earned yardage to cross the Newton North's Mike Abruzzese (40) gains some yardage against Waltham defense.

It was an emotional game

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

It was almost a microcosm of what sports are all about. On the one side, there was Waltham coach Bob Connors, so overjoyed at winning that he found it difficult to express his feelings. "I'm just so relieved and happy for all these kids," he said, flashing a huge grin and pointing toward the likes of the incredible John El-Masry, Frank Frenna, Mike Mula, etc. "This was a great, great win."

On the other side there was Newton North coach Norm Walker, trying his best to console the inconsolable QB Rion Foley, for whom the defeat brought back some very bitter and tragic memories.

Two years ago in The Game, the Tigers had lost by an identical 7-6 score. Rion's brother, Noel, had missed an extra-point and a field goal in that contest. The next summer, he was killed in an automobile accident. Saturday meant more to Rion Foley than a Suburban League title and a Super Bowl berth. Much more.

"Sometimes sports just don't come out the way they should," Walker whispered quietly in the Newton locker room. "I feel so sorry for that kid. He wanted to win so badly. It meant so much to the whole Foley family, and to lose by the same score as two years ago is heartbreaking."

As in any great game (and make no mistake, this was a great game), there were a wide variety of what-ifs left flying through the air. The biggest what-if for Newton North Saturday night concerned two plays which Walker may have nightmares about for many months to come. The first occurred in the third quarter after Foley had gone two yards for the game's opening touchdown. Leading 6-0, Walker elected to fake the kick and instead try a maneuver where holder Tim Brandon lateraled the ball to Fred Dalicandro on a reverse. Waltham stopped it cold.

"I don't know why I didn't just kick the extra point," Walker would say later, beating all the second-guessers in the Dickinson Stadium to the punch. "I made some mistakes. I don't think it was one of my better games coaching."

The second came with just under eight minutes remaining in the game. The Tigers had driven to the Waltham 25 and were faced with a fourth and four. Newton lined up for a 40-yard field goal, ran a fake designed to hit Billy Drew, and failed.

Connors said his club was not surprised by the fake and, in fact, had been looking for it. "I was playing the odds," said Bob. "I figured if he could kick a 40-yarder, they deserved it. But I told my kids to play back and look for something different."

Walker expressed shock at the ease in which Waltham stopped the plays dead. "We haven't faked an extra-point or a field goal all season," said Norm. "But there was Waltham looking for it."

Penalties also played a significant role. Twice in the first half the Tigers marched into Waltham territory, only to be stopped both times for an illegal man downfield, brought about when the referees ruled that Newton's outside receiver was lined up on the line of scrimmage, making the inside receiver (the tight end) illegal.

"I've run that same formation all year and never had that penalty called," said Walker. "Usually, if the ref thinks the receiver is on the line, he'll tell him to move back. But this one didn't, he just threw the flag. It's a shame because we weren't deceiving anybody with it."

The final total had Newton being assessed seven penalties for 55 yards. And every one seemed to come at a crucial time. "We killed ourselves," said Walker.

The Hawks, to their credit, never wavered from their game-plan. Connors had said all week that they would run, run and run and despite the fact that Newton completely shut down El-Masry in the first half (24 yards, eight carries), they stuck with that. "I told the kids at halftime that it was still anybody's game," said Connors in between puffs on a victory cigar. "We wanted to come out in the second half and stuff the ball down their throats. We knew that it was just a matter of time before El-Masry broke one."

El-Masry ended the afternoon with only 80 yards in 19 carries, but his 23-yard touchdown run 59 seconds after Newton's score brought back memories of Jimmy Brown. Big No. 44 tore through a non-existent hole in the middle, shook off at least four potential tacklers as if they were little children, and dashed to the right corner of the end zone. Tom Roche boomed the extra-point for the winning margin.

"Newton is a great team," Connors said afterward. "We didn't overrate them one bit."

The Hawk coach pointed to a couple of keys in the victory. First was the play of QB Mike Mula, whose 18-yard pass to John Logue triggered Waltham's touchdown. "Mula kept Newton honest with his rollouts," said Connors. "They couldn't key completely on El-Masry."

He also mentioned Roche, who, in addition to booting the winning point, made what Connors called "the biggest play of the game" when he fought for a first down on fourth and inches in the final minutes. "He was stopped behind the line," said Bob. "But a great second effort got the first. And he did it with a bad shoulder."

So Waltham's Connors held the Doc Cohn Trophy securely in his arms and smiled for the television cameras while Newton North's Walker shook his head sadly in the Tiger locker room and struggled to hold his emotions in check. And the 8,000 people who ventured to Dickinson Stadium Saturday knew that they had witnessed a game which showcased high school football at its best.

Lancers lose in the rain, 24-0

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

Newton Catholic football coach Tom Raeke didn't blame a driving rain storm or a muddy, puddle filled field. The Lancer mentor placed the blame for Monday afternoon's 24-0 loss to Northeast Regional on his team's worst performance of the season.

"We played terrible," said Raeke. "When you win, you win together and when lose, you lose together. We had a poor performance against Northeast. It was our worst showing of the season. They stopped us on offense and they controlled the line of scrimmage."

"We did have some chances in the first period," Raeke said, "but their defense stopped us. We also had a couple of penalties in bad situations that got their first two drives of the game going."

Newton Catholic was to have played Northeast on Sunday afternoon at Dickinson Stadium, but the game was postponed due to the rain. The game was played Monday on Albemarle Field because Northeast had a game on Saturday morning and couldn't wait until Tuesday afternoon to play.

"We would have liked to play on Tuesday," said Raeke. "Northeast couldn't because it wouldn't give them enough time to prepare for a game Saturday."

The Lancers did have a chance to grab an early lead in the contest and in a mud-game, the first score is the most important. Northeast had the ball inside their own 20-yard line. Tailback Tom Strom was playing his first game and fumbled on his first carry. Northeast Catholic's Dave Grady pounced on the loose ball.

The Lancers had a first and 10 on the Northeast 20. Pat Cahill rushed the ball twice and each time he picked up three yards. On third down, Mike Walsh picked up about a yard and the Lancers had a fourth and short two for the first down.

The play was a quick pitch to Mark Hung. The heaviness of the ball and slickness of the field caused the timing of the play to be thrown off. Hung had to wait that extra second for the pitch and that gave the defense time to come up and stop the halfback short of his mark by a foot.

The Northeast defense would again rise up and stop the Lancers later in the first quarter. The Lancer defense kept Northeast pinned deep in their own territory and forced a punt. The Lancers took over on their 47-yard line and picked up a first down. That was all they would get as Northeast stopped them.

The Lancers then tried to fake a punt and it failed. Punter Jim McLellan kept the ball and picked up nine yards, but he was short of the first down. What this did was give Northeast its best field position of the day.

Northeast used the good field position to move for the game's first score. John Prentice ran for 24 yards for the biggest gain of the drive. Strom made up for his first-quarter fumble by bursting over from the one in the early minutes of the second quarter. He also stormed in for the extra point.

The Lancers were to get one more break that might let them back into the game. Newton Catholic was stopped by Northeast's defense and forced to punt. McLellan's punt reached the 50 when Strom touched the ball. It skidded past him and was alertly picked up by Steve Nugent.

The Lancers had a first and 10 on the 50. All they could do, however, was lose 10 yards as quarterback Tom Donnelly was sacked. Walsh tried to fake another punt, but his pass fell short and the half ended with Northeast leading, 8-0.

The Lancers kicked off to open the second half and Prentice returned the kick to the Newton Catholic 40. A personal foul penalty on Newton Catholic moved the ball to their 22-yard line. Prentice scampered in from 10-yards out just five plays later for the second score. Strom ran in for the two-point conversion.

The Lancers couldn't do a thing on offense and were forced to punt. Northeast got the ball on their 40-yard line and it took seven plays to march the 60 yards for the game's final score. Prentice ran around right end for a 41-yard touchdown gallop and the game's final touchdown. Quarterback Mark McHugh hit Ed Morgan with a two-point conversion pass.

The Lancers offense could manage just two first downs and 17 yards rushing. Donnelly had four completed passes in nine attempts for 33 yards. Northeast rushed for 138 yards and didn't complete a pass.

Newton Catholic also had a couple of minor injuries. Hung and Walsh were both forced to leave the game with bruised collar bones. They will be in action against Cathedral on Thanksgiving Day.

Smith starting tackle for Penn at Harvard

David Smith, former Newton South High School gridster, will be in the starting lineup for the University of Pennsylvania as it squares off with Harvard Saturday, 1:30 p.m., at Harvard Stadium.

Smith, a sophomore, has been the starting defensive left tackle since the beginning of the season. He was cited as the Lineman of the Week in a game earlier this season. The 6-4, 240-pound Newton native was chosen the outstanding defensive lineman on last year's Penn Freshman eleven.

Dave won All-Dual County League honors at Newton South in 1979 and his performance earned him a Division III All-Scholastic berth. He played in the Shriner's All-Star Game at Boston College's Alumni Stadium the summer of 1980.

Penn Goes into the Harvard game with a 1-5 record under Coach Jerry Berndt.

Dave, the son of Alan and Carolyn Smith of 390 Dedham St., Newton Centre, is attending the Wharton Business School and majoring in Market Management.

Agony of defeat

Newton North's Mario Proia reflects the pain of losing last Saturday's big football matchup with the Waltham Hawks at Dickinson Stadium. Tigers fell 7-6.

North girls open with 3-0 victory

NEWTON — The Newton North girls' soccer team began the EMass Tournament by showing any future opponent a trip to Newton could be fatal.

The Tigers dispatched Belmont of the Middlesex League, 3-0, Wednesday afternoon at Newton North's field. Newton North dominated play throughout the contest and scored all three goals in the first half.

The Tigers are the Number 1 seeded team in the tourney and they move on to the quarterfinals to face Dover-Sherborn Saturday at Newton North's field. Dover beat Salem, 2-0, in the first round of the tournament. The Raiders, are the seventh seed in the tournament, and they finished second in the Tri-Valley League with a 14-2 record.

"This win shows we can play well as a team in tournament play," said coach Barry Howland. "The entire team played in the game and I was able to sub freely. This was an impressive showing and the key to our win was controlling the ball at midfield."

The Tiger midfielders led by centerhalfback Debbie Quinn did an excellent job controlling the play and setting up the offense. Joanne Rossetti and Diane Casey also played well at halfback for the Tigers. These players were able to control Belmont's four-player front line.

"Another big advantage for us is that we're the number 1 seed and other teams have to come and beat us," said Howland. "They're going to have to beat us and we showed today that isn't going to be an easy task. We asserted ourselves early today."

After a jittery start, the Tigers put the pressure on the Belmont end to get an early score on the boards. Newton North's league-leading scorer Lori Goldenberg headed a ball out of the hands of the Belmont goaltender and winger Stephanie Stoyanoff scored her first of two goals into a virtually open net.

"We overcame our early jitters very quickly," said Howland. "We stayed right on them even after we scored. The pressure paid with two goals in the second period."

Thrill of victory

Waltham head coach Bob Connors is carried off the field by his players while carrying the Doc Cohn trophy, symbolic of victory in the annual football game between Waltham and Newton North, after defeating the Tigers 7-6.

Lions use the rush for first DCL win

Newton South disregarded the passing game for the first time all season and went to the basics Saturday to finally pick up a victory in the Dual County League, 7-6, over Wayland High.

The Lions (6-3 overall, 1-3 in the DCL), rushed for 162 yards on 40 carries while QB Joe Spagnuolo, who usually is a high school version of the Minnesota Vikings' Tommy Kramer, went to the air only eight times for 17 total yards.

Part of the reason for Newton South's drastic switch in philosophy was a pre-game injury suffered by Spagnuolo. The junior signal-caller hurt his back during warm-ups and had limited mobility.

"I'm not sure how much it affected him," said coach Art Kojoyian, "but we had a great deal of difficulty passing in the first quarter so we decided to go to the running game."

Wayland came out in an eight-man front against the Lions, sacking Spagnuolo four of the first five times he went back to pass. So Kojoyian handed the workload over to Art Walton, Steve Anglin and Jeff Stevens. Anglin finished with 61 yards, Walton gained 53 and Steven chipped in with 37.

The Lions did not play a great game Saturday, but, contrary to past years, they had a down day and still won. "In other years we would dominate the statistics and lose the game," said Kojoyian. "It was nice to see things work the other way around. I'm not saying Wayland outplayed us, but we didn't have one of our better days. I don't think we were really up for the game."

Newton South's only touchdown came in the second quarter when Anglin rolled in from 10 yards. The drive lasted 12 plays and spanned 66 yards — all on the ground. Walton's 28-yard gallop from the Newton 40 set up the score. Steve Mosca kicked the very big extra-point for a 7-0 lead.

That, basically, would be all the offense for the Lions. Wayland came back with its only TD in the third period, marching 54 yards in nine plays. A pair of passes from QB Steve Curtin to Pat Haman (12 yards) and Ken Holland (20 yards) helped out. Brad Jacobs got the score on a six-yard run, but Wayland's try for the two-point conversion failed when Curtin underthrew an open Mark Gagnon in the end zone.

"Winning in the league is not as important as the overall record," said Kojoyian. "This has been a very successful season for us. Everyone has gotten their heads together and played as a team. It's been very enjoyable."

The Lions, who are already assured of their first winning season in years, can conclude a 7-3 season Thanksgiving Day with a victory over Lincoln-Sudbury.

North harriers win State crown again

The Newton North boys' cross country team captured an unprecedented fourth straight Division 1 Championship at the Franklin Park course on Saturday.

As coach Joe Connolly said, "It was a great year." Indeed, the Tigers captured the Suburban League title with an undefeated season and they haven't lost a league meet since 1979.

The Tigers captured this meet by placing three runners in the top 10 and five runners in the top 25. Newton North had 59 points for first place and Cambridge finished second with 86. BC High placed third with 173 points.

"We got a tremendous effort," said Connolly. "We had three runners in the top 10 and that is a tremendous achievement."

Paul Partridge was the top Tiger runner placing fourth over the 3.0-mile course. George Fulk was sixth and Tom Carleo placed eighth to round out the top Newton North runners. Cam Lang placed 18th and Paul Passavant was 23rd.

Dave Kagan finished 35th and Ted Burke was 37th.

Division 1
1, Dave Dunham (Billerica), 15:03; 2, Shawn Coughlan (Brockton), 15:10; 3, Curtis Splain (Attleboro), 15:28; 4, Paul Partridge (Newton North), 15:39; 5, Tim Gannon (Beverly), 15:41; 6, George Fulk (Newton North), 15:45; 7, Bob Sheehan (Cambridge), 15:46; 8, Tom Carleo (Newton North), 15:48; 9, Helder Braz (Peabody), 15:52; 10, Jose Rocha (New Bedford), 15:53.

Newton PeeWees fall

Burlington handed the Newton PeeWee A's their fourth consecutive defeat Sunday, 6-1, in a Youth Hockey League contest at the Burlington Rink.

Jay Cappello was the lone goal-scorer for Newton, which has not led at any time during its last four games. Steve Silk received an assist.

"This was the first time where the other team played well and we played very poorly," said Newton coach Neil Schwartz. "It's very difficult to play when you're always behind. We've got to score first in our next game."

Four penalties hurt the Newton effort. The PeeWees are now 2-6 on the year.

Hospice bid for Claflin gets first approval

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Although aldermen questioned whether a local hospice could financially support the purchase of the Claflin School facility, the Administration and Planning Committee last week approved an advisory group report that would give the hospice "preferential treatment" in the purchase of the building.

The plan calls for a hospice over one-third of the first floor with the remaining two-thirds of the first floor and the entire second floor to be used as rental dwelling units.

The item now goes to the Finance and Land Use Committees before it hits the floor of the board.

The 10-member Claflin Elementary School Joint Planning Advisory Group amended its original recommendations to include the hospice reuse plan.

According to Richard Morrison, an abutter and member of the advisory group, four of five aldermanic appointees chose not to amend the original recommendation which did not include the hospice plan. All five of the mayoral appointees endorsed the hospice plan.

Another hitch that could sour the hospice's reuse plan is the possible insistence by the Finance Committee that the Hospice of Good Shepard lease the building rather than purchase it outright.

Under Proposition 2½, it is more advantageous to the city to lease rather than sell the facility.

Laureann Gerstenlauer, program development consultant for the Hospice of Good Shepard, said it would be impossible for the hospice to lease the Lowell Avenue building and expect to fund the project.

"We cannot lease a building and fund it," added Gerstenlauer, who noted the hospice had already spent $17,000 on a feasibility study. "National foundations are not willing to fund something we don't know."

Gerstenlauer said during her presentation to more than 30 local residents that funding should not be a problem and the group would have its financial arrangements outlined prior to the next Finance meeting.

The hospice expects to fund the project through private donations, grants and eventually third-party reimbursements.

Alderman Robert Tennant, who sits on both the Administration and Planning and Finance Committees, noted, "Finance policy in the past has not been to sell outright but to lease properties."

The citizen group's recommendations in order of preference are: the conversion to 25 residential dwelling units with the possible use of a portion of the premises as a hospice or a nursing home; a private school; subsidized elderly housing; and a nursing home.

The three-year-old Hospice of Good Shepard is a non-profit home care program serving residents of Newton and Wellesley. The supportive-service facility recently formed a coalition with six of the west suburban hospice home care programs encompassing a 29-town area.

The Newton facility, which would be the first free-standing inpatient unit in Massachusetts, would service all 29 communities.

The hospice's plan for mixed residential development incorporates the creation of a 15-bed inpatient unit; the housing of a 12-person home care team; the housing of a community education and training program; and 10 to 15 rental housing units.

The Claflin School was closed at the end of the 1980-81 school year due to declining enrollment. Situated on five acres, the school contains a total building area of 31,424 square feet consisting of 14 classrooms, gymnasium and 300-seat auditorium.

The facility is currently used by the Community Schools Department for an expansive pre-school, children, teen, adult and senior adult programs.

Chinese ambassador criticizes sale of arms to Taiwan by United States

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Chinese Ambassador Chai Zemin said Thursday continued arms sales by the United States to the Republic of Taiwan would constitute interference in China's internal affairs.

"Taiwan is part of China," said Zemin through an interpreter in an informal press conference prior to his talk at Boston College. "As a sovereign country, China will not allow this kind of interference to take place."

Zemin, the first ambassador from the People's Republic of China to the United States, alluded to the possible strain in relations an arms sale to Taiwan could cause between the United States and China when he said: "If the two sides approach relations well, then relations will develop. If both sides fail to approach it well, then there will be problems."

The two countries normalized relations in 1979 after a 30-year absence in diplomatic ties.

When queried if arm sales to Taiwan would be "not approaching relations well," Zemin replied: "It is one of the possibilities."

According to a recent report, the United States is preparing to sell Taiwan modified F-5E Tiger jet fighters and the more advanced F-5G Tigershark.

Zemin noted, however, that relations between China and the United States "are moving along as they were under previous administrations," despite disagreement on some issues.

Toward the end of his 45-minute talk, which Zemin focused on China's modernization, he told the more than 200 people in attendance that one of China's goals during the eighties is to reunite the island of Taiwan with the "motherland."

Additional goals, many of them inclusive in China's new five-year economic plan, include raising the educational, scientific and cultural levels of the entire nation; improving the standard of living; developing additional consumer industries; and continued economic construction.

The plan, the sixth five-year project since the end of the Chinese Civil War in 1949, will emphasize the readjustment, restructuring and consolidation of China's economy.

"It will ensure a healthy and steady development in China's economy," assured Zemin, a 21-year veteran of the Chinese foreign service. He noted that total agricultural yield climbed between five and six percent in 1980 while total industrial output rose 8.7 percent.

Zemin said the plan would "achieve remarkable results" in readjusting China's industrial and institutional structures and products mix. It will include efforts toward developing an energy industry, an increase in transportation and communication installations, technical renovation and the consolidation of some 400,000 existing enterprises.

Taxpayers' Association hosts record meeting

NEWTONVILLE — The Newton Taxpayers' Association elected directors and officers, set a record, and took several first-time actions in its busiest general members' meeting, in its 45 years of service to the community. The 650-member group started its longest annual meeting on Oct. 29, in the Newtonville Branch Library and, after a recess, completed it at the home of the president, on the evening of Nov. 12.

This annual meeting was the first in 33 years without the association's former executive director, Lorenz F. Muthen Jr., Esq., who retired last year. Mr. Muthen died this year on Nov. 11.

There was good attendance—between 50 and 60 people even though this was the first time, in many city election years, that local candidates were not speakers on the program.

Officers elected for the year were: Joseph A. Alexander, president; Alvan F. Rosenberg, senior vice president; Professor Vahe A. Sarafian and Alvin Mandell, vice presidents; Aldona B. Stanley, treasurer; Joseph L. Paley, clerk and secretary; George E. Withington, sergeant-at-arms. Directors reelected were the officers and Dr. Joseph F. Beck, Arnold Garrison, John W. Gurry, Werner Gumpertz, Joseph P. Keller, Professor Ronald L. Nuttall, Howard U. Passman, Helen C. Prince, Samuel M. Robbins, Solomon Stern, Robert Stillier, M. Maxine Tremaine. Directors newly elected were Theodore Madfis, John P. Rice, Howard Finger, Kenneth Hartford. Alexander continues also as executive director and executive secretary of the association and Dr. Nuttall continues as parliamentarian.

Former Alderman Stillier and Rosenberg presented a report which is the start of a first-time-ever members' program to rate the performance of Newton legislators and executives in local and state government.

Their initial question was "Are Newton Aldermen For Or Against The City Taxpayers' Pocketbook?" On the first group of issues, the record was mixed. Votes by totals and individuals were recorded but individuals were not discussed at this time. It was pointed out that the majority of aldermen did not favor savings or added income even though they were without real disadvantages in the cases of the ambulance private contracting; the Drucker mixed housing and commercial development at Newton Corner, the Marriott expansion, the Chestnut Hill Country Club. The condominium conversion issue also involved a penalty on city income.

Werner Gumpertz, the representative on the Citizens' Committee on Revaluation of All of Newton's Real Estate, outlined the committee's participation and criticisms. Some of the committee's suggestions have been acted on—such as the effect of neighborhoods on value. Others such as the publishing of preliminary valuations are still being negotiated on behalf of all Newton citizens. Later, in the reconvened meeting it was suggested that if necessary, the "Taxpayers" might conduct further public discussion groups on the revaluation matter.

Howard Passman, whose committee is the observer and analyst of local representatives and senator in the State Legislature, reported that the delegation has made some efforts to protect the city taxpayers' pocketbooks but is, as yet, far from deserving of high praise. Among those observed were Senator Jack Backman and Representatives Susan Schur, David B. Cohen and A. Joseph DeNucci.

Alexander discussed his work on the city's Citizens' Committee to study the pay levels of the mayor and board of aldermen. Following Alexander's separate report to the aldermen, it was expected that the aldermen would adopt the suggestion that no raises be made in the forthcoming current term, but that they would authorize one or more raises for the mayor in subsequent years. It was also expected that any one or more of such raises would somewhat exceed the starting percentage mentioned therein. Since a four-year period was involved it was considered to be probably inopportune—even regrettable—that the implied compromise was not adopted. Proponents of the raise had asked for larger amounts than the Citizens' Committee thought would be acceptable to the public.

Several other Taxpayers' Association committees did considerable work throughout the year both on their own and in connection with Scan 2 1/2 working groups. Such work related to budgeting and the ordering of priorities in the event of needed service cuts.

Newton North senior reaps honors

NEWTON — David Guterman, a senior at Newton North High School, has been named the top Century III Leader in a competition there, according to Richard Mecham, principal and contest administrator, Norman A. Gaudet.

The 17-year-old student is now eligible to compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 scholarships and an all-expense-paid trip to the national Century III Leaders Conference, slated for March 5-8, 1982, in Colonial Williamsburg, Va. State winners will compete for the national winner's prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

The Century III Leaders program is designed to bring together and recognize student leaders who show both strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America. David was judged on the basis of leadership skills, school and community involvement, and a current events examination. He also wrote a short essay on a particular issue which challenges America in its third century. Runners-up in the competition at Newton North High School were Philip Mann and Joanne Quigley.

This is the seventh year of the Century III Leaders program, which awards a total of $218,500 in scholarships to 204 young leaders. Century III is sponsored and administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals, and funded by the Shell Oil Company.

David Guterman is a member of the Model United Nations Club, President of Concert Choir, delegate to Mass. Regional Advisory Council, Boston 'B' Region, Representative to Student Faculty Administration Board, Publicity of Theatre Inc.

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Guterman, 106 Randlett Park, West Newton.

Counseling service offers session for family survivors

NEWTONVILLE — The Family Counseling Service at 74 Walnut Park in Newtonville will offer a free, counseling session on Monday, Nov. 23, for people who have recently experienced the death of a family member of close friend. According to social worker, Cynthia Pill, the course is geared to not only to widows and widowers, but for anyone who is having difficulty dealing with a recent death.

"There are very few such groups in our community," said Pill, a Newton Centre resident. She explained that the groups that are offered usually service only widows and widowers. She pointed out that even the death of a non-related person can also be a key loss.

"No matter what the relationship, people could find this a beneficial group," she said.

Pill said the session may be continued to a regular group. For more information, call the centre at 965-6200.

Do You Have Normal Hearing?

We can measure and identify a hearing loss. And when we find a loss that may be medically or surgically correctable or a special problem case, we do refer the problem to a specialist.

You are invited to have such an electronic hearing test, free on Mondays through Fridays from 9 AM to 4:30 PM at the BELTONE HEARING AID CENTER, 24 Crescent St. in Waltham.

We even provide in-home tests and services for shut-ins and senior citizens. Yes, and we still do all this at no charge.

If you suspect a hearing loss, doesn't it make a lot of sense to have your hearing test at Beltone. Please phone 894-3691 for an appointment to avoid waiting.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI insured loans • FHA HUD insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

FALL & WINTER Car Care Guide

BEST BUYS ON NEW CARS

ALA checklist for winterizing your car

WELLESLEY — The predictions for the coming winter's weather indicate that New Englanders can expect a lot more snow than we've had in recent years. Now is the time to make sure that your car will withstand the demands of winter driving.

The ALA Auto and Travel Club has summarized the key areas requiring your attention before winter begins to cause you serious automotive problems.

TUNE UP FOR SAFETY

Engine — A car needing a tuneup is not only a nuisance, it can hurt your chances for surviving a winter driving emergency.

Winter was once the prime time for a complete engine tuneup. However, manufacturers' specifications have changed dramatically in recent years. Refer to your owner's manual to determine what is best for your car. If you will be having your car completely tuned up, here's what should be done:

A test or inspection of the battery, PCV valve, engine compression, spark plugs, points and condenser (if any), ignition coil and timing, distributor, spark advance, fuel pump, air filter, carburetor, drive belts, and all parts of the emission control system, followed by all necessary adjustments and replacements.

Battery — Road service records at the ALA Auto and Travel Club show that a failure in the electrical system is the most common cause of car breakdowns in winter. So, be sure to have the battery, alternator, and voltage regulator checked, if these tests are not being covered by a tuneup. Also check the battery leads and cables for corrosion. Scrubbing them with a wire brush, or applying a baking soda solution, followed by a light coat of vaseline, will remove residue and prevent further damage.

keep all windows closed, so be sure to have your mechanic inspect the entire system for damage and leaks.

Dashboard Controls — Don't wait for a bad storm or a foggy night to find out that your windshield wipers or lights are not functioning properly. Both the lights and the wipers have to work overtime during the winter, so it is crucial that they be in good working order.

before the ground is bare, they will wear very quickly.

Regardless of what type of tire you choose, be extra sure to keep your tires adequately inflated during the winter, since low temperatures significantly reduce tire pressure.

SURVIVAL MAY BE IN THE TRUNK

You should already have a sturdy spare tire, bumper jack, flashlight, first aid kit, and flares in the trunk. To be really prepared, add the following:

A long-handled scraper/brush, a small shovel, a closed container of sand, a traction device, some clean rags, deicer, a can of wire-drying spray, starter fluid, jumper cables, a candle, a juice can, and some matches for emergency heat, and a red cloth to signal for assistance.

If you have room for them, you may also want to add a reserve pair of boots and gloves and some plastic trash bags or an old parka or poncho. These can come in very handy if you get stuck somewhere not quite dressed for shoveling or for a long slushy trek to a telephone. With this in mind, it is a good idea to keep some spare change handy for emergency phone calls.

It is also a good idea to keep an extra container of deicer inside your home or office since the one in the car won't do you any good if the door or lock is frozen. And, for that extra measure of preparedness should blizzard conditions strike, consider adding non-perishable foods, a compass, blankets, and a transistor radio to your winter driving emergency kit.

KEEP IT CLEAN

The body of your car takes a beating during the winter months. If you haven't waxed it recently, and can find a warm sheltered work area, do it now for extra protection. Applying touchup paint and anti-rust products where needed is another wise preventive measure. The most important thing to remember during the winter is to wash your car frequently to avoid the salt and chemical buildup which causes irreversible corrosion.

TRACTION

Good traction is one of the most important elements for successful winter driving; but, it can be difficult to decide which method is best. There are advantages and disadvantages to each; in the end it is really up to the motorist to choose the tire which will best suit his individual needs. Here is a look at your options:

Studded Tires — Studded snow tires perform best on packed snow and glare ice, conditions which will vary significantly depending upon the area where you will be doing most of your driving. Because of the damage they do to the highways, studded tires are illegal in several states, with time restrictions imposed on their use in others. This issue is a serious point of consideration if you are planning on any significant amount of interstate travel during the next several months.

Radial Tires and Snow Tires — Although radial tires provide better traction than tires of other constructions, they are no substitute for snow tires. If you have a late model car already equipped with radials, then radial snow tires will be a logical choice for you. Regular snow tires will provide good traction in areas of light to moderate snowfall, and can be the most economical. But, if you have radial tires in front, it is preferable to put radial snow tires (as opposed to non-radial snow tires) in back. Above all, do not mount tires of different construction on the same axle; this is a potentially serious hazard, especially on wet or icy roads.

Chains — Although chains are by far the most effective, the cumbersome mounting and removing procedure required can make them impractical in relatively light snowfall areas. It is also important to note that unless chains are removed

SYSTEMS AND SOLUTIONS

Heating and Cooling Systems — Test to make sure that the solution in your radiator is good for 30 degrees below zero. If the radiator hasn't been completely drained and flushed within the period specified by the manufacturer, do it now, and add a fresh solution. If you are just adding antifreeze, be careful not to mix different types (chemical contents, not brands). While you're doing all of this, have the radiator heater hoses and the fan belt checked for cracks and weak connections.

Now is also a good time to add one of those pre-mixed windshield washing solutions containing antifreeze to the windshield wash container. In addition, test your heater and defroster, along with removing any debris blocking the intake vents.

Steering, Suspension, and Brake Systems — Maintaining your car is only one side of safe winter driving; keeping control of your vehicle once you are on the road is the other. To improve your car's handling make sure that all components of these crucial systems — the steering shaft, gear, and arms, shock absorbers and springs, and the brake lines and master cylinder — are in top condition.

Lubrication Systems — Refer to your owner's manual for instructions on the best time to change the oil and oil filter. It may also be time to have the chassis thoroughly lubricated.

Exhaust System — A leaking exhaust system is even more dangerous during the winter, because many drivers tend to

When you hear people complain about parts being hard to get for their imported cars, you can be sure they have never been to the parts department at Boch Toyota. While other dealers are telling of delays lasting days, weeks, or even months for parts, Boch's parts manager, J. Braun, proudly states that, "We can fill 98 percent of our customers orders off our shelves." Although this is a bold statement, a $400,000 inventory, computerized ordering and controls, and a direct data link to Toyota headquarters in California, make it a reality. "Our first commitment is to customer service. Toyota is the best import and we are committed to supporting them."

Toyota Motor Sales Corporation has recognized this quality by including Boch Toyota in its National Parts Sales Society for the past three years. Boch was also the first in New England to sign up for the S.T.A.R. Parts Program and is heavily involved in the Cheap-2-Keep Campaign.

Richard Boch, General Manager, stated, "It does no good to sell a car and then abandon the customer. We pride ourselves on total involvement with our customers after the sale with service and parts support." That philosophy has made Boch the No. 1 Dealer in New England for several years and one of the top 30 in the U.S.

Keep your car flowing right

By UPI — Popular Mechanics
Saving money is just one benefit of giving your car's circulatory system a periodic inspection. Another is the security of driving a troublefree, safe vehicle.

Engine oil and coolant, in particular, should be checked every time you fill the gas tank. Other systems need a more thorough examination. From Popular Mechanics Encyclopedia, here are tips on doing it: Airconditioning
Allow the air conditioner compressor to run at maximum output for about five minutes. Then with the unit still running look into the sight glass. Normally it is on top of the receiver-drier unit, a cylinder usually mounted — either horizontally or vertically — on the condenser.

On some units, the sight glass is in the high-pressure line that extends from the receiver-drier to the evaporator. Slow-moving bubbles or foam beneath the sight glass may mean the air conditioner has lost some charge, perhaps because of a leak. The sight glass should be clear. However, if the air temperature is 70 deg. F. or lower, bubbles in the sight glass may be perfectly normal.

For this reason, either recheck when the air temperature goes above 70 or block the flow of air to the condenser with some sort of cover, cardboard or a blanket. If bubbles disappear, the circulatory system is on good shape.

An air conditioner can leak refrigerant from the compressor, condenser, or any connection. The leak should be found and fixed. This is done by scanning the system with torch or electronic leak detector. A change in the color of a torch-type detector or a change in the sound emitted by an electronic leak detector reveals the leak. This part is best left to a pro.

Brakes

The first evidence of a brake fluid leak many drivers get is when the brake pedal hits the floor. Don't let it go this far. If the pedal starts to get low, check fluid level in the master cylinder. It should be about 1/2 inch from the top.

If your car is equipped with front disc brakes and rear drum brakes, the front reservoir of the master cylinder usually serves the discs; the rear reservoir, the drums. If the fluid level in the front reservoir is low, it could mean the disc brake pads are worn, as well as reveal the existence of a leak.

A brake system can leak from lines, hoses, connections, wheel cylinders or master cylinders. Inspect for leaks by examining connections, hoses, and lines from the master cylinder back to each wheel while someone pumps the brake pedal.

If the leak is from a connection, tighten the nut. If a line or hose is leaking, replace it.

If you spot brake fluid on the sidewall of a tire, the wheel cylinder is probably leaking. Pull the wheel and check. Brake linings saturated with fluid should be replaced. Another indication of a wheel-cylinder leak is a wheel that grabs when the brake pedal is applied.

If you haven't uncovered the leak, it is probably internal, past the seals of the master cylinder. Fluid may be leaking from the cylinder into the power-assist unit, indicated by fluid in the unit's vacuum line. The master cylinder should be overhauled or replaced.

Cooling system

Check the coolant level by removing the radiator pressure cap. Make sure the engine is cold.

The top of the coolant should be 1 to 3 inches below the top of the filler neck. The exact amount depends on the car, so check your owner's manual and never overfill the radiator. Unless the car has an overflow tank, coolant will be lost out of the overflow when the engine heats up and the coolant expands.

If the radiator is losing coolant, check all connections while the engine is cold. Small leaks in particular can escape detection when the engine is hot, because coolant will evaporate rapidly.

The best way to check a cooling system with is with a radiator pressure tester. Leaks can usually be seen.

If you don't have a tester, start the engine (cold) and examine the top and bottom hoses, hose connections, thermostat housing, radiator top and bottom tanks, radiator core, radiator drain plug, engine core plugs, heater hoses, and heater core.

If you don't spot the actual leak, shut off the engine and examine everything once more. A grayish white or rust-colored substance is a sign of a leak.

Important News For Smokers:

New Merit Research Released!

New survey results prove MERIT delivers in key areas of taste, ease of switch, and long-term satisfaction.

Rigorous new MERIT research proves it.

MERIT smokers confirm taste a major factor in completing a successful switch from higher tar cigarettes.

MERIT Switch Clicks.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers are glad they switched from higher tar cigarettes. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

2 Of 3 Smokers Prefer MERIT.

In the second part of this study, new tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Backman urges signing of bill

NEWTON — Sen. Jack Backman (D. Brookline-Newton) has called on Governor Edward King to sign legislation allowing the state superior court to appoint a temporary receiver to manage nursing homes providing poor patient care. Sen. Backman is an original sponsor of the bill.

The proposal now before the Governor would create an alternative to sudden shutdowns of nursing homes in emergency situations. At present, the only recourse for poor facilities is decertification or license revocation. These actions result in the home being closed and the patients moved elsewhere, Backman said, noting that the transfer can cause serious physical or emotional distress to frail, elderly residents. Under the provisions of the bill backed by Sen. Backman, a nursing home resident, the Attorney General or the Department of Public Health could petition for court intervention. If a superior court judge decided that conditions in the home were unacceptable, a receiver would be appointed to manage the home temporarily. The receiver would be responsible for keeping the home open while correcting health and safety violations. Once conditions are improved, court intervention would end.

In addition to Sen. Backman, the bill has been endorsed by Frank Manning, Chairman of the Legislative Council of Older Americans, Dr. Alfred Frechette, Commissioner of the Department of Public Health and David Cushman, President of the Mass. Federation of Nursing Homes.

At our Thanksgiving, everyone is thankful.

Give your family a real treat in The S&S Livestock Co. Restaurant at the Newton Marriott Hotel on Thanksgiving.

Entrees include roast turkey with dressing, roast beef, bourbon glazed ham and broiled schrod with lemon butter. Of course, you'll enjoy sweet potatoes, butternut squash and for appetizers, your choice of cranberry juice, cider and clam chowder or a seafood cocktail.

According to school officials No comparison in basic skills test

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — To compare Newton with other cities and towns by Basic Skills Test results is to "engage in a statistical fantasy," according to one school official.

While 91 percent of Newton students tested passed the state-mandated basic skills competency exam by scoring above the cutoff score, the recently released statewide results implied that Newton did not fare well when compared with several surrounding cities and towns.

The reasons Newton appeared to fall below other communities in some skills, officials say, stem from differences in the way the test is given.

The purpose of the multiple-choice tests is to try to identify children who are lacking fundamental skills with the number system, reading and writing. The results of the tests administered last year represent the first year of testing under the Massachusetts Basic Skills Improvement Program.

At a School Committee meeting last week, Dr. Vincent Silluzzio presented an analysis of the Basic Skills Test (a pass/fail test). Newton students were tested in grades 3, 5, and 7 for both reading and writing. Math was tested in grade 8 only and for grade 3 and 5 as well.

Of significance was the finding that among students who failed the basic skills test, the proportion of black students was "considerably higher" than the proportion of white students, especially when tested for 7th grade reading and 8th grade math.

The state requires a breakdown of the Basic Skills Test results on the basis of sex and race.

According to Norman Colb, curriculum director for the schools, it is "impossible" to compare communities on the basis of the test and "to do so is to engage in a statistical fantasy."

Colb said one reason comparisons are not valid is that "each community was charged with setting its own cutoff score" for a passing mark on the test and that "Newton has a very high cutoff score."

The Newton advisory committee which determined the cutoff score, Colb added, "sought a very high cutoff score in an effort to identify as many kids as possible who might profit from extra attention."

"The point of the policy is not to prevent failure, but to identify some kids that need help," he stressed.

For example, Silluzzio said, the state average cutoff score of correct answers out of 59 questions on 8th grade math was 36 right answers. The cutoff score for Newton was 39 correct, Silluzzio said.

Silluzzio reported that the range of reading cutoff scores statewide by 142 communities was from 22 (40 percent correct) to 47 (85 percent correct) out of 55 items.

Despite the fact that 12 percent of Newton students are receiving special ed and "given the number of non-English speaking students," Newton also had a low exemption rate of seven percent, while some school systems had exemption rates of 30 percent or higher, Colb said.

"It was also not unusual for school systems to retest children who failed the first test, and then to report as failure those kids who failed the test a second time. We did not do that," Colb emphasized.

Silluzzio said that for students who did not pass the basic skills test, "special concentrated basic skills instruction has begun."

Absenteeism, according to Silluzzio, was significantly higher among the students who failed the test than other students.

Silluzzio also reported that the Basic Skills results "corroborate several years of STEP test findings."

Committee member Susan Silbey questioned Silluzzio, "If indeed there is such a strong correlation between the scores on the two different tests, then these children who have failed to pass the Basic Skills Test should have been identified by their STEP test."

"They were identified early on as low-achieving students," Silluzzio responded.

When asked by Katherine Jones if any patterns of performance were evident when comparing the results of children in the different Newton schools, Colb said, "You certainly see differences. There is no question about that."

"I would reserve the use of the word 'pattern' to data that are consistent over a two to three year period. Since this is the first year and there are so many variables involved, I don't think there are any patterns yet," Colb continued.

"I question that fact because we do have the data," Jones retorted. "The STEP tests correlate highly with the Basic Skills Tests and we do have the information to be able to look at performance in various schools."

Jones later asked, "In the schools where black children did well, did white children do better?"

According to Colb, "in general" the white kids who scored above the cutoff score scored higher on the average than black kids that scored above the cutoff score.

"I noticed that 42 percent of the students who had not passed the test were receiving special help. Since we had the STEP test data on most of these children prior to this, how is it that only 42 percent of those children had been receiving help," Jones pressed.

"That's help as defined by Chapter 766, tutorial services and all of that," Superintendent Aaron Fink responded.

"I understand that," Jones said.

"It doesn't mean that they're not receiving help in their classroom with their teachers or with English specialists," Fink added.

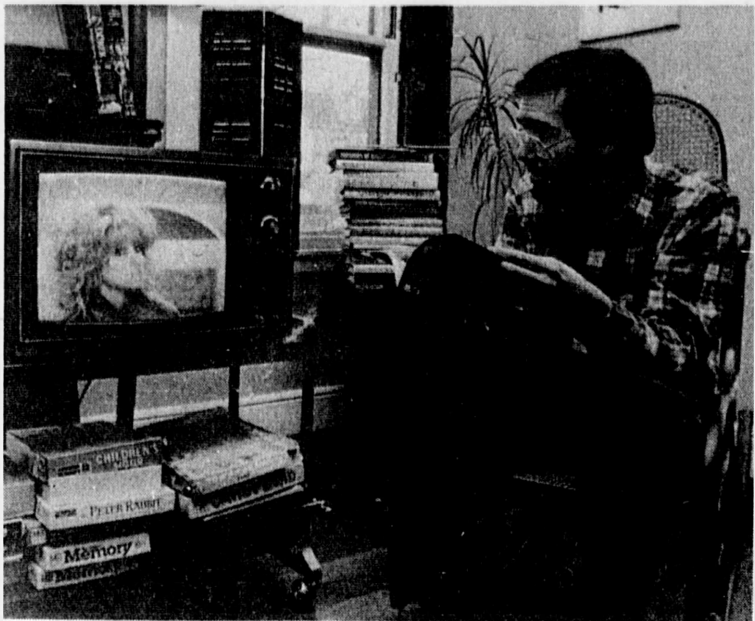

"O.K.," she said with some aggravation. "We're talking about students who have not passed that Basic Skills Competency Test. We're not talking about children who are just a little bit below average."

"So it would seem to me that there was some information prior to this that these kids were in need of some help," Jones continued, referring to the STEP tests which begin in the 4th grade, "and I wanted to know why only 42 percent of those kids were receiving help with 766."

"First of all, the same data would show that those kids were growing a year at a time, too. So there were patterns of growth there comparable to patterns of growth in other kids," Fink said.

"Not all kids would be under Chapter 766," he concluded.

HIGHLANDS OF SCOTLAND
The Scottish highlands approximates the size of New Hampshire. It is a fairly manageable size for touring. Once you have been to Scotland, it is easy to understand the old sentiment of "My Heart's in the Highlands". The natural beauty of its lakes and mountains, tumbling waterfalls, golden meadows, blazing hillsides, coastal cliffs and castles all make your heart succumb to enchantment. The glacial era brought ice sheets which gorged long deep hollows of salt water. While known as fjords in Norway, these hollows are called lochs in Scotland. The most famous of these waterways is Loch Ness, which is known for its inhabitant, Nessie.

Custodians win 5-year labor suit

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON—Several Newton school custodians have been awarded $90,000 in damages by the Massachusetts Labor Commission, resulting from a five-year court battle between the custodians and the Newton School Committee.

The six custodians represented in the case will also receive seven percent per year interest on the damage settlement, which represents five years of back pay, according to Allan McDonald, the Boston attorney representing the custodians in the case.

In a 59-page decision, the commission last Tuesday decided in favor of the custodians because the committee refused five years ago to bargain with the custodians who were being laid off as a result of cuts in the school committee budget.

"They did everything but bargain with them," said McDonald, who said the committee was obligated under Massachusetts General Laws to bargain with the custodians.

"I don't know why they didn't," said McDonald. Robert Robards, president of the 165-member Newton School Custodians Association, said he is happy about the decision, but added that, "It's a crime that it went on this long."

Ann Berwick, school committee chairman, and John O'Connor, assistant school personnel director, would not say if the committee would appeal the decision. Both refused to comment on the case. Repeated attempts to reach attorneys from Murphy, Lamere and Murphy, the Braintree law firm representing the school committee, were unsuccessful.

In April of 1976, seven school custodians were informed by the school committee that they were being laid off from their jobs. According to McDonald, the custodians for four months attempted to bargain with the school committee, which "sent them on a wild goose chase." The custodians were let go in July, two months after they filed suit with the labor commission. In October of that year, two of the seven men were asked by the committee to return to their jobs. Neither McDonald or Robards could explain why the other five custodians weren't also offered back their jobs. Other custodians were hired in their place, McDonald said.

In October of 1978, the state labor commission ordered the rehiring of all the custodians and ordered back-pay hearings, which resulted in the decision to repay the custodians.

"The problem that the school committee is facing is that they refused to bargain," said McDonald.

"They would have substantially lessened their back-pay obligations," had the school committee bargained with the custodians McDonald said.

Six of the original seven custodians will receive benefits, according to McDonald, who said one of the men returned to school to study prior to the settlement, which disqualified him from receiving any damages awarded by the commission. Of the six men who will be getting back pay, one has moved out of state, another is a court officer in Waltham and four are still custodians with the school department.

The individual awards will depend on what each made in unemployment benefits and on other jobs. In addition, the damage settlement includes vacation time compensation and clothing allowance costs. Robards said the custodians also asked for compensation for job search expenses, but the commission decided against it.

"I think it was a fair decision," said McDonald, who added that he hopes no appeals are entered by the school committee. "There's been a lot of litigation expenses on both sides," stated McDonald, who said he didn't know how much money the case cost the City of Newton, in addition to the damage settlement and interest fees. He pointed out however that if the decision was appealed, the interest on the settlement would continue to accumulate. "We will continue to present our position to the commission (if the case is appealed)," said McDonald.

City kills contract with firefighters

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city has told firefighters it has terminated their union contract and will ignore a minimum-manning clause won in binding arbitration four years ago.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly characterized the move as "probably a speedy way to move (fire) negotiations along."

Said Reilly: "The lawyers effectively said as of Nov. 16 the city would implement one of the things the city wanted (and has failed to win) at the bargaining table."

As a result of the city's action, which Firefighters' Union President David Cawley has claimed is "illegal," the union has filed complaints against the city with the Joint Labor Management Committee and the Massachusetts Labor Relations Council as well as two grievances with the American Arbitration Association.

In a related move last week, the city unilaterally declared an impasse in the 23-month-old contract negotiations with the city firefighters' union. Representatives from the city are scheduled to meet today with the Joint Labor Management Committee to discuss the negotiations.

Since July 1980, city firefighters have been working under guidelines guaranteed by their 1978 contract. A clause in the agreement states that the contract, which was signed after a similar prolonged session, shall remain in effect until a new agreement is reached.

Proposition 2½, however, now prohibits unions from going to binding arbitration, a law which Cawley claims works heavily in favor of the city.

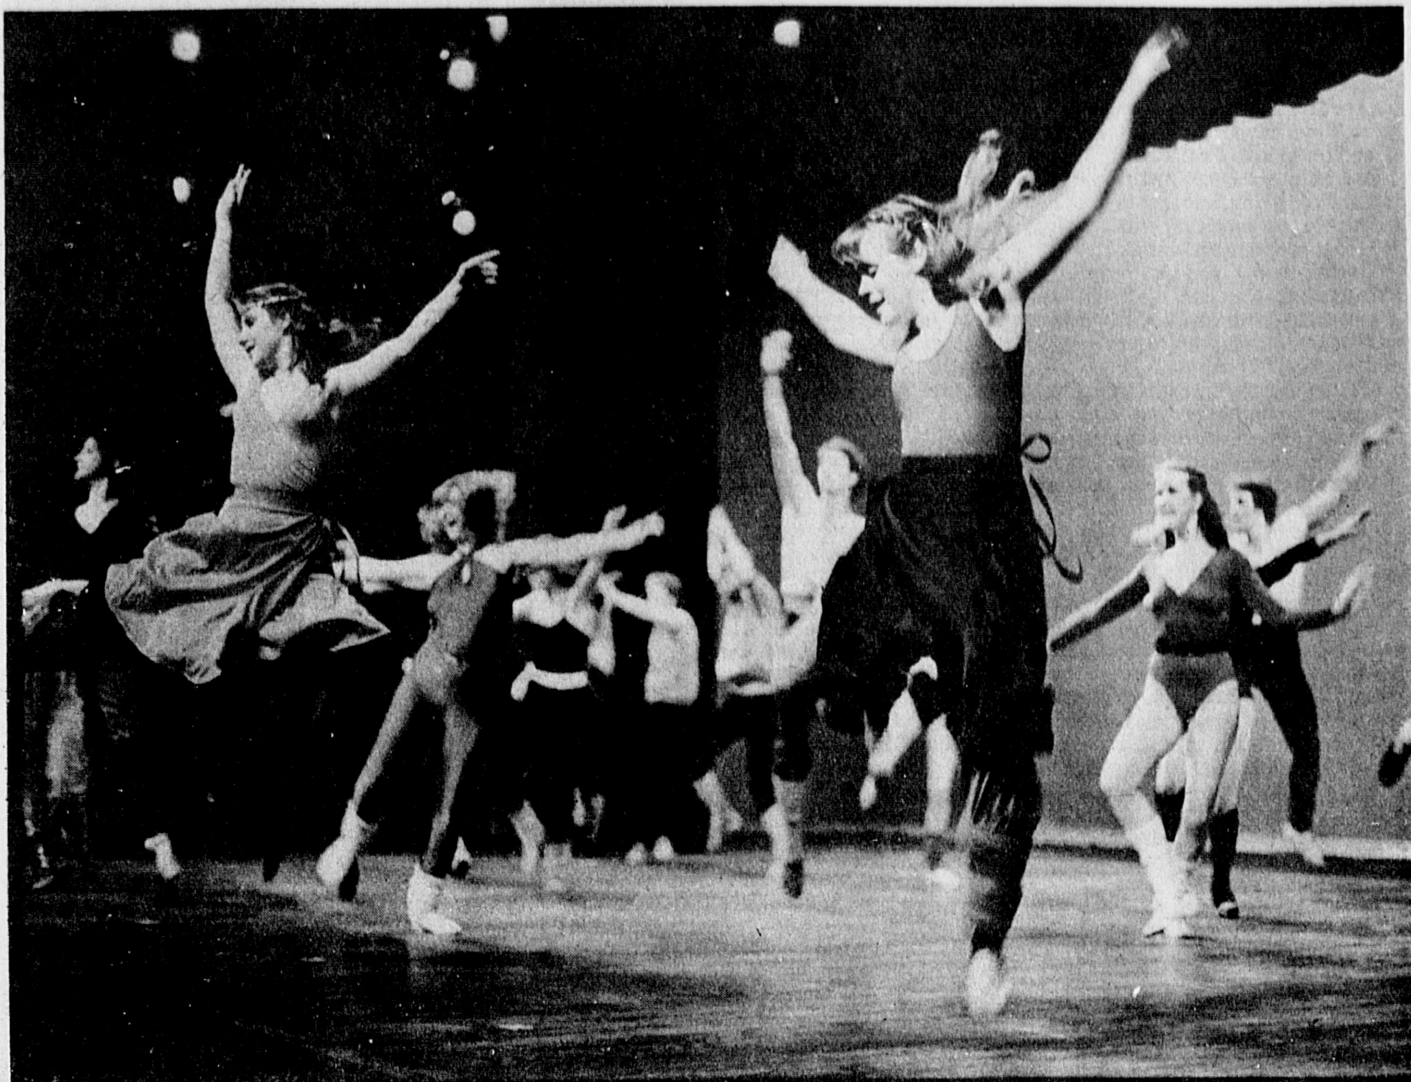

City Labor Attorney Leon Kowle said the existing contract is void because as a public labor agreement it cannot be in effect longer than three years. When told of Kowle's opinion Sunday, Cawley said it was the first time he had heard of the law.

Reilly, who has claimed that minimum-manning requirements take up a sizable chunk of his overtime allotment, said the decision to reduce manning from 46 to 42 men per shift was made after consultation with city lawyers.

It appeared, however, that no city official wanted to take credit for the manning decision. Mayor Theodore Mann put a disclaimer on the move noting it was "purely" Reilly's "as head of the department." Kowle said the mayor's office made the decision after consultation with counsel.

According to Cawley, the minimum-manning clause requires that the city's seven stations are covered by 48 men per shift. Cawley said the firefighters' "working conditions have been jeopardized as well as their abili-

Rep. Joseph DeNucci's toughest fight was not in the boxing ring

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton-Waltham Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci has revealed publicly for the first time that he spent the seven best years of his boxing career "psychologically hooked" on amphetamines that a physician prescribed.

DeNucci's admission came at a graduation ceremony Friday for former addicts and drug abusers who participated in Third Nail, a drug treatment program.

The state representative and former professional boxer said he, too, had to shake his dependency.

At the 11th graduation and awards ceremony for the Third Nail, which is located at 240 Heath St., Jamaica Plain, State Representative Joseph DeNucci congratulated the graduates for their outstanding "comeback."

"You know, I love comebacks," DeNucci, a former professional boxer said lightheartedly. "I've made a few in my life."

DeNucci told the crowd of close to 100 people at the dinner that while he was boxing, he always had a problem making the weight. While still in high school, DeNucci said he was building an outstanding amateur career. But, because of his difficulty in making the weight, a friend recommended he seek a doctor's advice.

"Back in 1961 or 1962, you never read about amphetamines, but I was a young kid with a promising career and I put my faith in this doctor and I was prescribed pills," DeNucci said.

DeNucci said that while he had "never said this before publicly," he developed at that time a dependence on amphetamines. "The seven best years for my boxing career and I was psychologically hooked on amphetamines!" he declared.

When he was approximately 28 years old, DeNucci said he recognized that he "had to do something about" his use of amphetamines. "I quit 'cause amphetamines, but I can't live without them," he said.

After a three year layoff from the ring, DeNucci made a successful comeback at the age of 31, regaining his stature as a top contender. "That comeback without amphetamines is the most important thing I ever did in my life," explained DeNucci today. "That's when I regained my self respect and I felt good about myself."

"I want to congratulate you for taking that first step," DeNucci said.

While current participants in the treatment program looked on, several of the graduates, most of whom were in their early twenties, were overwhelmed with emotion as they spoke of their future plans and the changes that the Third Nail had brought to their lives.

One graduate even wrote and sang a song dedicated to the Third Nail, a free live-in drug treatment program which usually lasts one full year.

According to Bill McCue, executive director of the Third Nail, treatment consists primarily of individual and group counseling and residents are offered a family environment as well as vocational and educational direction.

"The key thing for our graduates," McCue explains, "is that for the first time in most of their lives, they have actually completed something."

Even after graduation, McCue says the progress of the graduates is monitored. Over the last decade, McCue says that approximately 85 percent of the graduates are leading successful and drug-free lives.

"You had the courage to admit to yourself that you had a problem and to do something about it," he stressed.

Nail will take "anybody who comes asking for help."

A group of current residents of the Third Nail demonstrated in a skit Friday night what it means to ask for help and explained that it is the residents who vote on "The seven best years for my boxing career and I was psychologically hooked on amphetamines."

— Newton-Waltham Rep. DeNucci

Thanking their families, Third Nail counselors and God, some of the graduates briefly discussed the impact of the Third Nail program on their lives. For several, the program meant a second chance, almost a rebirth.

To graduate from the program, the participant must not only have performed well in the Third Nail as a resident living a drug-free and non-violent life, but must also have passed the high school equivalency exam, become employed and be living independently.

One woman graduate reminded the current residents that the real difficulty in "making it" is when you are living in the outside world again with its temptations and problems. "I am very lucky to have found some good people as friends," she said thankfully.

According to McCue, the Third whether to admit someone new in to the house.

In the skit, a simulated "family meeting" is held where the residents are introduced to a new applicant and his background. The applicant, Jose, a 28-year-old heroin addict, is grilled by the residents on why he came to the Third Nail and whether he can abide by the house rules and respect both the women and men in the program.

Jose becomes frustrated by the grueling session and starts to give up.

"You giving up that easy," one resident chides him. "You've always quit everything," another criticizes.

Jose pleads for their help and says he will cooperate.

"I need help!" he shouts.

Newton man opts for a trip in the fast lane

Sandra L. Rotberg
Correspondent

NEWTON-It's not quite a riches to rags story, nor a prince to pauper, yet Stephan Blacher of Newton did make a drastic change in his lifestyle.

Twenty-nine-year-old Blacher traded in a posh home, a lucrative business and the security of family and friends, for a cottage in a small town in England, to pursue his dream as a professional race car driver.

"It was a long and painful decision to make," said Blacher. "It took about six months of serious thinking, but I feel it was an honest one. I love what I'm doing."

At the age of 22, he took over a dormant wholesale construction supplies company and proceeded to make it into a sound business. By 1978, four years later, he was able to take time away for an extensive two-week drivers' course at the Jim Russell International Racing Drivers school in England. He felt it was then that the bug had truly bitten.

During 1979, he raced throughout the Eastern states with the Skip Barber racing series (located in Massachusetts) and out of 140 drivers, often finished within the first six.

Business pressures kept him from racing in 1980. After a return trip from Switzerland in the spring of 1981, he resigned as president of the company, put his house up for sale and moved to England to form a Formula III racing team with Jim Russell.

Blacher said, "I wanted to find out my true ability. Too many people are afraid to find their limitations and rather dream about it than do it. If you have a dream and it haunts you, you have to live with it. It's better to take the chance."

Racing a car is not just driving around a track. There are nine months of racing, one month of practice and the remaining time is for picking up sponsors. With the right sponsors he could earn from $40,000 to $60,000 next season.

Blacher said, "You also have to recuperate from races. It's not like driving a Cadillac, it's not always comfortable. There's a lot of anxiety and stress involved in a race and there are times you can get banged up from driving at such high speeds. It really takes a mental and physical toll on you."

After each race the car is tested for the next race. Gears have to be changed accordingly and other mechanical changes may be necessary. There are also sponsors to meet and promotional work to do. He also stresses the importance of staying physically fit.

"In a race," said Blacher, "It is usually the person with the most endurance who wins."

He keeps fit by lifting weights, swimming when he can, watching his diet and running five to six miles almost every day. He says he doesn't jog, he runs.

"Jogging can be a lot of crap, it's hard on your knees. I'd rather walk fast," said Blacher.

In early November he flew to Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, hoping to acquire the $300,000 sponsorship needed for the 1982 racing season and meet with Paul Newman and other noted British Lotus team drivers in the process. Although he must be back in England by February to begin practice, he is still traveling throughout the United States and Canada, seeking sponsors for what he considers a unique package in advertising.

He is currently being paid from the team budget, which is what makes him a professional. And though he may have enough money to live on, it is a far cry from the luxurious life to which he was once accustomed.

Blacher said, "I do feel a material loss, but my belief is if you go into a profession for love, you will later reap the benefits to live a good life. It may not be all you may want, but you will be more content."

Anti-nuke petition has 8,485 signatures

NEWTON — A petition bearing 8,485 signatures from the 4th Congressional District to encourage a freeze on nuclear weapons development in the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. was presented to a staff member of U.S. Rep. Barney Frank.

A celebration of the work done thus far on the petition, sponsored by the Council for a Nuclear Weapons Freeze, was held Sunday at the First Unitarian Church on Washington Street.

More than 100 people attended the day's events, which included a parade from the church to a convalescent home, speakers, music, and "street theater."

"The petition urges Congress to propose a freeze. These names prove there is wide support for a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze," said Pat Simon of Newton, one of the freeze council's five members.

"This is a conservative gesture," Simon continued. "With a freeze in place, negotiations are more likely to begin."

The Nuclear Weapons Freeze is a national movement, with organized petition drives in 20 states.

Fourteen congressional representatives, 23 New England towns, including Newton, have endorsed the "freeze."

Judy Holmberg of Newton, a Barney Frank staff member, accepted the petitions for Rep. Frank.

ON THE TRACK - Stephen Blacher was suited up and buckled into his white Formula III car for a trip around the track at a recent race.

On the track he has driven as fast as 160 m.p.h., a pace about which only the most fearless motorist would dream.

"People ask me if it's the excitement, or if I have a death wish. There is an element of risk involved, but by controlling the vehicle, you can control the danger. Part of it is the thrill. It's the excitement of going into a turn as fast as possible without losing control."

But once he did lose control. In 1979, he hit a side bank while going 90 m.p.h. The car was severely damaged, but he was more fortunate. He walked away only shaken and bruised. "I was more angry than anything else," said Blacher. "I thought about the mistake I made. Hopefully, mistakes will teach you without getting hurt. Once you have found your limitations, only a fool would exceed them."

Blacher feels there will be other mistakes and possibly accidents. "Anything could happen," he says. "You could lose control of the wheel going 150 m.p.h. in a turn, or the driver in front of you could make a crucial error. There are also mechanical breakdowns."

While racing, all drivers must wear a certified helmet. The entire body is covered with four layers of non-flammable clothing, including socks, racing gloves, a turtleneck and facemask. Cars are checked for mechanical failures before and after each race.

Blacher's ultimate goal is to race in the "Grand Prix". He will be racing in the Marlboro Formula III in 1982, which is considered the most prestigious and largest racing series in England. "It is here," says Blacher, "where most drivers get the recognition needed for the 'Grand Prix'. It may take up to two years to be noticed, approved, and decided upon by a team manager, but he feels it is worth the wait."

Although he would eventually like to share an apartment in the states for the off-season and maintain a cottage in England, he has adjusted to country life. Living only 90 miles from London, he prefers to stay where the air is clean.

Blacher said, "I really miss having the opportunity to be with my family and friends and although I have made new friends, it's not quite the same. And do you want to know what I really miss? A large and juicy New York steak."

Contract with firefighters is cancelled ty to perform on the street" as a result of the reduction in manning.

"They have completely violated our contract by their actions," stated Cawley. "They're trying to push us to the wall."

The mayor last week also imposed a citywide hiring freeze which Cawley noted "was kind of convenient." The fire department presently has three vacancies.

In a general meeting Thursday night, the firefighters' union voted complete confidence in their bargaining unit. The union has met 32 times with the city's negotiating team since Dec. 27, 1979.

"They have illegally filed an impasse," said Cawley. "The only one who can file for an impasse is the mediator and he has not." Harvard Professor James Healey has been acting mediator since June 1981.

Deputy Mayor James Hickey, the city's chief negotiator, said he was unable to talk about the negotiations without compromising the city's position.

Hickey noted, however, that the city filed for an impasse because there had been "no change in the basic position of either side" nor did it appear that "there would be any significant movement in the position of either side."

Richard Ciccone, a member of the union bargaining committee, said Sunday if the mayor had signed a contract with the union last June, "he could have saved the city in excess of $80,000."

Aldermen appropriated $194,000 in overtime monies in the FY 1982 fire department budget but were recently forced to approve an additional request of $50,000. Although these funds were used to run the in-house ambulance service for July, Ciccone said if the contract had been signed, the department could have operated under the $194,000 overtime level for the year.

Ciccone said the city has not been "negotiating in good faith at all," but merely "going through the motions." He added: "The city really has had no intentions of negotiating," figuring "sooner or later the union would break down."

"They told us at the beginning of the negotiations that they wanted these things out of the contract," added Ciccone. "He (Mann) hasn't even offered us the things he has offered the other city departments."

"He figures he's (Mann) in the driver's seat with Christmas coming up," said Ciccone. The city owes firefighters retroactive pay raises of 7½ percent for the two years of the unsigned contract, the same percentage increase recently agreed to by the policemen's union. "He feels that we're going to fold. We're not going to fold," he said.

They vote him into the program.

According to McCue, the residents in the program range in age from 18 to 65-years-old. People treated through the outpatient division are as young as 14-years-old.

"Our main goal is to prevent drug abuse," McCue said. "We don't want to be a self-perpetuating bureaucracy."

A licensed non-profit drug treatment facility which receives some support from the state through the Dept. of Mental Health Division of Drug Rehabilitation, the Third Nail is a member of the Therapeutic Communities of America, which has 260 centers in the United States and 34 in other countries.

McCue said one Newton organization has issued a challenge to donate $100 for each person who graduates from the program next year.

Students liked their first Thanksgiving

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE—Imagine you're 21-years-old and you've never had a good, old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner! For that matter, imagine that you've never even heard of Thanksgiving.

That was the case with a group of foreign students who last week had their first Thanksgiving feast at Newton North High School.

An enthusiastic group of teachers and students last Friday turned the popular American holiday into an international affair, when a large group of foreign students from bilingual programs at Newton North and Newton South High Schools got together at north's Palmer House for an early Thanksgiving feast.

A teacher at North thought the Thanksgiving holiday might be more interesting for foreign students if they had a chance to enjoy a traditional American feast which the students themselves had to prepare.

"To teach them about the holiday is one thing," said Anlee Shaye, a bilingual teacher at north, "but it's more meaningful if they actively participate."

So Shaye and her students invited foreign students at South to participate in the first international students' Thanksgiving. It was a great success thanks to the efforts by students who did everything from the cooking to the decorating.

"We cooked the food, shopped for the food. We did everything," remarked Shaye, who was busy dishing out portions of the student-produced feast to the 60 teachers and students who gathered for the occasion.

Inside the Mary Louis Waters International Center, a festive-looking room decorated with colorful posters of foreign countries, international magazines, flowers and a conspicuous Mexican pinata, students from Europe, Asia and South America, enjoyed the food that they peeled, chopped, sliced and baked earlier that day.

The students prepared a dozen pumpkin and apple pies, zucchini and cranberry fruit bread, an enormous pot of sweet cranberry relish, squash and stuffing and, of course, the traditional turkey.

Ngo Lehe, 19, a junior at North, added some international flavor to the traditional menu with a tasty Oriental rice and vegetable dish that she prepared. The foreign students also learned how to make some traditional Thanksgiving foods, like the pumpkin pie, which was baked by an Israeli girl, Drora Bruck, a 14-year-old sophomore at South.

Aurora Schieda, who is from Venice, Italy and now lives in Newton Corner, added a festive touch to the buffet with a flower arrangement, made from vegetables, which was created by her father.

Thanksgiving is a day when we eat too much. But it's also a time to remember what we have to be thankful for. The students also remembered that important aspect of the holiday. Several of them said they were thankful that they could enjoy their friends and that there was plenty of food to eat.

"I'm thankful for food, for a free life, for the best school and comfort in my life," said Lehe, a Newtonville resident who came here six months ago from Vietnam.

A student at south, Sann Chao, 21, said he was glad to have a Thanksgiving Day. "I'm thankful for food, for people coming together," he said.

But the the best thing about Thanksgiving, according to most of the students, is definitely the turkey.

Giving thanks

Thanksgiving is a day for many things. It's a day for chilly, damp football games that bring the blood of high school fans to a boil.

It's a day for wandering into the kitchen, getting in the way, basting the turkey and finally, wondering how many days will be left with turkey sandwiches on the menu.

It's a day for being with family members or even taking the folks to a recreation of the first turkey day in Plymouth.

It's a day off, away from the 9-5 and the phone calls and meetings and school.

Yet above all it is a day to take literally - a day for giving thanks.

It would be easier to conjure up a Norman Rockwell painting with Mom and Dad and the kids seated, heads bowed, with a golden brown turkey as the centerpiece of the table.

But all is hardly roses on this Thanksgiving, 1981.

The recession is entrenched in our economy, no matter what official government statements say. A bag of groceries takes almost a bag of cash from the family till. People around the world are still starving and watching their crops dry up in the sun or, worse, having to pack up their families and leave their homes to invaders.

Governments around the world are eyeing each other with the same venom they used last year or even a decade ago. A "cold war" mentality exists and officials in Washington talk of using bombs as "warning shots" to show fearlessness and power.

Our foolishness in the past is cropping up now as communities around the country learn they sit on toxic waste time bombs and the government holds out its hands in dismay.

But this Thanksgiving, like those in past years, is still a day when individuals can share with their families and friends and take a few hours to think of what they really have to give thanks for.

They can be thankful for being in America - a fact too often taken for granted. They can be thankful for the right to discuss the issues that have, and will continue to, occupy world concern and consume the funds and energy of world leaders. They can be thankful for the freedom to take the day off, travel where they like, and observe the historical day in any fashion they choose. And they can know that there really aren't too many places left in the world where that would happen.

People can take the day to be at peace, knowing that that, too, is a precious commodity often lost in the day-to-day life.

Thanksgiving will never be as simple as it was when the Pilgrims first sat down with their Indian neighbors to give thanks for making it through the year. Life will never be that clear or simple again.

But it is a special time to give thanks for what we have and to think that perhaps some day things will be simple again.

Opinions

Personal thanks, public concerns

By Richard Lodge
Graphic Editor

The Department of the Navy officially killed off Joseph Dunn last week, less than seven days before Thanksgiving.

A stiffly-dressed soldier walked up the steps of Maureen Dunn's Randolph home to deliver the news, written in the terse prose typical of military decisions.

Dunn, shot down over the ocean in Southeast Asia back in 1968 had not been seen or heard from since, so following a series of reviews by the Navy, he was pronounced dead.

Maureen Dunn, a Randolph selectman and one of the founders of a group of families fighting over the years for an accounting of the POWs and MIAs in Southeast Asia, said she was not surprised by the news. Her government, she said, had done little to obtain a final, accurate accounting.

This Thanksgiving will be little different for her than those of the past 12 years, with perhaps one exception.

The Navy says her husband is dead. The messenger hand-delivered the message so officially, it must be true. But for Maureen Dunn and hundreds of other wives, sons, daughters, mothers and fathers of servicemen buried in those dark pages of our history, the men will not be mourned until their bodies are returned home.

The letter came in the mail just over two weeks ago. My oldest brother Gavin had just come back from an unsuccessful elk hunting trip into the mountains near his home out west.

He prefaced his tale by noting how I would surely give him grief for his escapades since we have both always shared a strong anti-hunting sentiment and he, wouldn't this certainly raise my liberal hackles.

It did raise a smile to my lips since he and I both knew neither of us would have thought of such a thing - elk hunting - a decade ago. But this time, this venture into the snowy mountains with a high-powered rifle awkward to the touch and certainly not something to be taken lightly, was a landmark.

This hunting jaunt, he wrote, was the first time he had hunted since he had last cruised outside the perimeter of the airfield at Danang in 1968, hunting men.

December 2 of that year was the last day he and his squad went hunting. There was an explosion, a landmine, and his armored personnel carrier was flipped into the air like a Matchbox toy.

The stiffly-dressed Marine Corps representative had come to our door to deliver the telegram. The message was terse, clinical, but Gavin was not dead. He had been airlifted to Brooke Army Hospital in San Antonio and in spite of burns over half his body, his prognosis was good.

They rebuilt his hands, plucked a bullet which had exploded from his own tank when the landmine went off, from his arm. And he began years of therapy and reconstructive surgery. After countless trips in and out of VA hospitals one day he looked in the mirror, flexed his scarred hands and said to hell with it. He would take no more surgery for he knew what he was then was the best he would be, physically, and most importantly, he was alive.

He got married, finished law school, passed the bar exam and got a job. He worked and worked to rebuild his mind and worked with his body to make it the best he could.

And finally he did something no one in his family had ever dreamed he would be able to do. He went elk hunting. He didn't really want to kill an elk and I figure he went through the week dutifully searching the snow for elk tracks but dreading, deep inside, that image through the rifle scope of a clean shot, an elk standing on a hill against the fresh snow.

Yet it was an important rite of passage. He had come back from Vietnam, back from pain and mental torture and he had become whole and alive.

He could go hunting again, this time by choice, and no one would shoot back or run a trip wire across his path.

Maureen Dunn pushed aside questions from reporters the day the news came. She would make a statement to the press, she said, on Saturday. When Saturday came there were no tears but certainly there was no relief.

Her husband could be counted out as dead by the military but no number of official reviews or pronouncements would ever clear the record for her or the other families of those men still missing in Southeast Asia.

Joseph Dunn was one of over 2500, you see. They were captured or killed and then, after a respectful period of half-hearted searches and full-fledged extortion attempts by the government of Vietnam, they were shelved.

Yet reports have come in over the years by the hundreds. Refugees had testified that they had seen "tall Caucasians" working, under heavy guard, in Vietnamese and Laotian villages long after the US had pulled out. Always the government had listened and jotted down notes and made peremptory inquiries of the Communist government and always, the men were written off.

For Maureen Dunn, last weekend was a rite of passage. She had little to give thanks for but her determination was re-forged. She would not rest until she could account for her husband's disappearance.

On Thursday we will all sit down to a golden brown turkey and bowls and bowls of trimmings to give thanks. Most people will give thanks for their families and the chance to come together to share the warmth and love of the season. I will give thanks that my brother never saw an elk out in those mountains but I will be thankful that he is alive to try.

I will be thankful also that the Marine Corps officer who drove up to our door carried the truth, however painful, that he was alive and would live to be with us on Thanksgiving.

And I will be thankful that Maureen Dunn will never give up until all of us know the truth.

Graphically speaking

The mayor refuses to chicken out

A fitting tribute

In the last report of the Administration and Planning Committee, City Clerk Edward English paid tribute to 20-year veteran Alderman Ernie Dietz who will be replaced by newcomer Harold Levinsky in January.

Noting that the report will be one of Dietz's last, English wrote: "...let the official Committee records note that his departure from the board will create a great void of knowledge and expertise of the workings of municipal government and that his presence in the chamber will be sadly missed.

"To Ernie, a fond farewell and to his wife, Jean, thank you for allowing the city to share him for these two decades of public service so admirably given by him to his City of Newton."

Graphically speaking agrees and also wishes to extend out warm gratitude to Dietz for his dedication and public service.

On a sad note

On a sad note, Graphically speaking would like to second the memorial resolution unanimously approved by aldermen Monday night honoring Lorenz Muther, Jr., a former state representative from Newton and past Executive Director of the Newton Taxpayers Association.

We also take this time to mourn the death of Mr. Muther, a 1930 cum laude graduate of Harvard University.

Mr. Muther, a lawyer in the city for more than 30 years, contributed greatly to the quality of life in Newton.

Bearer of good news

In the mail last week Graphically speaking received a note from the law firm of Quinn and Morris in Boston which is well worth passing on.

It seems that Postman John Ciccone of the Chestnut Hill branch post office provided a silver lining to what could have turned out to be a very dismaying tale.

As James Morris of the law firm tells it, two visitors from South Africa, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Netherwood, were shopping at the Chestnut Hill Mall when thieves broke into their van, making off not only with "many thousands of dollars of gold Krugerrands" but also a very long list of personal goods.

The crooks lifted passports, savings bonds, insurance certificates, family wills, bills of sales and medical records.

As Morris noted, "You can imagine the enormity of their loss."

That is where John Ciccone stepped in.

Ciccone found many of the Netherwood's documents strewn about the mall so he gathered them up, realizing that they were of great value to the people who lost them.

After a number of phone calls to the Newton Police and Immigration and Naturalization office, Ciccone finally contacted the South African embassy in New York. The embassy, to his chagrin, said there was no way of tracking down the Netherwoods.

Finally, after coming up against a brick wall in his dealings with various government agencies, Ciccone looked through several area phone books until he found a man named Frank Netherwood in Scituate.

Frank wasn't related to the South African Netherwoods but after the firm of Quinn and Morris ran an ad in The Boston Globe, on behalf of the South African visitors, someone who knew Frank Netherwood saw the ad, called Frank, and Frank called John Ciccone.

Ciccone was then hooked up with the law firm and the valuable papers returned to their owners.

John Ciccone's diligence paid off and as attorney Morris noted, "His efforts reflect credit not only upon himself, but also the US Postal Service and, indeed, America."

Five years down

In the "five years down, bring on some more," column, this week Graphically speaking wants to congratulate Rose Kunkel of Newton who was honored recently as one of 86 Emerson Hospital employees who have put in a total of 735 years of dedicated service.

The Garden City employee was honored for her five years at the facility in Concord.

On the airwaves

If you just can't bring yourself to bundle up and sit on hard bleacher seats to watch the "turkey day" football games of Newton North and South High Schools, or if you just want audio, not video, the folks at WNTN radio tell us you can tune in Thanksgiving Day and hear both games.

The North High Tigers game against Brookline will be broadcast at 10 a.m. (1550 AM) and a tape delay broadcast of the South Lions' game against Lincoln-Sudbury will follow the North game.

Cookin' kids

Ilana Marcus of Newton will be celebrating Thanksgiving a little more like the Pilgrims than most of us this year. Ilana and Billy Caines of Bedford, both 11, will appear on the Nov. 29 segment of Channel 5's Sunday Open House and the pair will be preparing corn cakes with cranberries at Plimoth Plantation.

The program is part of a new monthly series of cooking with kids programs in which two "child-chefs" demonstrate an ethnic recipe keyed to a holiday or a particular cultural group in the Boston area.

The program airs from 9-11 on Sunday morning.

Rooster roast

Although we must have missed our invitation in the mail we hear that the bi-annual roast for outgoing aldermen was full of laughs and surprises.

Probably the biggest laugh of the night came when an unidentified chicken paraded into the dining area of the Turtle Lane Playhouse, read a humorous poem and upon completion asked for the mayor.

The chicken first shook the hand of Mayor Ted Mann and then proceeded to dump a basket of confetti over the head of the city's chief executive.

Everyone, including the mayor, had a great chuckle.

Some other presents awarded to aldermen over the evening included a set of Tinker Toys to Land Use Chairman Terry Morris; a poopier scooper to Ethel Sheehan who unsuccessfully tried to pass an related ordinance in the city; a guys' guide to Jewish expressions to Joseph DePasquale; and to Richard McGrath a photo of Mark White endorsing Mann for mayor. McGrath in turn asked Mann to autograph the photo for his personal archives.

Good thing that chicken didn't try to tar and feather Hizzoner.

Budding artist

Apparently Rachel, the mayor's granddaughter, visits City Hall for reasons other than seeing granddad. She likes to draw. One of the mayor's office chairs was indiscriminately a victim of the child's last artistic urge.

With all those mementos gracing Mayor Mann's walls (you should see his collection of hard hats) there's nothing wrong with a little reminder of little Rachel.

Just two last words to round out this week's Graphically speaking - Happy Thanksgiving!

3 residents lead fund drive

NEWTON — Three local residents have been named associate directors of the Big Gifts campaign for the 1982 Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston (CJP) fund drive.

They are Alvin B. Allen of Chestnut Hill, Theodore I. Libby of Newton, and George D. Levy of Wellesley, formerly of Newton.

"The stature and diverse business backgrounds of these men will provide added vigor to the Big Gifts campaign," said Big Gifts Chairman, Steven Grossman of Chestnut Hill, who announced the appointments. "Although they all have been generous contributors in the past, this is the first time they have been actively involved in generating other gifts. Their willingness to take on this commitment will say much about the importance they place on this campaign to other contributors and potential contributors and should enable us to involve a larger cross section of individuals than ever before," he said.

Allen is the president of the real estate development of Allen Associates. He is on the Board of Trustees of Beth Israel Hospital and on its project planning and building committees.

Levy is the president of Beacon Electric Manufacturing Co., Boston.

Libby is a trustee of Beth Israel Hospital and has served as the chairman of the hospital's Friends of Harold Rosenfield drive. He and his wife, the former Shirley Glunts, provided the funds for the construction of the Libby Building at Beth Israel in honor of her father, James E. Glunts and for a patients' garden at Jewish Memorial Hospital. They were recipients of the Israel Bonds "City of Peace Award."

Libby served as co-chairman of the New England Region of the Weizmann Institute of Science, is on the building committee of the Jewish Community Multi-Service Center in Newton, is an honorary trustee of the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged, and on the Board of Governors of Belmont Country Club.

NEWTON — For some the smoke has cleared.

Six months after Newton became the first city in the Commonwealth to pass a law restricting cigarette smoking in restaurants there are few among the eatery establishment who have found the law troublesome.

Restaurateurs have not only complied with the ordinance requiring restaurants with more than 50 seats to set aside 15 percent of their seats for non-smokers but have drawn up tougher standards.

Last Thursday, the American Cancer Society sponsored Great American Smokeout set up even stricter guidelines when smokers nationwide were asked to voluntarily give up the habit for at least one day. The annual Smokeout, the fifth such sponsored event, got nearly five million people to stop smoking for the entire day a year ago and 2.2 million to stop for between one and ten days.

"One of the best role models is here in Newton," said Rita Addison, president of GASP (Group Against Smoking Pollution) whose group lobbied hard to push the non-smoking restrictions. "We encourage those innocent victims of second-hand smoke to speak up assertively for smoke free air in public places."

GASP Chairman David G. Wilson said his group will push a state law restricting smoking in eatery establishments. At present there is a battle brewing in Cambridge where a similar ordinance would require restaurants to set aside 25 percent of their seats for non-smokers.

"Our group doesn't stop people from smoking," said Wilson. "We want to give non-smokers some fresher air than they would have otherwise."

Legal Seafoods on Boylston St. recently enlarged its non-smoking section from 40 to 60 percent.

"We have always had a non-smoking section," said owner Mark Berkowitz, whose restaurant has been operating in Newton for six years. "We found more people asked for it so we have tried to accommodate them."

At the 99 restaurant in Chestnut Hill, Manager Steve McGovern has set aside 25 percent of the establishment's 112-seat dining room for non-smokers while leaving the 125-seat lounge area completely open for smokers.

Although tables in the dining area have remained vacant on occasion despite waiting lines, McGovern said compliance with the law has not hindered business.

Ralph DiPietro, manager of the Newton Corner Boston Fish House, said he places non-smokers in a separate dining room. Tuesday night 53 of the establishment's 195 seats were set aside for non-smokers.

Said Addison: We feel that the Great American Smokeout is not only time to say if you're hooked get unhooked, but if you're a non-smoker, you're not home free. Because if you're around other people who smoke you're exposed to the same poisons they are."

In addition to the national campaign, the Newton Health Department will publicize the event at each of the junior highs and have demonstrations and films at the high schools showing the adverse effects of smoking.

Health Educator Jane Roth noted that although statistics show a sizable drop in the number of teenage smokers since 1974, teenagers are still compelled to take up smoking.

According to the 1981 Surgeon General report, 14 percent of the female and 12 percent of the male population between the ages 12 and 18 smoked. The numbers are down from 17 and 17.7 percent respectively in 1974.

However, female smoking for the 12 to 18 age group has climbed from 9.6 percent in 1968 to the present level of 14 percent. Male smoking during the same 11-year period fell from 16.7 percent to 12 percent.

"It's the accepted thing to do," said Roth of the teenage indulgence. "It's something that you shouldn't do, yet it's cheaper and easier to do than all those other things you're not supposed to do."

Roth also said that children of parents who smoke are twice as likely to begin smoking than those children whose parents do not smoke.

Despite the overall rise in smoking from 1968, Roth emphasized the decrease in teenage smokers from 1974. Today more than ever there are counter pressures not to smoke ranging from the much publicized Brooke Shields anti-smoking campaign to health awareness programs for people of all ages.

Prior to the new city ordinance, Newton had a program of voluntary compliance in the establishment of non-smoking areas in restaurants. The first law, passed in 1972, prohibited smoking in supermarkets as well as any food dispensing establishments excluding restaurants.

As part of Thursday's festivities, members of the Newton North and Newton South football teams will participate in "The Super Smokeout Challenge of the Century" at Boston's Downtown Crossing between noon and 2:00 p.m. The "Challenge" is a series of team tugs-of-war against strongman John Wooten, the 1981 Massachusetts Smokeout Chairman.

Knitting, crocheting classes are offered

NEWTON — The Beethoven Senior Drop-In Center which is located at the Zervas School, Beacon Street at Beethoven Avenue, offers a knitting and crocheting class on the first and third Thursday of the month at 1 p.m.

Perhaps you would like to either learn to knit or crochet or reacquire an old skill. Maybe you need help to finish a project which you have previously started.

The instructor, Lorraine Cotting, offers professional lessons and advice. She can also assist with needlepoint.

Many of the knitters volunteer their time to work on projects for the Veteran's Hospital, Morgan Memorial, and R.S.V.P. (Retired Senior Volunteer Program) fairs. Yarn is provided for these volunteer projects.

The Beethoven Drop-In Center is sponsored by the Dept. of Human Services, in cooperation with the Council on Aging. For more information call Mary Stuart-Hillman at the center, 527-6749.

Social club meets for learning disabled adults

NEWTON — Independence House, Inc., has established a new social club for learning disabled young adults (18-28). Regular meetings are held on Thursday evenings from 7:30 to 9:30 at the Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Center. This non-sectarian club is under the leadership of Owen Kantor, M.S.W.

The club was formed to meet the needs of a select group of young people who throughout their lives have fallen between the cracks of labeled categories of handicap. As learning disabled, they are too intelligent to be considered mentally retarded and their disabilities do not stem from emotional maladjustments; yet, they are unable to keep up socially with their peers.

Having completed their formal educations, these young people find it difficult to meet compatible companions and they need some assistance in planning social activities. Some of them are socially inexperienced and awkward; therefore, they benefit from the leadership of the social worker who meets with the group on a weekly basis. Occasionally, as members of the club desire, plans are made for additional weekend activities.

The club is sponsored by Independence House, Inc., an organization begun by parents who are also interested in establishing a transitional residence for their sons and daughters.

For further information about both the social club and the parent group, call 369-1352 or 369-5405.

Garden club sells postcards to finance T station plantings

CHESTNUT HILL — Color postcards of the Massachusetts State Flower, the trailing arbutus, are being sold by the Chestnut Hill Garden Club to support its beautification of the Chestnut Hill subway station.

The postcards reproduce an illustration of the endangered training arbutus by Mary Vaux Walcott which appears in the Portfolio of North American Wildflowers (Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C., by permission.) Profits from their sale will enable the Chestnut Hill Garden Club to begin the first project of its Civic Improvement Committee, the planting and maintaining of the Chestnut Hill MBTA station.

Garden Club members and local residents have removed debris from the station, and plan to plant flowering bulbs and perennial borders and mulch around the trees. The Garden Club will provide some of the plantings and the care of them.

The Chestnut Hill Garden Club, a member of The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts and The Garden Club of America, is selling the postcards at eight for $1 or 50 for $5. They will be on sale at the Advent Fair of the Church of the Redeemer, 379 Hammond St., Chestnut Hill on Dec. 4 and 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. They may also be ordered by writing to The Chestnut Hill Garden Club: 74 Fernwood Rd., Chestnut Hill 02167.

Size 44 woman now looks like a model after losing 74 lbs. and 82" in just 180 days!

By DON DAVIS
Special Writer

Charlotte Dougherty seems to be one of those people who sparkles and bubbles with good cheer and laughter at all times. She's attractive, vivacious - full of wit and good humor.

However, the 28-year-old mother of two paints a very different portrait of herself and her mood the way she existed only a few short months ago.

"I was a witch!" she declares with a big smile. "I'm serious! I was a completely different person. I had a terrible attitude. I was a miserable person. I took it out on everyone - my husband, kids, friends."

When Charlotte says she was a "different person," it's no exaggeration. She speaks on several levels: physical, emotional, psychological.

The physical change is the most dramatic component of the "new Charlotte." Old friends don't even recognize her.

The five-foot-four inch Charlotte has gone from a rotund, unappealing 194 pounds to a svelt, model-like 118 pounds!

"I lost 74 pounds and 82 inches in 180 days at Nutri System," she proudly declares.

"I feel better and look better than I ever did. I'm even thinner than I was in high school!" she adds.

The emotional and psychological changes that have grown out of her weight loss are just as important and as obvious. Charlotte has snapped out of a long period of depression.

"I just didn't want to go anywhere," she recalls. "My husband wanted to take me out on weekends, but I wouldn't go. Eventually he started going places by himself."

"I was so embarrassed. He's six-foot-one, and I weighed more than he did," she laughs. "I constantly wore his shirts to cover myself up. I was miserable and frustrated."

Charlotte's new slim figure brought an entirely new attitude.

"We get a babysitter, and we go out every weekend. I'm having a great time," she says. "I'm really looking forward to my 10th anniversary high school reunion. I bought a new gown. I just can't wait."

28 year old Charlotte Dougherty looked -- and felt -- years older when she weighed 194 lbs. and wore a size 44.

If it hadn't been for Nutri System and the loss of 72 pounds, Charlotte doesn't think she would have showed her face at the reunion.

"When I got married, I was about 125 pounds," she recalls. "But when I became pregnant, I put on a tremendous amount of weight."

She thought she could lose the weight easily, but nothing seemed to work.

"I tried every diet there was. I tried the weight clubs and fad diets, doctors' diets, pills, a carbohydrate diet, a 1,500 calorie diet. None worked."

"The pills were the worst," she chuckles. "I got really flaky. I lost 10 pounds and then put back twice as much as I lost."

"I was desperate when I came to Nutri System. I thought I would have a nervous breakdown," she recalls. "I saw the newspaper ads and found it hard to believe that the 'before' and 'after' photos were the same people."

"Now, my photos are in the paper," she laughs. "It's a great program. It was worth every cent!"

Thousands of satisfied clients, just like Charlotte, have made Nutri System Weight Loss Medical Centers one of the nation's largest chains of reducing offices.

Nutri System brings quick, dramatic results in the most stubborn cases of obesity because it is different from every other program or diet plan.

It's a sound, comprehensive program based on common sense and the most advanced nutritional knowledge. It is a medically supervised program that uses no drugs or pills. It includes personalized counseling, its own food program, behavior education classes, moderate optional exercise and a long-range maintenance program that makes sure the weight stays off.

The program starts with a complete physical examination by the center's staff physician. Throughout the program, the center's medical staff closely checks and monitors the client's progress.

With the help of Nutri System's Weightminder computer, a weight goal is set for each client. The computer also sets a target date for achieving the goal.

Nutri System guarantees that the client will achieve his goal in the predicted number of days or the client stays in the program at no extra charge until the ideal weight is reached.

In Charlotte's case, the goal was reached in the exact number of days predicted.

"It was amazing how quick I lost weight," Charlotte says. "The

After losing 74 lbs. -- 15 in just one week -- on the Nutri System program, Charlotte is skinnier today than she was in high school and now chooses her bikinis from the size 5 rack!

first week I lost 15 pounds!"

Not everyone experiences such a dramatic loss so quickly, but many Nutri System dieters lose a pound a day. As people vary, so do their weight losses. Nutri System evaluates each client on an individual basis to insure maximum weight loss in a minimum of time.

Clients lose quickly and rapidly by substituting their normal foods for Nutri System's own line of high-protein, high nutrition, low-calorie foods.

"Fantastic! I really loved the food," Charlotte declares. "Even my husband likes it. He tried it and said it was better than my cooking," she laughs.

Charlotte ate three filling meals a day plus snack. "Everything is there for you," she says. "You can't make a mistake. Anyone who goes on this diet has to lose!"

Charlotte makes this statement from personal experience. Seven girlfriends have joined Nutri System after seeing Charlotte's success.

"I loved the food," she adds. "Particularly the veal pepper steaks, the chicken dishes, tuna, pancakes and desserts. I couldn't believe there were desserts like that - chocolate pudding and cupcakes!"

With Nutri System foods there is no measuring, weighing or calorie counting. Everything is pre-packaged and ready to heat and serve.

Charlotte even took her Nutri System foods on overnight trips and continued to lose weight.

"And I was never hungry!" She declares.

Every week Charlotte attended Nutri System behavior education classes, an extremely important component of the total program.

"Oh, I've learned a lot," she says. "My eating habits have all changed. I eat slowly. I'm not snacking all the time. I don't eat when I watch television. Now I love vegetables! Instead of chips and candy, I eat vegetables, and I'm satisfied!"

Perhaps, Charlotte's proudest boast is that she hasn't regained a single pound in six months. Maintaining proper weight after it is lost is the ultimate challenge of any weight loss program.

Nutri System's aggressive maintenance program offers a full year of support and guidance to the dieter who has achieved his proper weight. Charlotte continues her classes and regular checkups.

And Charlotte Dougherty continues to look and feel great! "Believe it or not, I've gone from a size 44 pants to size five," she says with a grin. "I feel very proud of myself."

"My husband buys me clothes all the time. Before he didn't know what to get me - maybe a tent! I even wear a bikini!"

"I have to thank Nutri System," she says. "The people at the center are great. The program is fantastic!"

GOOD STORY - David Patry looked totally captivated by the storytelling session held as part of National Children's Book Week Saturday at the West Newton branch of the Newton Library.

Rep. Schur speaks on era of Proposition 2½

BOSTON — Rep. Susan D. Schur (D-Newton) recently addressed members of the National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW) on the topic of "Surviving with Ideals in Politics in the Era of Proposition 2½."

Schur spoke to 30 members of NCJW's Greater Boston Career branch, a newly-formed group which serves the needs of career women in the Boston area.

Schur urged NCJW members to become familiar with state legislation, particularly in the areas of health and human services, the judiciary, and individual rights — among the issues which are the council's national priorities.

"There are crucial decisions being made daily on these issues by the state legislature, and legislators need to be made aware of the public's positions," she said.

In her speech, Rep. Schur stressed the importance of citizen involvement in state government, especially in the aftermath of Proposition 2½, when priority-setting involves increasingly difficult decisions. Schur pointed out that with the "new federalism" and the Reagan administration's commitment to block grants, state legislatures will have a much greater role in deciding what programs will receive funding.

Schur also discussed with the members the role of women in the legislature and in politics, as well as an insiders' view of the functioning of the legislature.

The National Council of Jewish Women, the nation's oldest Jewish women's volunteer organization, supports 1,600 service projects across the country. NCJW's 100,000 volunteers are part of 200 sections committed to a broad program of education, social action and service in the United States and Israel.

Election Commission rejects complaint against Terry Morris

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Election Commission Thursday unanimously "rejected" a complaint charging that Ward 2 Alderman Terry Morris does not live in ward and therefore should not have been allowed to run for the seat.

Patricia Ciccone, who finished a distant third in her bid for one of the two ward 2 seats in the November election, filed a notarized letter last week with the commission requesting that Morris be disqualified.

Ciccone claims Morris, assistant director of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination and a Suffolk University Law student, lives with his parents at 10 Harding Street in West Newton. Morris, however, has contended that his "legal residence" is 391 Linwood Avenue in ward 2. Under the municipal charter, Morris would not have been allowed to run for the seat if he was not from ward 2.

The four-member commission ruled that Ciccone did not give "reasons" for the belief that Morris is an illegally registered voter. Furthermore, the commission said the complaint was "technically flawed" because it was not given under sworn oath.

If deemed an illegally registered voter by the commission, Morris could be forced to give up his seat after a vote by aldermen and another election for the spot would be held.

In the motion approved by the commission, the complaint was denied "without prejudice" and Ciccone was invited to submit another complaint sworn under oath and with reasons for the belief that Morris does not live in ward 2.

The commission made the decision after Election Commissioner Alan Licarie detailed an interview with both Morris and Ciccone regarding the complaint.

Morris, who is chairman of the powerful Land Use Committee, topped the ticket in the ward 2 at large race receiving 8,707 votes. Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond captured the second seat by receiving 7,853 votes. Ciccone, president of a restaurant development corporation who also made an unsuccessful bid for the seat against Morris and Richmond in the 1979 election, received 5,534 votes.

Licarie said that Morris' attorney requested that the commission reject the complaint because specific reasons for the belief that Morris is illegally registered were not included in the complaint.

"Counsel said that he would not answer until he knew reasons," said Licarie, noting that Ciccone contended that Linwood Ave. was just a mailing address for Morris.

Under state statute, commission members ruled that the complaint must be sworn under oath and include sufficient reasons.

Licarie submitted to the commission the Jan. 1, 1981 census which lists Morris' address as Linwood Ave. The census was signed by Morris. In addition, Licarie submitted the latest voting list which records Morris address as Linwood Ave.

Ciccone contended that several anonymous callers tipped her off to Morris' residency. However, she told Licarie that she was unsure if people would testify before the commission that Morris does not live at Linwood Ave.

Even if Ciccone submits another complaint, there were some indications that she will have a hard time convincing the commission that Morris is illegally registered.

Kathleen Torres, assistant city solicitor, told the commission that Ciccone must prove Morris was not living at the address on Jan. 1, 1981 to prove he was illegally registered. Ciccone told Licarie that she learned of Morris' residency after the preliminary in September.

"The statute is absolutely clear on that," claimed Torres. "If she (Ciccone) wants to go through this whole rigamarole because she knew where he was on Sept. 10, it will still be rejected."

Election officials, however, maintained they would welcome reviewing the complaint in proper form.

Before the meeting, the commission held an "executive session" to determine if they should conduct the meeting behind closed doors. After about 20 minutes behind closed doors, the commission ruled that the meeting should be held in open session.

Neither Morris or Ciccone were available for comment.

Newton's Usen first lay person to share annual 'People of Vision Award'

NEWTON—Four prominent Bostonians will share honors Sunday evening, Nov. 22, at the Museum of Science when the Massachusetts Affiliate of the National Society to Prevent Blindness conducts its 1981 People of Vision Awards Dinner.

Volunteers honored at Eliot Church

NEWTON — Watertown resident Dorothy Sullivan Waters was among those honored at an open house recently at the Eliot Church, Newton. The celebration was in recognition of her efforts as a volunteer for the West Suburban Nursing Home Advocacy (Ombudsman) Program. Mrs. Waters completed five days of intensive training on October 20 and will soon begin visiting a local nursing home regularly. As an "ombudsman," she will provide information and address concerns as necessary.

Mrs. Waters has an interest in health care and the elderly. She said, "I want to get involved and to feel needed. I saw a notice for the training in the newspaper and decided this kind of program was what I wanted." Mrs. Waters has cared for elderly relatives and neighbors and spent a great deal of time visiting in nursing homes. She says she derived great pleasure and satisfaction from her involvement.

Mrs. Waters, a 33-year Watertown resident, is also active in St. Patrick's Parish prayer group. A graduate of the Fay School, she was employed by the Boston Health Department before her marriage to the late Joseph Edmund Waters.

Chosen as recipients of the national award are Dr. Dorothy Kelly of the Pediatrics Group at Massachusetts General Hospital; Richard Chapin, former president of Emerson College, who is retiring after five years as president of the Massachusetts society; Dr. Charles D.J. Regan, associate chief of ophthalmology at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary; and Irving Usen of Newton, founder and president of O'Donnell-Usen Fisheries.

Usen is the first lay person in Massachusetts selected as a recipient of the coveted award.

Honorary chairman of the dinner is U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill who is sight saving chairman for Massachusetts. Registrar of Motor Vehicles Richard F. McLaughlin is general chairman and television satirist Dick Flavin is toastmaster.

Special guests will include Governor Edward J. King and Virginia Boyer, head of the National Society to Prevent Blindness.

Irving Usen is one of the area's most successful business executives and is noted throughout the nation for his philanthropic work.

He built his firm from a one man enterprise to this nation's largest independent seafood packaging company. Usen, the first president of the National Fisheries Institute in Washington, was knighted by the King of Denmark for his contribution to the development of that nation's fishing industry. He has been chairman of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, trustee of the New England Aquarium, member of the Board of Governors of Newton-Wellesley Hospital, member of the committee of the Permanent Charity Fund and first president of the Century Club of State of Israel Bonds.

Changing role of hospital is talk

NEWTON — Alvin Becker, M.D., MPH, of Newton, will talk on "The History of Deinstitutionalization and the Significance of 3-Central" on Wednesday, Nov. 25, from noon to 1:30 p.m., in Allen Riddle Hall at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Dr. Becker is chief of psychiatry at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and also associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Tufts University School of Medicine, Department of Psychiatry. The hospital's 3-Central Unit is a new 25-bed psychiatric unit which will open in March.

Dr. Becker will trace the changing role of the hospital in the care of the mentally ill, beginning with the first mental hospital, Pennsylvania Hospital, founded in 1751. He will discuss the development of the public and private asylums and retreats in the early part of the 19th century; the "moral treatment" era; the century-long decline in public institutions; the beginning of the deinstitutionalization process in 1955; and the impact of President Kennedy's message to Congress and the Community Mental Health Centers Act of 1963.

LOWEST FARES TO WEST COAST AND HAWAII
Choosing the lowest fare to Pacific points can be tricky simply because the distances are so vast and there are so many widely separated destinations. The best idea is to consult a travel agent before firming up any plans. As a rule of thumb, it is helpful to know that four based fares to the Orient and Pacific are generally much lower than regular economy fares. Fares to Hawaii have become comparatively less expensive, and visiting the other Hawaiian islands, has become less expensive as well. There is only a small additional fee for visiting other islands in the Hawaiian chain.

Our goal at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham is to get you the most for your travel dollar so whether your next trip is for business or pleasure let us assist in the plans. Rabbi ponders why 'bad things happen to good people'

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

OAK HILL — Last Wednesday night, on the fourth anniversary of his son's death, Rabbi Harold Kushner said that he still can't explain why bad things happen to good people.

His 14-year old son, Aaron, died from old age.

"I can't explain suffering, but I think I know how to deal with it," Kushner told a large auditorium audience.

An extremely rare disease, progeria, which causes rapid aging, took Aaron's life. Although Aaron never grew to be more than 3 feet tall, or heavier than 35 pounds, the spirited teenager was always a joy to be around, and the brightest, most popular student in his class.

"Living with Aaron was a beautiful and enriching experience," Kushner told 150 people at the Solomon Schechter Day School, where the library is dedicated to Aaron. He was a popular and academically successful student at the school.

Kushner recently wrote a book, "Why Bad Things Happen to Good People," which concerns the Kushners' experiences with Aaron and his death. The book, a nationwide bestseller that also sold out last night at the school, also deals with Kushner's philosophy on dealing with life's misfortunes.

Kushner and Aaron's teachers say Aaron was envied and loved by the other students. They went to Aaron with their problems, and he always empathized with them. He was a bright, funny and friendly young man who was always active at the school.

Kushner told the group, that Aaron also had quite a wit, and remembers when his son joked with one of his teachers. "If I don't see you Aaron, have a good summer," said the teacher. Aaron responded that, "If I don't see you, I WILL have a good summer!" Aaron had remarkable spirit, regardless of his difficult illness. "It was an immense privilege to live with him," said Kushner of his son, who would have been 18-years-old last Sunday.

When a person loses someone close, has had a difficult illness, or experienced any other misfortune, he often asks, "Why did God do this to me?" Kushner said. But Kushner believes that God doesn't systematically distribute pain and misfortune. Though some people feel there has to be a reason, Kushner says that they shouldn't always look for answers. "We feel we have to explain everything, to say there is reason for everything," said Kushner.

Focusing on why something happened is useless, said Kushner, who explained that it only leads to people carrying the burden for the rest of their lives. "Don't focus on the past, focus on the future," said Kushner. He explained that his son couldn't choose whether or not he would have progeria, but he could choose how to live with it. "Ask yourself, 'What do I want to be a result of this,'" said Kushner, who explained why people ask why God inflicted pain on them.

Koshner said also that people need a chance to release the anger they feel as the result of a tragedy, otherwise they turn the anger against themselves. "I've seen a lot of people who are depressed by tragedy. They suffer a double, a triple loss," said Kushner, who pointed out that it's not a good time to talk about God.

Garden clubs enjoy international day

NEEDHAM—International fashion, food and flowers were the feature of the annual meeting of the Metropolitan District of state garden club women Nov. 18. More than 100 women gathered at Temple Beth Shalom in Needham for a business meeting, luncheon and program, "Around the World in Eighty Minutes."

Mrs. Richard Gallagher, president of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, greeted the group and Arlyne Fine, of the Beth Shalom Garden Club in Needham, district director, conducted the brief business session.

Several Newton residents were among the 20 members from the 30 garden clubs in the district who modeled costumes of the United States, Europe, Eurasia, the Middle East, Asia and Africa. They included Vera Burtman, Louise Cooper, Mona Kerstein, Barbara Keeter and Ellie Lipsit of Putterham Garden Club, and Anita Bender and Suzanne Selig of Temple Garden Club of Boston.

Alice Sherman of Temple Garden Club and Phyllis Borkow, Marlene Clayton and Denise Rubin of Putterham Garden Club designed flower arrangements to complement the costumes.

The international gourmet luncheon featured breads from the Caribbean, Ireland, England; main courses of China, Mexico, Greece and the Middle East, and dessert cookies from Italy, France and Austria.

DeNucci wins fight on care attendants

NEWTON — Taking his case directly to Gov. Edward J. King, Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci (D, Newton-Waltham), House Chairman of the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee, has succeeded in a year long battle to assure that the personal care attendants (PCAs) of severely disabled persons will receive timely payments.

"This was one of my highest priorities this session," said Rep. DeNucci. "The PCA program is an essential part of our deinstitutionalization effort and one of our most effective strategies for assuring an independent, productive life in the community for our most seriously handicapped citizens."

"I was very distressed knowing that this important program was threatened because PCAs were waiting six, eight, ten weeks and sometimes even longer to be paid. These are low wage employees doing difficult, responsible work and they cannot remain in their jobs if they cannot be assured of a timely payment." Under the new law, through a revolving fund set up for this purpose, each personal care attendant will be paid two weeks after date of service.

Gov. King had vetoed the legislation in July, but Rep. DeNucci spoke personally with the governor, presenting information that he felt the governor did not have at the time of the veto. The governor, after reviewing DeNucci's memorandum, and consulting with the Department of Public Welfare and federal officials, determined Rep. DeNucci was correct and asked the Legislature to override his veto.

"It is especially rewarding that this bill has become law because the alternative to PCAs, institutionalization of the disabled clients, is inhumane and in the long run far costlier than a timely payment plan for attendants," DeNucci added.

Cong. Frank urges GOP support for debate on aging

BOSTON — Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., recently called on Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweiker to halt partisan political activities which threaten to destroy the usefulness of the upcoming White House Conference on Aging.

The Fourth District lawmaker and other members of the House urged Schweiker to pledge his support for open debate, to assure that a wide variety of viewpoints are represented in the conference leadership and general membership, and to allow conference delegates to adopt their own rules of procedure.

Schweiker was asked to meet with House Select Committee on Aging Chairman Claude Pepper, D-Fla., Frank and other Select Committee on Aging members to discuss the Republican National Committee's questioning earlier this year of nearly half the delegates to the WHCOA scheduled to begin Nov. 29 in Washington.

According to published reports of Massachusetts delegates to the conference, the questioners wanted to know the delegates' views on policies of the Reagan Administration.

"The problems of the elderly — poverty, inflation, health care, housing, and energy — have little regard for party allegiance, and a delegate's political views or opinions about the President's policies cannot be allowed to be used as reasons for packing committees or manipulating the outcome of the White House Conference on Aging," Frank said.

Pottery exhibit opens at library

NEWTON — "The Saturday Evening Girls/Paul Revere" pottery is a special glass case exhibit in the Newton Free Library Gallery on view Dec. 1-28. Beverly Bernson and Ricci and Ted Yonge of Newton will discuss the pottery during a reception at the library Tuesday, Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome. During the early nineteenth century, on Saturday evenings, a group of young immigrant women, under the aegis of Mr. and Mrs. James Storrow, would meet in a library in the North End to hear stories and to improve their English. The Storrows' aim, also, was "to develop a happy, healthy, wage earning occupation" for the young school girls, and arranged for them to learn skills, including crafts. The group ultimately included several hundred members and adopted the name, "The Saturday Evening Girls." Of these, a small group of not more than a dozen began to make and sell pottery. They signed it SEG or Paul Revere Pottery.

The pottery the Saturday Evening Girls made was called kitchenware and was used daily. While much of the pottery was ochre, olive green or deep blue, the women made many pieces that were white with beautiful colored borders decorated with plants and animals in the style of Dedham pottery. The SEG pottery, however, was much lighter in weight and felt more like bisque than Dedham pottery.

Pieces in the library exhibit include salad, fruit, nut, and marmalade bowls as well as teapots, eggcups, plates and vases. The pottery was made through the 1940's.

Main library hours are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; Saturday 9-5, and Sunday 1-4.

The library will be closed Christmas and New Year's Day. For more information call 552-7145.

Landmark Smoker Study:

Merit Takes Taste Honors.

Former higher tar smokers acclaim MERIT "Best-tasting low tar I've tried."

The most rigorous MERIT research to date has just been completed.

Result: MERIT smokers confirm taste a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar cigarettes.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers are glad they switched from higher tar cigarettes. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Beats Toughest Competitors.

In the second part of this study, new tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

EMass girls' soccer semi-finals

Wellesley shocks No.1 Tigers

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

For Newton North coach Barry Howland, there must have been a feeling of déjà vu. Seven straight years his girls' soccer team has walked away with Suburban League titles. Two years in a row the Tigers have been the No.1 seed in the EMass Division I Tournament. But once again, Howland's season has ended without a state championship trophy in hand.

Wellesley dashed Newton North's hopes for 1981, hanging a crushing 3-1 defeat on the Tigers in the EMass semi-finals Thursday at the Natick High Field. Thus the No.1 team has again fallen by the wayside and Wellesley, which came into the tourney rated a lowly 12th, moves into the finals.

Howland had said in a pre-tournament interview that the only thing that could stop the Tigers this year would be themselves. He amended that statement after Thursday's defeat. "Well, we did have some people who were sick. Joanne Rossetti couldn't play and Debbie Quinn was in there despite being very ill with the flu. But I'm not using that as an excuse. Wellesley played a solid game and simply took it away from us in the second half. We started quickly just as we wanted to, but Wellesley came back."

Newton's strategy throughout the tournament has been to take an early lead and then sit back and place the pressure on the opposition. The Tigers did that again Thursday when Tricia Olivetto knocked in a rebound at the 12:45 mark of the first period. Quinn blasted the original shot from the right corner, Wellesley goalie Diane Alfaro made the save, but Olivetto was there to pounce on the loose ball and just slip it under Alfaro.

The goal had come just seconds after Wellesley's Susan Burzillo struck the cross-bar from 10 yards. "We weren't playing our game at that point," said Wellesley coach Dick Heller. "That was a perfect illustration. We hit the cross-bar and then just kicked the ball wildly with no purpose in mind. Newton came right down the field and scored."

But that would be one of Newton's final opportunities. After a scoreless second period, the Red Raiders came out and dominated the entire second half. According to Heller, it was just a matter of keeping to one's own style. "We felt we had to control the ball and not let Newton dominate us," he said. "Once we did that, everything turned to our advantage."

Wellesley, which was 12-2-2 in the Bay State League this season, tied the game early in the third stanza when Charmaine Twigg booted the ball off a Newton fullback and into the net.

The Raiders took a lead two minutes into the fourth quarter and this time it was no fluke. Bridgett Duffey picked up a loose rebound after Summers had made a save on a corner kick and slapped it home.

With 8:12 left in the game, Wellesley wrapped it up. Again a corner kick, this one by Shelly Rodney, initiated the play. Summers made the save on Rodney, stopped Duffey's rebound try, but had no answer when Duffey again got the ball for a third shot.

Newton tops field in Falmouth race

The Newton Distance Club (also known as the Newton North boys' cross country) won first place in the Falmouth Perrier Track Club Mass. Invitational cross country meet at Franklin Park on Saturday.

This meet pitted the top runners and teams in the state against each other. Only teams that finished in the top three of their division or individuals that finished in the top five were invited. It resulted in a highly competitive 220-runner field.

In the overall finish, South Weymouth's Chris Gorman was first in 14:52, a record over the 3.0-mile Franklin Park course.

Paul Partridge was the top finisher for Newton. The senior at Newton North High finished eighth overall in 15:39, but more importantly placed fifth in the team. Newton finished with 112 points, while Blackstone-Millville was second in 122.

Tom Carleo was the second Newton runner with Cam Lang finished third for the Newton Club. George Fulk and Paul Passavant rounded out the top five finishers for Newton.

Newton stops losing streak

The Newton PeeWee A team won their first game in six outings by defeating Malden, 6-1, in Middlesex Youth Hockey League Action at the Burlington Ice Palace on Sunday.

Newton exploded for four goals in the first eight minutes of the game to put the game away early. Craig McGray, Steve Silk, Doug Proia and Craig Palli scored the early goals for Newton. Proia and David Mann scored later in the contest for Newton.

The Pee Wee A's tied Holliston, 1-1, on Friday. Steve Silk scored an unassisted for Newton in the first period. The win and the tie give Newton a 3-6-1 record.

Former area stars

Eric DiMartino (L) and Burt White were members of the 1981 Ohio Wesleyan football team, which finished 4-5. DiMartino is a former linebacker for Newton North while White played at Brookline High. DiMartino led his club in tackles and was named All-Ohio Athletic Conference.

Air game rocks Bentley, 27-3

Quarterback Mark Guenette and wide receiver Paul Fournier combined for three touchdowns Sunday in an aerial show of 212 yards as Worcester State ended Bentley's football season with a convincing 27-3 victory at Worcester.

The Falcons, who finished with a best-ever 7-3 mark, were simply overpowered by Worcester, which is 10-0 this year and has now won 17 straight games.

Guenette's final stats showed 12 completions in 21 attempts for four TDs. Fournier caught scoring strikes of 14, two and 28 yards while Ian Nickerson hauled in a touchdown from 41 yards.

Worcester State took a 7-0 lead early in the second period with a 15-play, 86-yard march. Three major penalties for roughing the kicker, face-masking and pass interference kept the drive alive. Guenette capped it with a 14-yard pass to Fournier. Brian Snow added the conversion and Worcester was off and running.

The Falcons responded with their only drive of the day, moving from their own 25 to the Worcester 12. But they were forced to settle for a 29-yard Lee Alper field goal.

Worcester State then went back to the air, advancing the football 57 yards in nine plays. The final completion of two yards went to Fournier for the score.

Dave Ginisi got Worcester the ball back shortly after when he intercepted a Brian Hauser aerial. This time Worcester needed only three plays to travel 44 yards, with the final one being a 41-yard bomb to Nickerson.

That made it 20-3 and for all intents and purposes, the game was over. Worcester added one more TD to complete the romp.

Hauser ended his last day as the Bentley QB with nine completions in 15 attempts for 86 yards. Bentley totaled only 150 yards of offense.

Tigers' Connolly exits on top

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Joe Connolly made the statement almost matter-of-factly, without so much as a hint of conceit. "Why am I stepping down?" said the Newton North boys' cross-country coach in response to word of his retirement. "Because where do I go from here? What else can I attain? In all honesty, I feel I've reached the top in this sport and it's time to move on to something different."

For Connolly, who began in Newton in 1972, that level of excellence for the past four years has been closer to perfection. The record during that time shows four consecutive state titles, a 28-3 dual meet mark, and 18 straight victories. The last defeat was to North Quincy (1979) in a meet where Connolly rested his starters and admitted that he miscalculated. "I was getting them ready for the state meet," says Joe today. "And I thought North Quincy would be a soft touch. Turns out they ran the best race of their lives and killed us. But we still won the states anyway, so it didn't matter."

That's been one of the minor transgressions for Connolly and the Tigers, however. In 1981, they were 7-0 and Division I champs. The only reason they didn't win the All-State meet is because, in the infinite wisdom of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA), there wasn't one.

"The MIAA decided to do away with the All-State meet this year because they felt it was too difficult for some schools to get their players to the meet," said Connolly. "It's just another effect of Proposition 2½. They were afraid some schools could afford the transportation costs and some couldn't. So they figured, just forget the whole thing. What they failed to realize was that there are only seven players on a cross-country team and all you need is one station wagon for transportation."

The Tigers will still have the opportunity to win an 'unofficial' state championship when they compete in the Perrier Falmouth Track Club Invitational, this weekend in Falmouth. The meet will feature the top three schools from every division in Massachusetts. The MIAA has given its go-ahead to run the meet without reprisal to the schools involved, but there are some stipulations. The players can not wear their school uniforms and the coaches can not coach or provide transportation.

Nonetheless, the meet should once again prove what everyone in cross-country circles already knows - Newton North is No.1. How that success has been achieved is the burning question.

"It's a cliché, I know, but success breeds success," explains Connolly. "Once you begin winning, the kids become encouraged and want to join. Lots of my kids are brothers of people who ran for me before."

Connolly says he has also made it a practice to recruit students. In other words, invite the youngster who doesn't look like an athlete to come out for the team. Give him a jersey in his early years and watch him develop. "Many times, that lanky sophomore who looks like nothing turns into your top runner three years later," says Joe.

That's how Connolly built up the program from 10 boys in his first year to 35 this season. It has given him the kind of depth which allows the Tigers to wear down opponents, such as the Waltham girls have done to go undefeated.

"Our strategy is the same as theirs," says Joe. "Except we've been doing it longer. But we like to start quickly and then get together in a pack. The way I figure it, even if one guy falls off, we still have five others who can do the job."

Heading Newton North this year have been co-captains Paul Partridge and George Fulk. Partridge has been Newton's top runner, a consistent point-getter in every meet. "He maintains a strong pace and never lets up," says Connolly.

Fulk is cut from the same mold. Newton's No.2 runner, he has beaten Partridge on occasion and has been very tough in the big meets.

The Tigers' most improved runner was Tom Carleo, who moved from the No.6 spot to No.3 in one season. Also consistent point-getters were Cam Laing, Paul Passavant, Dave Kagan and Ted Burke.

So with four crowns to his credit, Connolly is walking away. But he isn't quitting coaching. He wants to find a job in tennis and perhaps build a team in that sport to the same euphoric heights. "Wouldn't it be nice to win state championships in two different sports," he smiled. "I don't think too many people have done that."

Despite the enormous success, the Tigers have always run in the shadow of more publicized sports like football and soccer. Especially football. Does it bother them?

"It does affect us," says Connolly. "I can't deny that. But we understand the reasons for it. And I can assure you that we have no resentment for the football team and the publicity they get. The great thing about Newton is the unbelievable camaraderie between Norm Wa

Football Ratings

Hawks move to second spot

For the first time all season, Waltham High (8-0) has moved into second place in the Division I football ratings as a result of its 7-6 victory over Newton North last Saturday.

Newton North (7-1), which sat in the second spot most of the season, has dropped to third position with Brockton (8-1) fourth and Norwood (7-1) fifth.

Still in the top spot and all but assured of a Super Bowl is Walpole (9-0). Coach John Lee's club needs only to defeat Framingham North on Thanksgiving Day to make the Bowl.

Waltham would be Walpole's opponent on Dec. 5 if the Hawks can get by Brockton. If not, Waltham, Newton North and Brockton will all be scrambling for that second berth.

Girl goes to court so she can play with the boys

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A girl who wanted to play basketball on the sixth grade boys team at a suburban Chicago junior high school is pursuing an important sex discrimination case all the way to the Supreme Court.

Battling the long odds against a high court move to review her case is 4-foot-11 Karen O'Connor, whose lawyer is urging the justices to decide whether school boards may have "separate but equal" athletic teams for boys and girls in contact sports.

It all started in August 1980, when Karen's father, Joseph O'Connor, asked that she be permitted to try out for the boys' basketball team. At the time, she was an 11-year-old sixth grader at MacArthur Junior High School in Prospect Heights School District No. 23.

Her abilities later prompted a federal appeals court to note, "Karen is a good athlete; a professional basketball coach who observed her play rated her ability as equal to or better than a female high school sophomore and equal to that of a male eighth-grade player."

The school is a part of an athletic association of six junior highs, and conference rules require separate teams for boys and girls in contact sports, including basketball.

By October 1980, the school board rejected the request and suggested she try out for the girls' team.

Represented by her parents, Karen filed suit. A federal judge ruled in her favor, finding the separation violated her fundamental "right to develop."

But the board convinced the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago to block the ruling. Her parents then asked Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens to allow implementation of the district judge's decision.

Stevens declined. "Without a gender-based classification in competitive contact sports, there would be a substantial risk that boys would dominate the girls' programs," he said.

So Karen was not allowed to try out for the boys' team, and she decided not to play on the girls' team.

All-sports conference dimmed by Pitt entering the Big East

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — People like Joe Paterno and Ernie Casale spent a lot of time, effort and money over the past year or so trying to bring together Eastern schools for an all-sports conference that was sorely needed.

With tightening budgets, increases in athletic programs for women due to the federal mandates of Title IX, skyrocketing travel costs and the loss of prestige in the major revenue producing sport — football — to other areas of the country, the Eastern League sounded like a wonderful idea.

When Pittsburgh athletic director Cas Myslinski decided to sit in on one of the many organizational meetings at a Philadelphia hotel last July, the conference looked as certain as finding a football game within 100 miles of your house on a Saturday afternoon in the fall.

"Pitt has been very active in making things happen," Paterno told a group of reporters last month at a State College hotel. "They are excited about the possibility of an Eastern conference."

"Pitt attended every meeting," said Casale, the athletic director at Temple. "We thought they were going to be a full conference concept."

But all the time and planning went out the window Wednesday when the Pitt administration announced the university would join the Big East for three years beginning with the 1982-83 school year.

This kills the Eastern League before it could get off the ground. The defection of Pitt, with its nationally known football program and big-city exposure, would have put the viability of a new all-sports conference on the critical list.

"This is a shock," said Casale. "We knew the Big East was courting them, but we were under the impression that Pitt had turned them down."

It may have, but the Big East asked again earlier this week and Pitt didn't take long to accept. Jack Freeman, the university's senior vice chancellor, said he felt the move was "a step up in the levels of competition as well as in financial and recruitment considerations."

The news was met with disappointment by Paterno, whose university may have had the most to lose in the new league because of its highly successful and financially lucrative football program.

"Pitt has to do what it thinks is best for its program," he said. "It's a shame that we've lost the opportunity for something that the East has never had. It had tremendous overall potential and possibilities."

"I felt the all-sports conference was the right thing for the right time. It was something whose time had come. We were willing to make some sacrifices and some contributions from our football program to benefit the entire east. Obviously, there were those in the East who did not want to be a part of that."

As it turned out, the Big East, which has emerged from an embryo into one of the best basketball conferences in the nation in four years, turned out to be the cook that spoiled the Eastern Conference broth.

For months, Penn State, Pitt, Temple, West Virginia and Rutgers had agreed in principle to an all-sports conference but Syracuse and Boston College — both members of the Big East — had held out. Rumors flew that Paterno and Big East commissioner Dave Gavitt were taking turns twisting the arms of the two schools.

"People asked why Syracuse and BC hadn't joined and what else could I say?" Paterno had said. "It looked as if they were more interested in basketball than football."

But Syracuse and Boston College stayed — and Pitt joined — because of the money-making potential of the Big East for basketball. Television contracts this season will bring in $1.8 million and the league has signed a $1 million contract with Madison Square Garden for the league playoffs starting in 1983.

With Pitt already raking in millions from its football program, which will continue to play as an independent, the Big East appeared to be to the benefit of the Panthers in addition to helping their recruiting for basketball while offering championships in more than a dozen men's and women's sports.

The question of revenue sharing also stalled the Eastern league. Casale, a mathematics professor, had spent long hours trying to come to an agreeable formula on how the "haves" of the proposed conference — Penn State and Pitt — would split revenue with the "have-nots."

But the idea is dead. Penn State will continue to function well because of its football program. Temple, West Virginia and Rutgers will continue to struggle for national recognition on the football field.

Freeman said the Panthers' move into the Big East did not mean they were dismissing the idea of an Eastern League, but rather suggested, "that the time for the Eastern conference appears not to have arrived."

Waiting for another time for the Eastern Conference to arrive probably will be fruitless.

South's Cooper featured in USTA national tourney

Peter Cooper of Newton will be performing with some of the top tennis talent in the country starting Wednesday, Nov. 25th, in the United States Tennis Association's Boys' 16 and under Indoor National Championships at the Longfellow Tennis Club in Wayland.

This tournament will feature 128 of the top young players in the country, including Pat McEnroe, the brother of present-day star John McEnroe. Jimmy Connors and Dick Stockton are also present-day stars that have played in the Nationals.

"This has been a breeding ground for some of the top tennis players in the pro-circuit," said Rick Sharton, who coaches Cooper. "It is the first time New England has hosted a national tournament and people are coming from all over the country."

"Our club (the Longfellow Tennis Club) got the tournament," said Sharton, "because the club that has held it for the past two years didn't want to do it this year. We had been interested in a national tournament for quite a while and we got it."

The tournament's first match is scheduled to start at 8:30 a.m. on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving.

ing and run through the holiday weekend with the finals being held on Sunday. Families and the players will stay at the houses of local players or hotels. A banquet will be held Friday night.

As far as Cooper is concerned, he has gone to Chicago and Texas to play in tournaments and having one this close to home makes it special. The 16-year old junior at Newton South High played on the tennis team as a sophomore and was the number two singles player.

"Peter is one of the top seeded young players in New England," said Sharton. "That's how he was selected in the tournament. His high ranking in this section allowed him to be selected by the Junior Tennis Council."

"It's still unknown how far Peter can go," said Sharton, who has been coaching Peter along with Laury Hammel for the past three years. "It's a matter of maturity and dedication. He has an excellent ground stroke and a good two-handed back hand."

"Peter's best tennis is still ahead of him," continued Sharton. "He's only 16 and he can improve greatly in the next two years. Tim Mayotte of Springfield was the 60th rank player in the country at age 16 and at 18, he was the top ranked. Peter can improve also."

Cooper himself has taken a wait and see attitude before discussing his future in tennis.

"It's hard to tell right now," said Cooper. "I'll just go into the tournament and see how things go. I want to improve my mental skills so I can play better under pressure and get some work on my conditioning."

Cooper, of 39 Donna Road in Newton, is the son of Dr. Saul and Louise Cooper.

Similar tournaments will be held the same week for boys and girls in each junior age group at various sites around the country. They are part of an organized system of competition, which brings the best players from each part of the country together periodically throughout the year.

There will seating for 300 people at the Longfellow Tennis Club for the tournament. The proceeds from various events and one half of all tournament admission fees will be given to Oxfam International, an agency which works towards ending world hunger.

Anyone interested in more information concerning the tournament can call 358-7355 or 890-4542.

scored 107 points for the second place spot, while Northern Central of Illinois was first with 89 points.

George Patriarca led all Brandeis runners in the National Championships by placing sixth in 25:39. John Bannish was 28th in 26:10 for Brandeis. Ed Connor placed 31st in 26:12 and teammate Misa Fossas was 46th in 26:19 for the Judges.

Waltham sophomore Ed McCarthy was 57th in 26:36 and freshman Mark Beeman was 67th in 26:44.

The race was run in two inches of snow and a wind chill factor of zero degrees. It was the eighth top 10 finish in the last 10 years for Brandeis.

Pre-season consensus

Top spot goes to Tar Heels in UPI's poll

By Fred Lief
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The road to the NCAA championship may well begin along Tobacco Road.

North Carolina, one of the kingpins of college basketball, has been named the No. 1 team in preseason balloting by UPI's Board of Coaches.

The Tar Heels, who lost to Indiana 63-50 in last season's championship game, are in strong position to at long last provide Coach Dean Smith with that elusive NCAA title.

Anchored by an imposing front line and a gifted freshman class, North Carolina was awarded 20 first-place votes and 574 total points by the 42-member panel of coaches.

UCLA was a tight second with 11 first-place votes and 556 points followed by No. 3 Kentucky (four first-place, 521 points), No. 4 Louisville (three first-place votes, 409 points) and No. 5 Georgetown (three first-place votes, 399 points).

The rest of the Top 10 is: No. 6 Virginia (one first-place vote, 293 points), No. 7 Wichita State (285), No. 8 Iowa (255), No. 9 DePaul (247) and No. 10 Minnesota (191).

Smith enters his 20th season at North Carolina. One of the game's most innovative and respected coaches, he has won 20 or more games 11 straight years and been to the Final Four six times. But the NCAA crown has never been his.

The Tar Heels, although losing forward Al Wood through graduation, come back with two tough big men in James Worthy and Sam Perkins and an able point guard in Jimmy Black. And Michael Jordan, one of the most ballyhooed freshman in the country, will strengthen an already outstanding team.

Completing the Top 20 is: No. 11

Indiana, No. 12 Tulsa, No. 13 Georgia, No. 14 Wake Forest, No. 15 Missouri, No. 16 San Francisco, No. 17 Alabama-Birmingham, No. 18 Louisiana State, No. 19 Arkansas and No. 20 Nevada-Las Vegas.

Balloting was based on 15 points for a first-place vote, 14 for second place, 13 for third, etc.

UCLA, under new coach Larry Farmer, has one the nation's best backcourts in Rod Foster and Michael Holton and extraordinary depth at forward. And there is now height in the middle with 7-foot recruit Stuart Gray.

Coach Joe Hall at Kentucky also has exceptional depth. Sam Bowie is recovering from a fractured leg but there is also 6-11 Melvin Turpin, Dirk Minniefield, Jim Master, Derrick Hord and Charles Hurt. Kentucky's second five would roll through most leagues.

Louisville won 19-of-20 games in one run last season. This time all five starters — led by Derrick Smith — are back and are complemented by freshmen Mill Wagner and Manuel Forrest.

Georgetown, the jewel of eastern basketball this year, landed the top freshman in 7-0 Patrick Ewing. The Hoyas also return with Eric "Sleepy" Floyd and a disciplined floor game directed by Coach John Thompson.

Virginia loses Jeff Lamp but is given another life with Player of the Year Ralph Sampson vetoing the pros; Wichita State continues its basketball ascendancy with forwards Cliff Livingston and Antoine Carr; Iowa scored in the recruiting sweepstakes and returns with Ken Arnold and Kevin Boyle; DePaul is without Mark Aguirre but Terry Cummings and Skip Dillard should make Coach Ray Meyer's 40th season worthwhile; and Minnesota may come of age with 7-2 Randy Bruer and swingman Trent Tucker.

'Sleepy' Floyd is Hoya's lead gun

By Don Cronin
UPI Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Either Eric Floyd was under-recruited three years ago or he's one of the all-time over-achievers in college basketball.

Coming out of high school, Floyd was wanted by almost no one. Maryland had taken his running mate, Jon Robinson, the year before, but Floyd went wanting.

Georgetown Coach John Thompson, frantic for a guard who could shoot, journeyed to Gastonia, N.C., and watched Floyd in a pickup game at the local recreation center.

"We had wanted Kenny Matthews (who went to North Carolina State) the year before and didn't get him, so we were really looking everywhere for a shooting guard," said Thompson. "It didn't take me long to learn to like Eric. And, he's done nothing but get better since he came to Georgetown."

As a freshman, Floyd joined a veteran-studded team that included two players who would go to the NBA — John Duren to the Utah Jazz and Craig Shelton to the Atlanta Hawks.

"That was good experience for me, coming in and getting to play a lot with people who had been around and who were solid players and played the way Coach Thompson demands," said Floyd, a 6-3 guard.

"Now, we have some excellent freshmen who will play a lot and I can identify with their problems, the adjustments they're having to make. As a senior, I'm part of the group that is supposed to lead, but my leading will be through doing things the way Coach Thompson wants and trying to set an example of the type of effort we need."

Having more than lived up to Thompson's hopes, Floyd begins his fourth year at Georgetown as perhaps the most over-looked veteran in the country.

Any Hoya fan will quickly tell you about the trio of blue-chip freshmen or Thompson, their 6-10, 300-pound coach. The freshmen include 7-foot Patrick Ewing from Cambridge, Mass., the most-highly sought big man in the country last spring, and two other high school All-Americans who chose to stay in Washington for college — 6-7 Anthony Jones and 6-7 William Martin.

But Floyd, a starter since he set foot on campus, already owns the school scoring record — 1,685 points. His trademark, a soft jump shot anywhere out to 25 feet, helped him add the single-season record last year when he tossed in 607 points leading the Hoyas to their fourth-consecutive 20-win year.

"Eric can be his own worst enemy, but he's getting better with maturity," said Thompson. "Last year, after he hit all but two or three shots one night, he told a reporter he would some night have a perfect-shooting game."

"That was the worst thing he could have said. After that, if he hit 10 of 12 shots, it wasn't good enough. He wasn't perfect."

In addition to averaging 19 points last year, Floyd tied for the team lead averaging 4.2 rebounds, despite being the Hoyas' shortest starter most of the season.

With the addition of Ewing, Jones and Martin and the return of all but two players off last year's 20-12 team, Floyd figures to have fewer duties this year. Thompson sees that as a plus, both for the Hoyas and Floyd.

"Eric will be an even better player within our team concept this year," said Thompson. "Last year, when we saw a zone defense, he was the guy who had to take the outside shot. Sometimes, he forced himself to shoot and forced his shots."

"He'll be better this year, doing only what he does best. I think the biggest difference will be his improved defense."

Thompson, however, belies his words. Floyd and Thompson were invited to the Playboy magazine pre-season get-together in Lake Geneva, Wis., early this fall.

Given the run of the resort, the players managed to take their eyes off the scenery once in awhile and Floyd joined Kentucky's Sam Bowie on the skeet range.

"For two guys who had never had a shotgun in their hands, they were amazing," said Thompson. "Eric was just what you'd expect — a natural shooter."

Waste site 'good' for Newton Bewick urges establishment of dump

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer
NEWTON — Calling the safe disposal of hazardous waste the most "serious environmental problem in the Commonwealth," State Secretary of Environmental Affairs John Bewick last week suggested that local residents consider welcoming a hazardous waste treatment facility in Newton.

Bewick, a Newton resident, said he knew of no plans for a facility in the city, but stressed it is critical that treatment facilities be built in the state. He said a facility would be "a good neighbor" and he would welcome it without hesitation.

"It is no more dangerous than any other industry in the city," said Bewick, noting the potential tax benefits for a community that had a hazardous waste treatment facility.

"The technology has been demonstrated for over a decade in parts of Europe for treating waste," Bewick told about 30 residents at the League of Women Voters' sponsored program on hazardous waste at the First Baptist Church.

"I think waste can be treated," he said. "We don't have to have a Love Canal anymore." Hazardous wastes are toxic chemicals and other waste that pose a public health hazard. The waste is primarily generated by private industry.

"My commitment to the public is to see that any facility that is built will protect the public health and safety," Bewick said after touting a model facility in Europe.

A number of cities and towns have adamantly opposed the construction of a hazardous waste treatment facility. The health pro-technology and there is a better way to go."

The need for public awareness and education regarding hazardous waste is vital if treatment facilities are going to be accepted, Bewick said, adding that the state is planning on launching an education campaign on hazardous waste and treatment facilities to do "away with misapprehensions."

Bewick said that because of the high cost of hazardous waste disposal a financial incentive has been created for illegal dumping. He estimated that it cost about $50 to legally dispose of most hazardous waste, but can be illegally dumped for approximately $10.

LWV cites waste fears for community

NEWTON — The Newton League of Women Voters reports that the potential for a hazardous waste disposal problem in the city does exist.

City officials may downplay a potential hazardous waste problem but in a four-page report on hazardous waste a League of Women Voters study group found that both the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) and the local coordinator on hazardous waste are not systematically inspecting and monitoring generators, transporters, and treatment, storage and disposal facilities as required. The DEQE has only three inspectors that must cover 95 cities and towns.

Furthermore the League reported that a number of brush fires in Newton caused by chemical waste have been reported to state agencies including latex dumped into the Charles River, a PVC spillage, and an oil leak.

The group also said that past dumping of hazardous waste materials at Pine Street and Rumford Avenue have not been thoroughly inspected and could be potential hazards.

Gasoline and oil shipments storage are probably the greatest potential hazard in Newton, according to City Health Department Hazardous Waste Coordinator Paul Moan.

The danger of contamination and seepage from underground fuel storage tanks is specifically cited in the report. The life span of underground fuel storage tanks is about 30 years.

Contributing to the league report were: Eleanor Blumberg, Terri Cohen, Linda Morrison, Mary Schneider, Joyce Smith and Ann Grantham.

'The choice is to take our heads out of the sand and deal with the issue or continue as we have for the past 100 years with indiscriminate dumping.'

blems created by hazardous waste sites in Woburn and Love Canal, New York, have received national attention.

Bewick said the public uproar against proposed treatment facilities has made it "virtually impossible to solve the problem."

"If every city and town reacts that way the problem will never be solved," he noted.

"The choice is to take our heads out of the sand and deal with the issue or continue as we have in the past 100 years with indiscriminate dumping," he said. "There are companies. There is the

With hazardous waste facilities in the state, Bewick said the cost of disposal will be reduced considerably. Much of the hazardous waste disposal cost is due to steep charges for transporting the waste to facilities out of state.

Four Massachusetts communities (Ashland, Woburn, Tyngsboro, and Dartmouth) are among the 114 cities and towns nationwide eligible to receive federal aid for cleanup of hazardous waste sites.

Bewick said that 23 hazardous waste sites have been cleaned up in the state at a cost of more than $5 million.

Mayor Mann receives copy of Homestead history book

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann was recently presented with a copy of Dorothy Bates' history of the Jackson Homestead, from its inception to the present. Making the presentation was Duschka Scott, Curator of the Homestead, and Esther Steinberg, Chairman of the Jackson Homestead Board of Trustees.

Mann stated that "the Jackson Homestead is an important part of our city resources. I am pleased that such an excellent history of the Homestead has been written."

Mrs. Francis H. Middendorf gave the Jackson Homestead to the City of Newton in 1949 as a Christmas present to be used for "such educational, health, recreational, welfare, library, or other public purposes..." Since that time, the Homestead has been the city's living museum, offering a number of different exhibits each year and providing an opportunity for Newton residents to learn about their city's history.

Leaf recycling plan up in smoke

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Aldermen have put attempts to have the city collect leaves for recycling on the backburner.

The Public Facilities Committee voted down two measures last week that would have addressed the $18.50 per ton the city pays to have its leaves hauled to a landfill site in Amesbury.

Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas said the city will pay the firm of SCA more than $36,000 this fiscal year to haul the leaves out of the city. A limited number of leaves are taken to the Rumford Avenue site in West Newton for composting.

The first resolution called for Mayor Theodore Mann to appropriate monies toward leaf recycling. The second measure requested Mann to introduce a compost program in the next fiscal budget.

The city utilizes six vacuum trucks and street sweeping vehicles in a limited attempt to collect leaves. However, Alderman Richard McGrath noted that the vacuum trucks are mostly ineffective and the sweeping vehicles often leave residue on the streets.

McGrath also said the city pays up to three times the amount it should for the leaf collection because of the porous nature of the leaves. SCA weighs the tonnage prior to hauling the rubble to Amesbury.

Thomas, who was unsure about the probability of leaf collecting, said the city neither possesses the equipment nor the manpower to cover the land miles in the city.

"If we're going to get leaf composting on a large scale then we would have to invest in the area," said Thomas. "Last year it was not an option. The money was not there."

Thomas also said the city does not collect any bags that might be filled with leaves because of the uncertainty that the bags might be partially filled with garbage.

Aldermen, however, wondered why the city could not begin a program, similar to the newspaper recycling system, that would clearly identify degradable leaf bags.

Both McGrath and Alderman Rodney Barker, who brought the item to the committee's attention, felt the city could use more imagination in addressing the problem.

"The citizens have already separated the garbage from the leaves yet we put it all in one truck," said McGrath.

"Other communities do it (leaf recycling)," he added. "It seems economically feasible to tell people to rake their leaves into the streets on a certain weekend and the city would use its forces to collect them."

Alderman Paul Coletti said he could only approve the item if residents either through the upcoming population survey or a public hearing came out to support leaf composting on a citywide scale.

Coletti also opposed the idea of having a composting site in his ward and wondered why no business-wise entrepreneur had introduced a leaf composting plan to the city.

McGrath, however, did not think people would have problems with a composting site that was run correctly. "It's a facility that can be clearly run without any problems," he said.

"I would assume that someone would be interested in collecting leaves," said Coletti. "But I don't see anyone anxious to do it. It is laughable for us to attempt it."

Alderman Dominic Taglienti agreed with Coletti, noting he "wouldn't want to get involved with it (leaf collecting)."

Alderman Ernest Dietz was absent.

Advocacy urged for elder programs

WEST NEWTON — The Board of Directors of the West Suburban Elder Services, Inc., (WSES) West Newton, is urging Silver-Haired legislators from West Suburban communities to be advocates for and to endorse programs that can serve the elderly in their legislative districts.

The Silver-haired Legislature, sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Elder Affairs, is a four-day legislative session held at the State House. The delegates are persons 60 or older who have been elected from their legislative districts to debate and approve legislative proposals which are then referred to the General Court. (The General Court has the sole authority for either accepting the programs, revising them or rejecting them.)

WSES seeks endorsements for the following programs:

• A $75 million home care budget, to enable WSES and other home care corporations to continue to serve their current number of clients.

• Adequate funding for state nutrition programs, fuel assistance and Councils on Aging.

• Development of a protective services network to curb elder abuse.

• Legislation to enable cities and towns to regulate condominium conversions.

• A guarantee for a state human services budget.

Susan Sidel, chairman, WSES Board, Wellesley, told the Silver-Haired Legislators: "You have a wonderful opportunity to serve as advocates for the elderly and to let our elected legislators know what legislations is vital for next year."

Those attending the meeting besides Susan Sidel were: Mrs. Margaret Lindsay, vice chairperson of the board; Ruth McBride of Watertown; Pearl and Raymond Rosborough of Belmont; Catherine Howard of Waltham; Charles Chase, Herbert Sobol, Viola Jacobs of Newton.

Directors named

NEWTON — Three local residents have been named associate directors of the Big Gifts campaign for the 1982 Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston (CJP) fund drive.

They are Alvin B. Allen of Chestnut Hill, Theodore I. Libby of Newton, and George D. Levy of Wellesley, formerly of Newton.

"The stature and diverse business backgrounds of these men will provide added vigor to the Big Gifts campaign," said Big Gifts Chairman, Steven Grossman of Chestnut Hill, who announced the appointments.

Woman attacked by man in home

NEWTON — A 33-year-old Newton woman was treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital Monday for injuries she received when an unknown man assaulted her in her Grove St. apartment.

According to police, the woman had arrived home around 4:20 p.m. Monday and approximately 10 minutes later answered a knock at her door.

The woman, whose name police would not release, said when she opened the door, a white male in his twenties told her he was with the apartment building's maintenance crew and needed to do some work inside her apartment at 288 Grove St.

After she let him inside, the woman said the suspect immediately pulled a stocking over his head and began hitting her about the head and face with a screwdriver.

The woman told police she began screaming and that the man knocked her to the floor and hit her in the chest. She said he then tried to carry her into the bedroom, but that she began biting him. At that point, the man fled, the victim told police.

The woman, who may have suffered broken ribs according to police, described the suspect as a white male in his twenties, 5'11" to 6'1" tall with brown hair, a mustache, and wearing faded blue jeans, a blue rain slicker and gloves.

After the suspect fled, the woman called the police. Officers searched the area with negative results and the reported assault and battery is being investigated by the Detective Bureau.

Thieves covet cars in MBTA lots

NEWTON — One car was stolen from an MBTA parking lot and an attempt was made to steal a car from a second MBTA lot Monday.

According to police, a 1977 silver Oldsmobile with a black vinyl top was reported stolen from the Chestnut Hill MBTA parking lot around 10:30 p.m. Monday.

About two hours earlier, thieves were unsuccessful in an attempt to steal a 1980 Buick from the Woodland MBTA lot.

Auburndale Cafe was broken into NEWTON — Although nothing appears missing, thieves apparently broke into the Auburndale Cafe at 277 Auburn St. sometime early Wednesday.

According to police, thieves had knocked out a door to a baking storage area to gain entrance.

Jewelry taken at Dedham St. home

NEWTON — Jewelry was taken from a Dedham St. home sometime Tuesday.

Police said a pane of glass in a rear door had been broken to enter the home sometime prior to 11 p.m.

Fumes affect four family members

NEWTON — Four members of an Evelyn Rd. family, including a five-month old baby, were treated at Newton-Wellesley and released following exposure to gas fumes early Tuesday.

According to police, Robert Hochberg of Evelyn Rd. reported around 7 a.m. the odor of gas in his home. When police arrived, all four members of the family were conscious and were taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital by Chaulk Rescue.

Officers Richard Murphy and George Stolpinski first entered the home and turned off the gas and ventilated the house. According to the two men, all victims were alert and conscious. Found inside were Robert Hochberg, his wife Andrea, and their four-year-old and five-month old sons.

According to reports, the cause of the leak was believed to be a faulty flue on the hot water heater.

Inaugural exercises slated

NEWTON — Plans are being set for the inaugural exercises to be held in Newton City Hall, Friday, Jan. 1, at 2 p.m., when the mayor, and members of the Board of Aldermen and School Committee start their new terms of office.

The public is invited to the exercises and the informal reception that will follow.

A committee of the Friends of Mayor Ted Mann is planning an inaugural ball in honor of the mayor at the Sidney Hill Country Club with the date tentatively set for Saturday night, Jan. 2. The blacktie event will feature dancing, music, and entertainment, it is reported.

Invitations are to be sent to residents throughout the city and to local, state, and national dignitaries who are expected to join in the festivities. The ball is open to the public and those wishing to attend are requested to contact the mayor's office for tickets.

Edward Mandell, Newton businessman and civic leader, is general chairman of the inaugural ball committee.

Newton man finds adventure

A real Marrakech Express

By Gladys Damon
Correspondent

For most Americans who travel to Morocco, their pleasant itinerary usually follows the coastline south of Tangiers, down to Casablanca as far as Marrakech. A few adventurous souls make it beyond to Club Med at Agadir.

But Gary Abramson of Newton went beyond the "Marrakech Express" and into the hotly disputed territory of Western Sahara, where a nasty guerrilla warfare between Morocco and the Algerian-based Polisario Movement has been raging for the past six years. He returned to Newton recently after spending the year in England, France, Spain, Morocco, Algeria and the Western Sahara.

How did he get involved in this obscure part of the world? While studying at the Institute of European Studies in Madrid in 1978 during a semester of his junior year, he learned about the conflict in North Africa. He decided to make it the subject of his academic specialization. From then on, his career reads like a James Bond movie scenario.

Abramson, a 1980 Trinity College graduate, wrote his senior thesis on the subject, "Colonization and Conflict in the Western Sahara," based on the issues of the disputed area. He was awarded a postgraduate Thomas J. Watson Fellowship for his sense of awareness of foreign affairs, which enabled him to study the legal, political, economic and military issues of the conflict over the sovereignty of the Sahara.

During a recent interview, the slender, curly-haired student explained the background. "When Spain pulled out of Spanish Morocco in 1975, the area, which lies along the Atlantic Coast between Morocco and Mauritania, was de-colonized. King Hassan II of Morocco claimed dominion over the territory, which is now called Western Sahara.

However, a movement arose called the Polisario Liberation Front, somewhat analogous to the PLO in making territorial demands. They are backed by neighboring Algeria, which offers sanctuaries, and Libya, which allegedly supplies Soviet-made arms. Six thousand Polisarios are pitted against some 50,000 Moroccan troops who have received their military training in Paris."

The Polisario guerrillas wish to establish their own independence from Morocco and declare its own non-Moroccan rule, which they would call the Sahrawi Democratic Arab Republic (SDAR). King Hassan bitterly opposes this movement and has received support and arms from both the former Giscard d'Estaing government in France and the Carter administration in this country. But his war with the Polisario is now at a stalemate.

Abramson went to London in September, 1980, to do research and establish contacts. The following month, he went to Paris, where he spent the next three months studying archives on the subject and establishing rapport with Polisario contacts.

While in Spain for further research, he learned of the attempted coup against King Juan Carlos last February. He watched the raid on the Spanish Parliament (Cortes) by a dissident group of pro-Franco rightists, on television as it was happening.

He went to Algeria for the first time, in February, at the invitation of Polisario representatives he had met in Paris.

"I was met at the airport in Algiers," he narrated. "I had a visa for a month's visit. We drove down in a Land Rover to Tindouf, the center of the principal camel route, on the border of Algeria, Morocco and the 'liberated' Sahara area. From there, I went on to Morocco."

Newton resident James M. Feldman, has been appointed Associate Chairman for Outreach of the Metropolitan Division of the 1982 Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston (CJP) fund drive.

Through its annual campaign, CJP raises funds to help support some 75 human care agencies locally and overseas. The Metropolitan Division operates fund-raising drives in some 40 local cities and towns throughout greater Boston.

Feldman, a resident of Newton for 17 years, is professor of electrical engineering at Northeastern University. He has been an active member of CJP campaign for many years, serving in several capacities including chairman of the Academia Team, associate chairman of the Metropolitan Division, member of the Project Renewal Committee and liaison from CJP to the New Americans Team. During the 1979-80 academic year, Feldman taught at the University of Tel Aviv.

Active members of Temple Mishkan Tefila, Newton, Feldman and his wife Sara, a professional artist, have two children, Lynn, in her second year at Harvard Business School and Henry, a student at Beaver Country Day School.

David Fisher, son of Norma Fisher of Wayne Road, Newton Center and Matthew Fisher of 115 Perkins St., Jamaica Plain, and Allison Roder, daughter of Naomi Stearns of 56 Fisher Avenue, Newton Highlands recently performed in The Williston Northampton School's production of Thornton Wilder's play, The Skin of Our Teeth.

The play, directed by Richard C. Gregory of the School's Fine Arts Department, was staged in the Boardman Auditorium of Scott Hall on the campus.

Karen L. Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Miller of Bourne St., Auburndale, has been named a President's Fellow at Trinity College.

The Fellows are chosen on the basis of academic achievement and outstanding intellectual competence in their major field of study. Each department selects one senior yearly to represent the major as a President's Fellow.

Miller, a computer coordinate major, received a junior varsity crew letter in her freshman year and varsity swim letters in her sophomore and junior years. She is a 1978 graduate of Newton North High School.

Mary Ellen Gould, Licensed Practical Nurse, has recently been added to the staff at Community Day Care for the Elderly of Brookline.

co, where I spent March and April in Casablanca and Rabat, interviewing individuals about the Western Sahara. I returned again in July, the only civilian on a military air convoy, flying on Royal Air Maroc from Agadir to Al Aoun, former capital of Spanish Morocco. The Moroccans now consider Al Aoun the capital of its Saharan province."

"I went there to find out what the natives in Western Sahara thought of the Moroccan presence in control there. It took me a week to get information. The Polisarios were cryptic about how they are functioning. They are getting diplomatic support and recognition from Algeria and receive their principal financial support and arms from Libya. I saw Moroccan prisoners of war in Tindouf and talked to them."

"The people of this region belong to the Atlas Mountains, from Morocco to Mauritania, have experienced war, famine, drought and decolonization. As a result, they are dispersed and destabilized. In a society where extended family ties have been preserved, there is a kind of civil war. The tribes are split. Families are torn between the pro-Morocco Saharans and the pro-Polisarios in Algeria. They are waiting for the conflict to be settled. They regard the Moroccans as aggressors, imperialists and alien conquerors."

The Polisarios call themselves "the Saharan people" and do not consider themselves Moroccans. The tribes have a different language from Moroccans. As a former Spanish colony, they had historical, political, cultural and economic ties to Spain. Now, they believe, they are entitled to their own boundaries and sovereignty. However, Morocco claims that Western Sahara was Moroccan even before the Spaniards colonized it.

"I found press censorship. I had to read the French newspaper, Le Monde, to find out what was going on in Morocco. Both Algeria and Morocco withhold the news from journalists if it's uncomplimentary to their side. In Algeria they let the foreign press correspondent from Le Monde cover the news, but it's for export only. In Morocco, they are more cautious and erratic toward the press. There is a lack of cordial cooperation. As a result, there are two kinds of Moroccans: those who have contacts with the outside world and thus have an international outlook, and the others who have to depend on the local press and therefore are sold on the Moroccan government's point of view," he said.

Under former President Jimmy Carter, a deal was negotiated to sell 50 warplanes, valued at $235 million, to King Hassan to wage his war against the guerrillas. The deal was bitterly opposed by former Sec. of State Cyrus Vance. Former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N., Andrew Young, encouraged the Western Saharan refugees living in Algeria, to establish their own independent nation, during a rally organized there by the Polisario Front. Young disapproved of Carter's decision to supply arms to Morocco against the Polisarios, which he supported.

"The explosion of violence is draining Morocco's resources in this costly, no-win war," said Abramson. "Spain had phosphate industries there that are now in Moroccan hands, and lie idle, lacking both manpower and world markets. There is a rich fishing area between the Western Sahara coast and the Canary Islands. Everyone fishes there. The Russians now have a fishing treaty with Morocco. Also, catastrophic droughts have ruined Morocco's primarily agricultural economy."

This is an area that may yet turn into another festering guerrilla action for the United States to seek solutions. The issue has

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist. These include: • privately insured loans • FHA/ HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program. To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

A SECRET

We have recently been told (in confidence, of course) that not everyone wants to spend $150,000 on a new condominium—indeed, can even afford to. You know how it is these days.

Anyway, several people have made the trip to Needham to see our townhouses on Denmark Lane, off Maple Street, right in the center and seem to like them—why not? 2 generous bedrooms, fireplace, 2 1/2 baths, covered parking, full basement for $119,000. Make the trip yourself or call A. Clinton Brooks & Co. at 444-0505. P.S. our first customer, an active Real Estate broker, will be moving in soon after the holiday.

Surprising food facts about children's diet

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Milk is the source of more than 20 percent of American children's average daily sugar consumption — compared with 13.8 percent from sweetened drinks such as soft drinks and 11.2 percent from cakes, cookies and pies.

These surprising figures are from a nutrition study made by Karen J. Morgan of the University of Missouri and Prof. Mary E. Zabik of Michigan State University.

Ms. Morgan, who directed the study, is an assistant professor of nutrition who has made many studies of food behavior of school-age children.

The pair found the average daily sugar consumption of 5- to 12-year-olds in the study was the equivalent of two-thirds of a cup of granulated sugar.

Equivalent is the key word. Most people don't realize sugar occurs in differing forms in a lot of food and beverages we don't think of as sweet.

Lactose, for example, is a component of milk and maltose, of corn.

The human body doesn't distinguish among the sugars for energy — it simply converts them to glucose, or blood sugar, Ms. Morgan said at a recent news conference in New York City.

The Morgan-Zabik findings are based on analyses of seven-day food diaries kept by families of 657 randomly selected youngsters in 1977.

Asked how up-to-date and truthful the researchers thought the recordkeeping was, Ms.

Morgan said: "The scientific community considers this to be good information for about 10 years."

"We don't know that it's completely reliable, completely valid, but it's the best we have available," she added.

The children were selected from a group of 2,000 families in the 48 contiguous states and are thought to be representative of than they expected to find.

"They don't really consume gross amounts of food," she said, of the obese youngsters.

She said the problem areas in which nutrients were lacking well at all," Ms. Morgan added. Her comments on teens' eating habits are based on another study not yet published.

She has "nothing profound to offer" other parents, she said. "Try to set an example. You can't force people to eat things."

She said heavy children in the study got considerably more of their calories from protein and fat than from carbohydrates, and slight children consumed significantly fewer calories from protein and fat than their heavier peers.

"It's unfortunate that so many fad diets are pointing the finger at carbohydrates. This and other studies show carbohydrates are not really the culprit," she said.

People would have better control of their weight, she added, if they didn't cut out specific food groups when they diet.

"You should eat a small amount of everything. You can stick to that consumption pattern for years and years and avoid boredom," a factor that often prompts dieters to cheat.

It's a common misconception that obese parents will have obese children, she said, except in cases involving metabolic disorders.

She blames reduced activity more than food consumption.

She disagrees those who say carbohydrate craving is an organic problem.

"I think it is a learned habit, and the only way you can control it is to train yourself. I don't believe pills are the answer."

She said the initial survey of sugar consumption included grant money from a cereal manufacturer but the total sugar nutrition study was done with university funds. The news conference was sponsored by the Chocolate Manufacturers Association, a trade group.

the U.S. population as a whole, she said.

"There are two types of nutritional research," Ms. Morgan added. One is done in a laboratory setting, using rats or guinea pigs in a controlled environment. The other looks at what people really are doing in their daily lives.

Ms. Morgan said about 75 percent of scientists blame childhood obesity on reduced activity rather than eating more than lighter weight youngsters.

Still, she said, the children's overall diets were much better were zinc and vitamin B6 and in some cases, calcium and magnesium.

Teen girls tend to have quite low consumption of iron, calcium, zinc and magnesium, she said, because many don't eat enough food overall.

"Teen boys' nutrition is quite adequate," she added, but "fad diet writers have a flair for getting the attention of teen girls. We as educators have been unsuccessful."

"I'm stepmother to a 14-year-old girl who doesn't seem to listen

Low-cost, low-calorie cutlets

One of the great values of owning a food processor is the ability to make your own fresh chopped meat, free of calorie additives like unwanted fat. The meat grinder is the butcher's favorite place to toss those otherwise worthless lumps of suet trimmed from steaks and chops. Ordinary hamburger can contain as much as 30 percent fat, and inspectors often find examples of ground meat that exceeds even these liberal limits. Why pay meat prices for calories and fat you don't want?

With a food processor, using the steel blade, you can chop lean meat into low-calorie burgers, adding the seasonings along with the meat so they're thoroughly distributed.

With a food processor, you don't have to limit your burger making to beef; you can turn any kind of leaner, less fattening meat or poultry into chopped meat for imaginative cash and calorie saving dishes. One of my favorites is to turn bargain-priced turkey or the less expensive veal stew meat into light and savory "cutlets." The addition of pot cheese or part-skim ricotta (a concentrated form of skim milk) gives these tender cutlets "milk-fed" flavor. The oven-fry technique makes these slimming cutlets taste really fattening!

OVEN 'FRIED' MILK-FED BEGGARMAN'S CUTLETS

1 pound boneless turkey breast (or veal stew meat)

1 cup pot cheese (or part-skim ricotta) quarter-teaspoon ground nutmeg quarter-teaspoon dried grated lemon peel

1 teaspoon salt
pinch of pepper few sprigs of fresh parsley

2 tablespoons minced scallions or chives

5 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

5 tablespoons plain bread crumbs

Preheat the oven to 475 degrees, or highest setting. Spray a large nonstick shallow baking tray or cookie sheet liberally with cooking spray.

Cut the turkey (or veal) into cubes. Combine it with remaining ingredients, except Parmesan and bread crumbs, in a food processor, using the steel blade. Process with on-off motions, until mixture is thoroughly chopped and blended.

Combine Parmesan and bread crumbs on a shallow plate. Shape the mixture into flat patties or "cutlets" and press into the cheese-breadcrumb mixture, coating both sides. Arrange the coated "cutlets" in a single layer on the nonstick pan. Place the pan on the lowest shelf of the oven.

Bake, uncovered, 5 minutes. Turn with a spatula and bake the cutlets 3 to 4 minutes longer.

(Don't overcook.) If desired, serve with lemon wedges or tomato sauce. Makes four servings, 225 calories each with turkey and pot cheese (265 calories per serving with alternative ingredients).

WITHOUT A FOOD PROCESSOR — Substitute raw ground turkey or ground veal ("vealburger") for the meat, and use part-skim ricotta or plain low-fat yogurt in place of pot cheese. Mince the parsley and scallions with a sharp knife, and combine the meat mixture by hand.

POOR MAN'S PARMIGIANA — Follow the cutlet recipe. Bake the cutlets 5 minutes, turn and bake 2 minutes more. Then top each cutlet with a thin half-ounce slice of part-skim pizza cheese. Return to the oven, just until cheese begins to melt. Serve with heated plain tomato sauce which yellow, melon-like gourd. Depending on its size, you're likely to find that you have lots of leftover spaghetti squash on hand. So, today I share my favorite ways to recycle cooked spaghetti squash into other dishes. In fact, you may like these ideas so much, you'll skip the sauce-and-meatballs first-night routine and go right to the reruns! But first you have to cook it. Here's how:

HOW TO COOK SPAGHETTI SQUASH

The easiest way is to fork-puncture the whole squash in several places and put it in the oven at 350 degrees for 1 and one-half hours (approximately, depending on its size). Then, cut it in half, scrape out the seeds and discard. Remove and fluff up the strands; discard the shell. However, I find that spaghetti squash has better flavor and texture if you cut it in half and remove the seeds BEFORE you cook it. Faster, too! Place the squash cut-side-down on a baking tray in a 350-degree oven. Or, put the squash halves in a large steaming kettle over a trivet and steam them. Or, cook them cut-side-down on a plate in a microwave oven. These latter methods allow you to check the texture of the squash periodically and end the cooking when the spaghetti strands are al dente — firm and fresh-tasting, which is my preference. Firm-textured spaghetti squash is definitely preferable for these recipes:

SPAGHETTI SQUASH SALAD

2 cups cold cooked spaghetti squash
1 teaspoon olive or salad oil
1 tablespoon cider or white vinegar optional: 1 tablespoon olive liquid (from green olives)
2 tablespoons minced chives, scallions or onions salt (or garlic salt), pepper, to taste quarter-teaspoon dried oregano or basil

Combine ingredients in a bowl. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours for flavors to blend. Makes four servings, 25 calories each.

SPAGHETTI SQUASH

"KRAUT"

2 cups cold cooked spaghetti squash
3 tablespoons white or cider vinegar
3 tablespoons water
1 teaspoon salt (or to taste)

Combine ingredients in a glass jar. Cover and refrigerate 24 hours or more. For a more sour "kraut," increase the proportion of vinegar. Salt to taste; sodium-watchers can cut back or eliminate the salt, if necessary. Makes four half-cup servings, 15 calories each.

SPAGHETTI SQUASH PRIMAVERA FOR TWO

1 small onion, minced half-cup fat-skimmed chicken broth

1 green bell pepper, seeded, diced

quarter-teaspoon dried oregano (or basil)

2 cups cooked or leftover spaghetti squash

2 vine-ripe tomatoes, peeled, diced

1 cup cubed cooked lean roast beef, chicken or turkey
4 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Spray a nonstick skillet with cooking spray. Spread the onion in a shallow layer. Cook over moderate heat just until onion begins to brown. Add broth, bell pepper and oregano. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients, except cheese. Cook and stir over moderate heat until most of the liquid evaporates. Salt and pepper to taste, and, just before serving, sprinkle with grated cheese. Makes two servings, 280 calories each.

Giving a gift of easy homemade strawberry jam

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Homemade jams may be made throughout the year in small quantities and kept in the freezer until ready to use.

For example, a freezer strawberry jam takes little time to prepare, yet is long in its taste rewards.

Prepare extra jars of jams occasionally to give as gifts for the elderly or at bazaars.

FREEZER STRAWBERRY JAM

1 quart fresh California strawberries
4 cups sugar
¾ cup water
1 package (1½ ounces) powdered fruit pectin

Crush berries completely. Measure 2 cups fruit with juices into bowl. Thoroughly mix in sugar; let stand 10 minutes. Combine water and pectin in saucepan. Bring to boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir pectin mixture into fruit; continue stirring 3 minutes. Ladle quickly into sterilized freezer jars or containers, allowing ½-inch head space. Cover with lids. Let stand at room temperature 24 hours. Store in freezer. If to be used in 2 or 3 weeks, store in refrigerator. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 2½ pints.

PUT UP small quantities of freezer strawberry jam a time.

Hunter's expert tips on field care of venison

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Making venison taste good takes special care on the hunter's part.

Here are tips for deer hunters from Tom McAllister, veteran outdoorsman and outdoors editor of The Oregon Journal.

Hunters need to shoot their game cleanly, and clean it quickly, hanging the carcasses long enough for a protective glaze to form over the meat. Then the carcass should be encased in porous cotton bags designed for protecting the meat in the field.

How game is cared for in the field tells a great deal about hunter's skill and attitude.

It begins in the pre-hunt planning. A small day pack will enable a hunter to carry conveniently all items needed for field care of meat, especially a sharp knife and whetstone.

"I use songs as weapons in my arsenal," he said in an interview. "I'm a talker as well as a singer, but through my songs I get across the story I want to tell."

"Ronald Reagan and his buddies spend more on one meal 'Than you can make in a week diggin coal or haulin steel.'"

Glazer started singing cowboy songs as a kid.

"Don't ask me why. There isn't a cowboy within a thousand miles of the Bronx," where he grew up.

During the depression, an out-of-work musician on a WPA project taught him to play the guitar — either for free or for 25 cents a lesson. That was his only formal musical training.

'An animal carefully stalked and shot with deliberation is most likely to be killed cleanly and without alarm and will make much better meat than an animal that is hot from running...'

A light plastic ground cloth will serve to roll the animal onto while field dressing is done. Cotton meat bags should be big enough to hold half a deer or antelope after it is skinned at the site.

Absorbent paper toweling is especially useful in the hunter's day pack for wiping out the interior cavity of the animal. Nylon cord is handy for helping anchor an animal in place when it is dropped on steep terrain. Roll the animal into position on its back with legs spread and head uphill to gut and skin.

An animal carefully stalked and shot with deliberation is most likely to be killed cleanly and without alarm and will make much better meat than an animal that is hot from running and pumped full of adrenalin.

As soon as it is dressed and skinned, get the carcass or the quarters hung in the shade so the surface of the meat can dry and glaze as the glaze will protect the meat. Then place in meat sacks.

For elk, additional equipment is needed, such as four meat bags instead of two, a meat saw to cut heavy bone and quarter the animal. A small block and tackle for hanging or moving the elk might be helpful.

Elk have thicker hides and more insulating hair, so it is important they be skinned and quartered quickly, even in cold weather. Even in hot weather, game can be cooled out adequately if skinned quickly and hung in the shade. Lower night temperatures will complete the cooling.

On arrival home from the hunt, trim the meat of all fat. The fat in game animals imparts the strong or "gamey" flavor to which some people object. Boning also makes for better packaging and storage when freezing game.

'Labor's Troubador' retires

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For 37 years Joe Glazer sang his labor songs in union halls and American embassies around the world, but when Ronald Reagan was elected, he decided to quit his government job and go out on his own.

Long known as "Labor's Troubador," Glazer decided the biting political satire songs he wrote and sang might be a little too strong for the new administration, and at 63, he decided to take early retirement.

"Ronald Reagan had a farm ... and on that farm he had a Stockman," "chop chop here, chop chop there, everywhere chop chop."

Agency — renamed the International Communications Agency under Reagan.

His job was to explain the American labor movement to various groups around the world — and often he did it in song, often with mixed results — especially during Republican administrations.

Legislators laud bottle legislation

BROOKLINE — Senator Jack Backman (D, Brookline), the original sponsor of the Bottle Bill, praised the action of his Senate colleagues in overriding the Governor's veto of the legislation. "The citizens of Massachusetts have asserted themselves in attempting to solve the problems of our environment," she stated.

"I have sponsored this measure for the last 12 years," Sen. Backman stated. He noted that Governor King had vetoed this legislation once before and that the veto was upheld in the House of Representatives. "This year, however, the public let their legislators know of the strong support for the Bottle Bill and the necessary two-thirds majority was forthcoming in the House and in the Senate," he added.

Backman stated: "Many people agree that the problem of solid waste is becoming the most serious environmental issue in this country because we are running out of open areas in which to dump garbage. Recycling, a process which takes a product and reintroduces it into the production cycle for the production of the same product, is one means we can utilize in this commonwealth to help us conquer the problem of solid waste disposal. Glass bottles alone make up almost 15 percent of our total solid waste disposal."

Representative Susan D. Schur (D-Newton) also expressed delight at the Senate's vote to override Governor King's veto of the bottle bill. Schur was a co-sponsor of the bill this year.

"This vote is the triumphant culmination of almost a decade of work by many people," Schur commented. "Everyone who fought long and hard for this legislation should be commended for their thorough and persistent efforts."

"I am particularly gratified and pleased with the public's strong response on this issue," she said. "For years, opinion polls have shown that a majority of the citizens in the Commonwealth favor a bottle bill, and yet it has consistently been defeated."

"This year, at last, the public interest has won out over special interests. People by the thousands let their legislators know that they will not put up with litter any longer and that they expect their elected officials to do something about the problem. Without the public's support and interest, we would not have had a bottle bill passed this year."

Newton Post 440 group plans Yule flea market

NONANTUM — Wives and friends of the American Legion, Post 440, will hold their annual Christmas flea market on Dec. 6 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The building, at 295 California St., will be filled with tables and booths which will display items to be sold, old and new, at discount prices.

The committee consists of Vie Panaggio, chairperson; Mary Panaggio, Joan Mulcahy, Rose Bianchi, Marie Nolan, Mary Gentile, Barbara Schiller, Lorraine Salvucci, Colette Burkinshaw, Peg DeWolfe, Blanche Rachlin, Ollie Pasquarosa, Jeannette Medaglia, Gill Sampson, Ronnie Steinsky, Virginia Studey, Linda Schiller, Gertrude LaRosee, Mary Marrocco, Phyllis Bryson.

There will be baked goods, white elephant, snack bar, raffles, and Santa Claus for the kids, also beer and wine for the adults. "We would not be able to handle this fair without the help and support of the Legionnaires of Post 440 American Legion," the group said in an announcement.

Mann asks budget action

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore D. Mann in a letter to Sharon Pollard, Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Counties, has urged quick action on the F.Y.'82 Middlesex County budget now before the Senate.

"This is a legislative matter which requires immediate attention," he said. "The serious financial burden caused by this delay compounds the difficulties cities and towns are having in their own fiscal affairs."

The House voted a $25.5 million appropriation in October. The County has operated on a monthly budget equal to one-twelfth the last year's appropriation since July of this year.

As chairman of the Middlesex County Advisory Board, Mann urged all board members to get in touch with their legislators and request speedy relief.

Faculty plans art exhibit

NEWTONVILLE — The faculty of the Newton Arts Center will be exhibiting at the Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Pk., Newtonville, Dec. 6 through 20.

Opening reception will be Sunday, Dec. 6, 4-7 p.m. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9-5 p.m., and Sundays, 2-4 p.m.

The exhibition will represent the various works of 19 faculty members. Visual arts, including painting, drawing, photography, clay, sculpture, and architecture will be depicted.

A gallery forum, "On Collecting," will be conducted by John Arthur, art consultant, curator and author of Realist Drawings and Watercolors. The forum, a lecture discussing collecting, investing, and connoisseurship, is open and free to all.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

Thomas Edison, one of our country's most outstanding inventors, wrote that "The doctor of the future will give no medicine but will interest his patients in the care of the human frame, in diet and in the cause and prevention of diseases." To say that Edison was a visionary thinker would be an understatement and to say that Edison was correct about many of his visions would be an obvious statement of fact. His visions changed America and brought us light, as it were, so it might be well to look at what he had to say about health care. Chiropractors did.

Chiropractors take a natural approach to the restoration and preservation of health. The chiropractic premise is that the cause of disease is due to vertebral subluxations which produce an impingement upon the nerves and interfere with the transmission of vital nerve force. Through proper adjustment we correct these subluxations so that interference is removed and health is restored. I extend to you all my wish for a very Happy Thanksgiving. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment and three evenings a week.

Move away from afternoon sessions

Parents question 'wacky' kindergarten schedules

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It has been called "wacky" and "unfair." In fact, the "split K" (or alternating morning/afternoon kindergarten schedule) is cited as one reason why some parents of kindergarteners opted for private schools this year.

Most kindergarteners in Newton go to class in the morning five days a week for a total of 15 hours. However, in four elementary schools this year, children are attending kindergarten classes on the "split K" schedule.

At Franklin, Horace Mann, Hyde and Cabot, kindergarteners in the morning session attend school five days a week for three hours. Children in the afternoon session attend school only four days a week for 2 1/2 hours a day. There is no school on Tuesday afternoon for kindergarteners in the afternoon session.

Since one teacher handles both morning and afternoon classes, the one afternoon off is scheduled in order to give the teacher a free period for meetings, workshops or conferences with parents.

At mid-year, the "split-k" sessions are switched for one important reason; otherwise, the children in the afternoon session would be getting about six to seven weeks less of school by some parents' calculations.

According to Superintendent Aaron Fink, all kindergartens in Newton were on the morning/afternoon split session when he first came to Newton 13 years ago. "We want to move toward no afternoon kindergartens," he asserted. "We're down to four schools now."

Although a shortage of classroom space is cited as the reason for a split session at both Cabot and Hyde (as a result of the April fire), the School Committee was recently presented with a petition signed by over 200 parents calling for a redress of the "inequality" of the split session kindergarten.

Dorothy Engler, a Cabot parent with a child in the split session kindergarten, recently addressed the School Committee on the issue and handed over the petitions.

As Engler explained it, the petition grew out of a meeting on an unrelated issue which by coincidence was attended by several parents with children in split session classes.

"We began talking about how wacky it (the split session) was," Engler said in an interview.

Then, "just for fun" they began computing the hours and days spent in class for both the morning and afternoon sessions. "We couldn't believe the results," she said.

"I mean we knew there was a discrepancy, but we weren't aware that it was that great," she said.

According to Engler's calculations, a comparison of the in-class time for both morning and afternoon sessions running from January to June, 1982, reveals a difference of 22 days or approximately 107 hours more class time in the morning session which runs from 8:45 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. The afternoon session meets from 12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

'We knew there was a discrepancy but we weren't aware that it was that great.'

The time difference amounts to approximately six to seven weeks of school, Engler told the School Committee recently.

Engler also raised a safety concern of many parents she has talked to over the "isolation" of children walking to and from school at off hours for the afternoon session.

The schedule is also difficult for parents to keep, Engler said, especially working parents. Engler said some parents are placing their kindergartener in private school for one year to avoid the split-schedule.

"We could get to you a list of parents that have opted for private schools in the past and this year simply because of the hassles" of the split schedule, Engler said.

She said she also knows of parents who transferred their children out-of-district to avoid the split schedule.

Superintendent Aaron Fink said he "could feel for the parents" and thought the schedule did create a "hardship." "Frankly I would want it (the morning session) for my kid, too," Fink said. "We're trying to phase that (the split-k) out. I'm going to do everything I possibly can, but we have reduced it to a very small percentage."

Engler, representing other parents, asked the School Committee for "immediate redress" of the inequity for the remainder of the year by hiring a part-time teacher to fill the gap of no school on Tuesdays for children in the afternoon session. This is not intended to be a long-range solution, Engler said.

"We are in no way asking that present teachers in the split-k's increase their hours, for, in effect, they are already more than full-time and have primary responsibility for over 30 children," she stressed.

Claire Karlson, the split-k teacher at Cabot, tends to agree that the work load for split-k teachers is often heavy.

"I don't think there is any parent or teacher who thinks it (the split-k) is the greatest thing in the world," Karlson said.

For the kids, it means that "they are getting less school," she said. For the teacher, "it's a horrendous work load." For example, Karlson said that while K-1 (kindergarten-first grade) teachers handle about 25 students in the morning and then only about 12 first graders when the kindergarteners leave at mid-day, split-k teachers handle a full classroom all day long.

"This year I only have 33, but other years I have had 50 or 55 students altogether," Karlson said.

Neither Fink nor Helen Thomas, who heads the personnel division for the school administration and was formerly principal of Cabot, advocate the appointment of a part-time teacher for Tuesday afternoons.

"I feel that that is not going to be effective because it is itself an interruption," Thomas said. "It is not a solution."

Thomas said Cabot would probably not have the split-k's next year because they would be losing a large number of sixth graders and would have more classroom space.

In the meantime, Engler has asked the School Committee to participate in a kindergarten study group to look at the needs and goals of kindergarteners and possible restructuring of the present kindergarten program. The group, which is also composed of parents, principals and teachers is expected to hold its first meeting at the end of November.

Marcia Mitchell, a newly-elected member of the School Committee who along with Nancy Mann volunteered to represent the School Committee as participants of the kindergarten study group, said she was glad the parents had raised the issue.

"Any parent who has struggled with kindergarteners in a split day has found it a very difficult schedule for a child," Mitchell said.

"I'm very glad that the parents brought it up," she added. "It (the effort to end split k's in the remaining schools) probably would not have been done without their input as quickly as it will be since they have taken the trouble to express their views."

Nancy Mann said, "I think it was a step forward that the superintendent said the aim is to go for all morning kindergartens because I've never heard that expressed before."

Christmas, Hanukkah seasons around the bend

The Christmas and Hanukkah seasons are just around the bend for Newton residents and clubs, schools, churches and temples are offering a wealth of activities this year to bring out the season's best.

Although many events have not been finalized Newton residents will be treated to everything from holiday caroling and fund-raising Christmas tree sales to a special performance of "The Nutcracker" and an old-fashioned tree trimming party for kids.

Just as the calendar page turns to December the Nonantum Multi-Service Center on Silver Lake Ave. will be setting up its annual Nova Scotia Christmas tree sale. The sale begins on Thursday, Dec. 3 with a wide variety of trees. Funds from the sale go to support the center's programs for senior citizens.

On Friday, Dec. 4 McDonald's of Newton hooks up with the Multi-Service Center to sponsor a 12:45 p.m. holiday celebration with Hanukkah and Christmas songs and refreshments.

For Newton residents who want to give their kids a little practice at tree trimming the Jackson Homestead will offer a traditional Dutch St. Nicholas Day on Sunday, Dec. 6 from 2-3 p.m. for children from four to six and from 3:30-4:30 p.m. for kids seven to ten.

The party, which is co-sponsored by the Friends of the Jackson Homestead and Newton Community Schools, will feature tree decorating with traditional Victorian trimmings, followed by refreshments for all. Since enrollment is limited the Homestead requests that those interested call 552-7238 for registration.

For Garden City folks looking for a musical introduction to the holidays a group call The Quadrivium presents a Christmas concert and carol sing-along at The Eliot Church, 474 Centre St.

on Friday, Dec. 4 at 8 p.m. The concert will include medieval, renaissance and traditional music of Christmas as well as a "magnificat" by Johann Pachelbel and an "Appalachian mummies" play staged by Patrick Swanson.

Tickets at the door will cost $4 and student and senior citizens' tickets will be $3.

If "Yiddish music with a jazz beat" is more your style Temple Emeth in Chestnut Hill hosts the "Klezmer Cabaret" featuring the Klezmer Conservatory Band at the Chanukah party in the temple auditorium on Sunday, Dec. 6.

The band, which has played to numerous audiences along the East coast, recreates traditional vocal and instrumental music. The program, which costs $6 for adults and $3 for kids, begins at 7:30 p.m.

Also along the holiday music line, the Boston Ballet will present a special excerpt from "The Nutcracker" at Chestnut Hill Mall from noon to 1 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 5. The performance, which is free of charge, will feature the grand character of the Nutcracker himself.

On the local music scene the Newton South High School Music Department is gearing up for its annual winter concert on Dec. 16 at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. The concert will feature the school's concert band, vocal ensemble, orchestra, jazz ensemble and concert choir.

The show will host a variety of classical, popular and seasonal music and the audience will be invited to join in the traditional "Hallelujah Chorus." A dollar donation is requested for this program.

On tap for the holiday for Newton area senior citizens are two events of note at this time.

For those interested in making some holiday cheer of their own, the Newtonville Senior Drop-In Center in the Newtonville Library on Walnut St. hosts a pine cone wreath-making class on Friday mornings from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

This year the West Suburban Elder Services is coordinating a special project in which people will share their own Christmas dinners with a homebound, elderly person on Christmas day.

Anyone interested in helping out or anyone knowing someone 60 or older who will be alone on Christmas should call Anne Baritz at 969-0170 by Wednesday, Dec. 16. WSES will coordinate the names of people needing a meal and those interested in sharing during the holiday.

Man dies of overdose; police search for trio

NEWTON — Police are searching for three people who left Newton-Wellesley Hospital at mid-day Saturday after taking a 29-year-old man there for treatment of what apparently was a drug overdose.

The man died.

The victim, David M. Ryan, was pronounced dead on arrival at Newton-Wellesley Hospital Saturday at 12:03 p.m. after attempts to revive him were futile, according to police.

Ryan, whose last address was in Brighton, formerly lived in Newton at 21 Adams St.

Medical Examiner George Katsis performed an autopsy on Ryan's body at 10:15 p.m. Saturday. The results of the autopsy are expected in about one week. Police said Ryan possibly died from a self-inflicted drug overdose.

A witness told police the witness was in the parking lot of the hospital where he saw one of three men giving cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to another man in a car. The man and two other people in the car then apparently took the victim, apparently Ryan, into the hospital, reemerged and "took off fast" in their car, police said the witness told them.

Police also said one of the men told hospital personnel he had given Ryan CPR and that Ryan was suffering from a drug overdose. The people who brought Ryan in then left, even though hospital officials told them to wait to identify Ryan, police said.

One of the people who left without identifying himself was described as white, 5 feet 7, in his early 30s, with shoulder-length hair in an Afro style. He was wearing blue jeans and a red tee shirt with a U.S. Marines emblem on it.

The second man also was white, with shoulder-length brown hair pushed back and was wearing an Army fatigue jacket.

The third man was described only as having long hair under a safari hat. He also was wearing an Army jacket and blue jeans.

Sgt. Arthur Fryer is commanding the investigation into the incident.
